Terrace crushes opponents! Result? Best team in Chuck Edelbrock, senior, John Krueger, and John Pennington, juniors, practice passes.

As a tough defensive line bulls ahead, the offensive line attempts to hold while Jeff Voogd strains to pass in a practice game.

Before thundering down the field during warm-up wind sprints, the coaches check the stance of each player for proper balance. A call is given and the lines lumber down-field to repeat the check and run again.

history, number one in spirit!

Blazing away with ball in hand is Earl Brock, while John Pennington and Mike Geisenhoff, juniors, strain to halt the sprinter during a summer turnout.

With bare legs and tee-shirts in a summer session, the linemen crawl through "the shoot" to practice staying low while hitting.

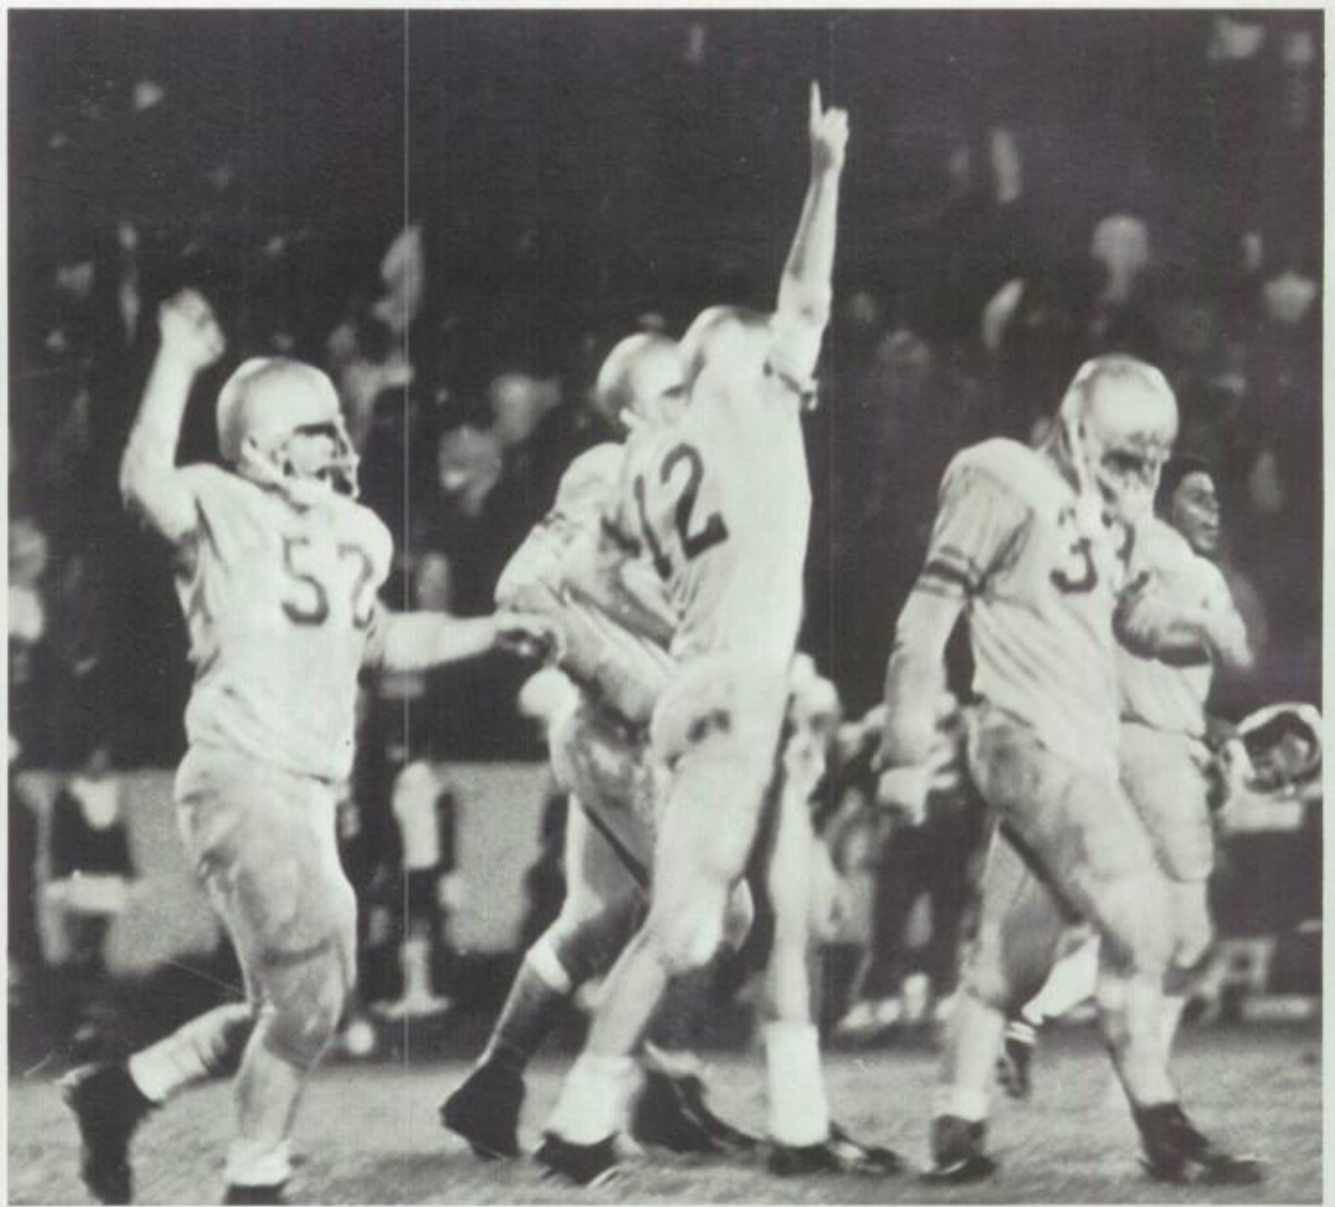

"Say, cheese!" Immodestly posing for clicking cameras and Boosters, the squad displays its patience and manners for interested parents.

Scott Morgan, senior, produces a puzzling look on the face of Coach Plaisance when questioning him.

"Bottoms up!" Tumbling forward, only to scramble up and tumble again is just a warm-up drill.

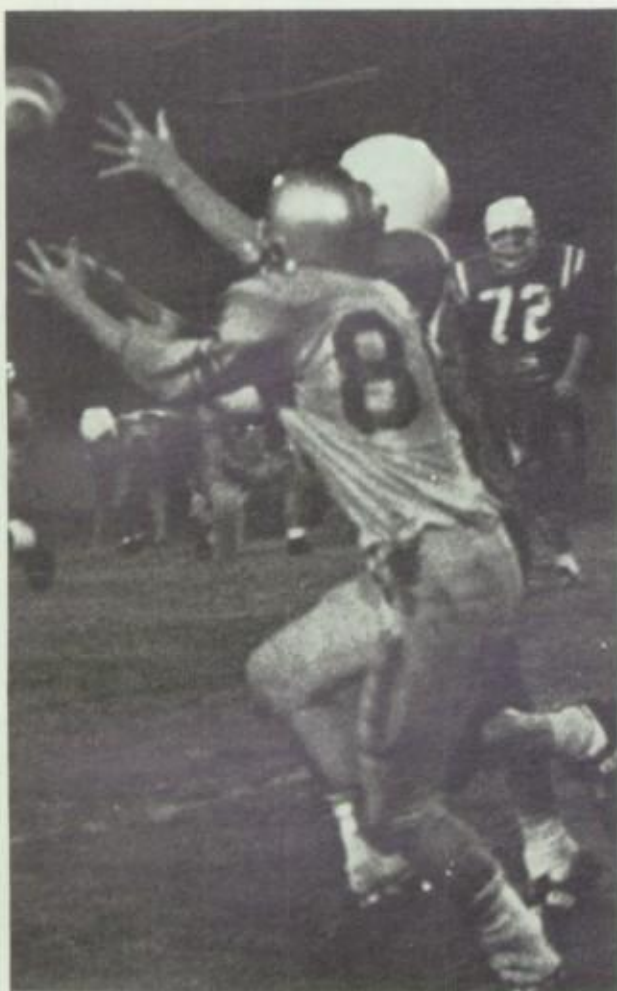

Declaring a hopeful position of number one, an ecstatic team saunters to the sidelines, hearing the cheers of supporting students and alumni.

"The 1969 version of the football team is the best in school history!" Record upon record, mark upon mark, fell beneath the express of "fifty juniors and seniors who fit together well and compliment each other's abilities." Being the "quickest big team ... seen in a long time," this version keeps the quarterback forever scrambling for his life. Foes fall, slide into a hole dug for them by a ramming, churning line. Setting the cornerstone for an athletic dynasty, an eleven man express stomps down the field to paydirt, goes to the air to stump a puzzled defense, consistently rams the pigskin to success. Success within a unit of complimenting factors is not only unity and drive to attain the best, but an offensive record such as 46 points in a single game; Bellingham felt this burden. 460 yards of real estate is the greatest single game output recorded; Bellingham again fell beneath this surge for yardage. Totaling 2709 yards for a season of scrambling and 300 yards per game, another historical record is set by a squad of "so many guns that the opponents can't key on any one man." Congratulations 1969!!

Thwarting a rival's efforts to halt him is Robby Baker, senior.

Wide-eyed and open-mouthed, enthusiastic fans exert lung power.

Sidestepping, Kyle Buslach, senior, claws for the missile.

Charging through a resisting line, a hard-charging back bulls forward through a mesh of arms, legs, and bodies. Edmonds' resisters fail to halt the bullying back.

Gridders lay keystone in building of dynasty!

Anticipation? Fright? Excitement? Other feelings span the gap of the emotion's circle. The intrigue of the crunching contest captures the attention of emotion-ridden fans.

Closing out the grid season by putting down the upstarts at Woodway, the squad perch the architect of their dynasty, Coach Buslach, upon grimy pads, as the cheer squad rallies the support of fans.

As swift Hawk Buford Ransom sweeps the end, Manager Chuck Thomas, senior, appears to be following in the fleet halfback's footsteps.

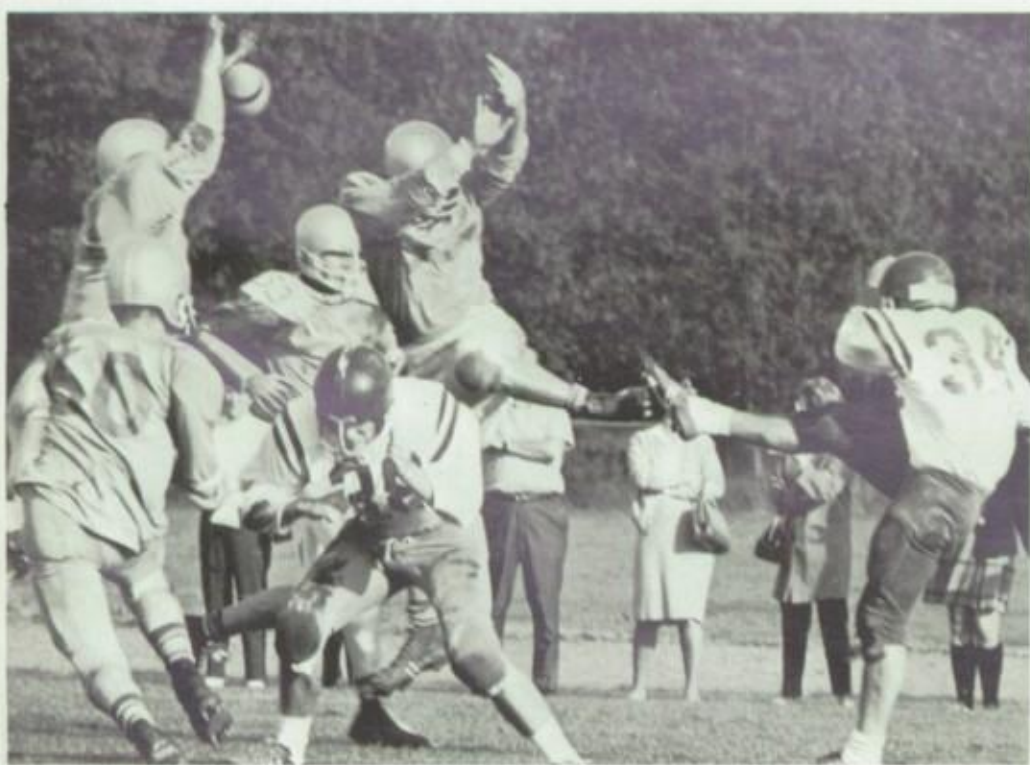

Ground game moves pigskin on touchdown capers

Bulling towards the mid-field strip is a game of ground warfare. The power running of Chuck Edelbrock-22, senior, forces a six-man defense to cover him as he carries the prize toward paydirt.

More than one tackle is needed to have an undefeated team. Demonstrating a great team effort, the J.V.'s defensive squad consisting of Shumski (80), Benson (72), King (75), Geisonhoff (62), and Erickson (82) bring down the Meadowdale ball carrier.

With their entire bodies electrified with the tenseness of the situation, the sophomore gridiron strains to block a Prep punt.

Consulting rosters with puzzled expressions are Coaches Beesley, Plaisance and Buslach. Muffled whispers follow the consultation.

Under the shadow of the giant's accomplishments, a wee voice from the junior varsity and sophomore units squeaks forth. Unnoticed and ignored by the enthusiastic fans of the giant varsity squad and their accomplishments, these "also-played" members of industrious, determined squads attempted to retrace the footsteps of their varsity leaders. But, working with little recognition, these men fell from the limelight of success, still to win, to try with the strength remaining from the squad.

Giant overshadows
wee ones efforts, accomplishments

Stiff-arming an Edmonds rival and attacker, Buford Ransom, senior, scurries around a tired end to scramble for more ground.

Young, but also dedicated

Cross country proves its spirit

Inhaling deeply, exhaling loudly, the young cross country team is proving to be the most dedicated team in athletics. Slipping but continuing on are Robert Hildahl, Car-ey Young, Dugan Lange, Jose Valenzuela, John Hartly, Bill Peacock, Russ Quay, Dan Hutchins, Mitch Jones, Mike Baunach, Dave Moses, Warren Lee and Jim Quintel. Jim Quintel, symbolizing all the team dedication and efforts, runs victoriously, placing eighth in the Northwest District and 65 at State.

Puffing lightly from his own personal turn out, Mr. Don Timmerman quietly advises Eugene Brandt, John Lavell, sophomores, and John Hartley, junior, in strategy.

Stroking the ball at a home match is Robyn Willingham, sophomore, a member of the girls' tennis team.

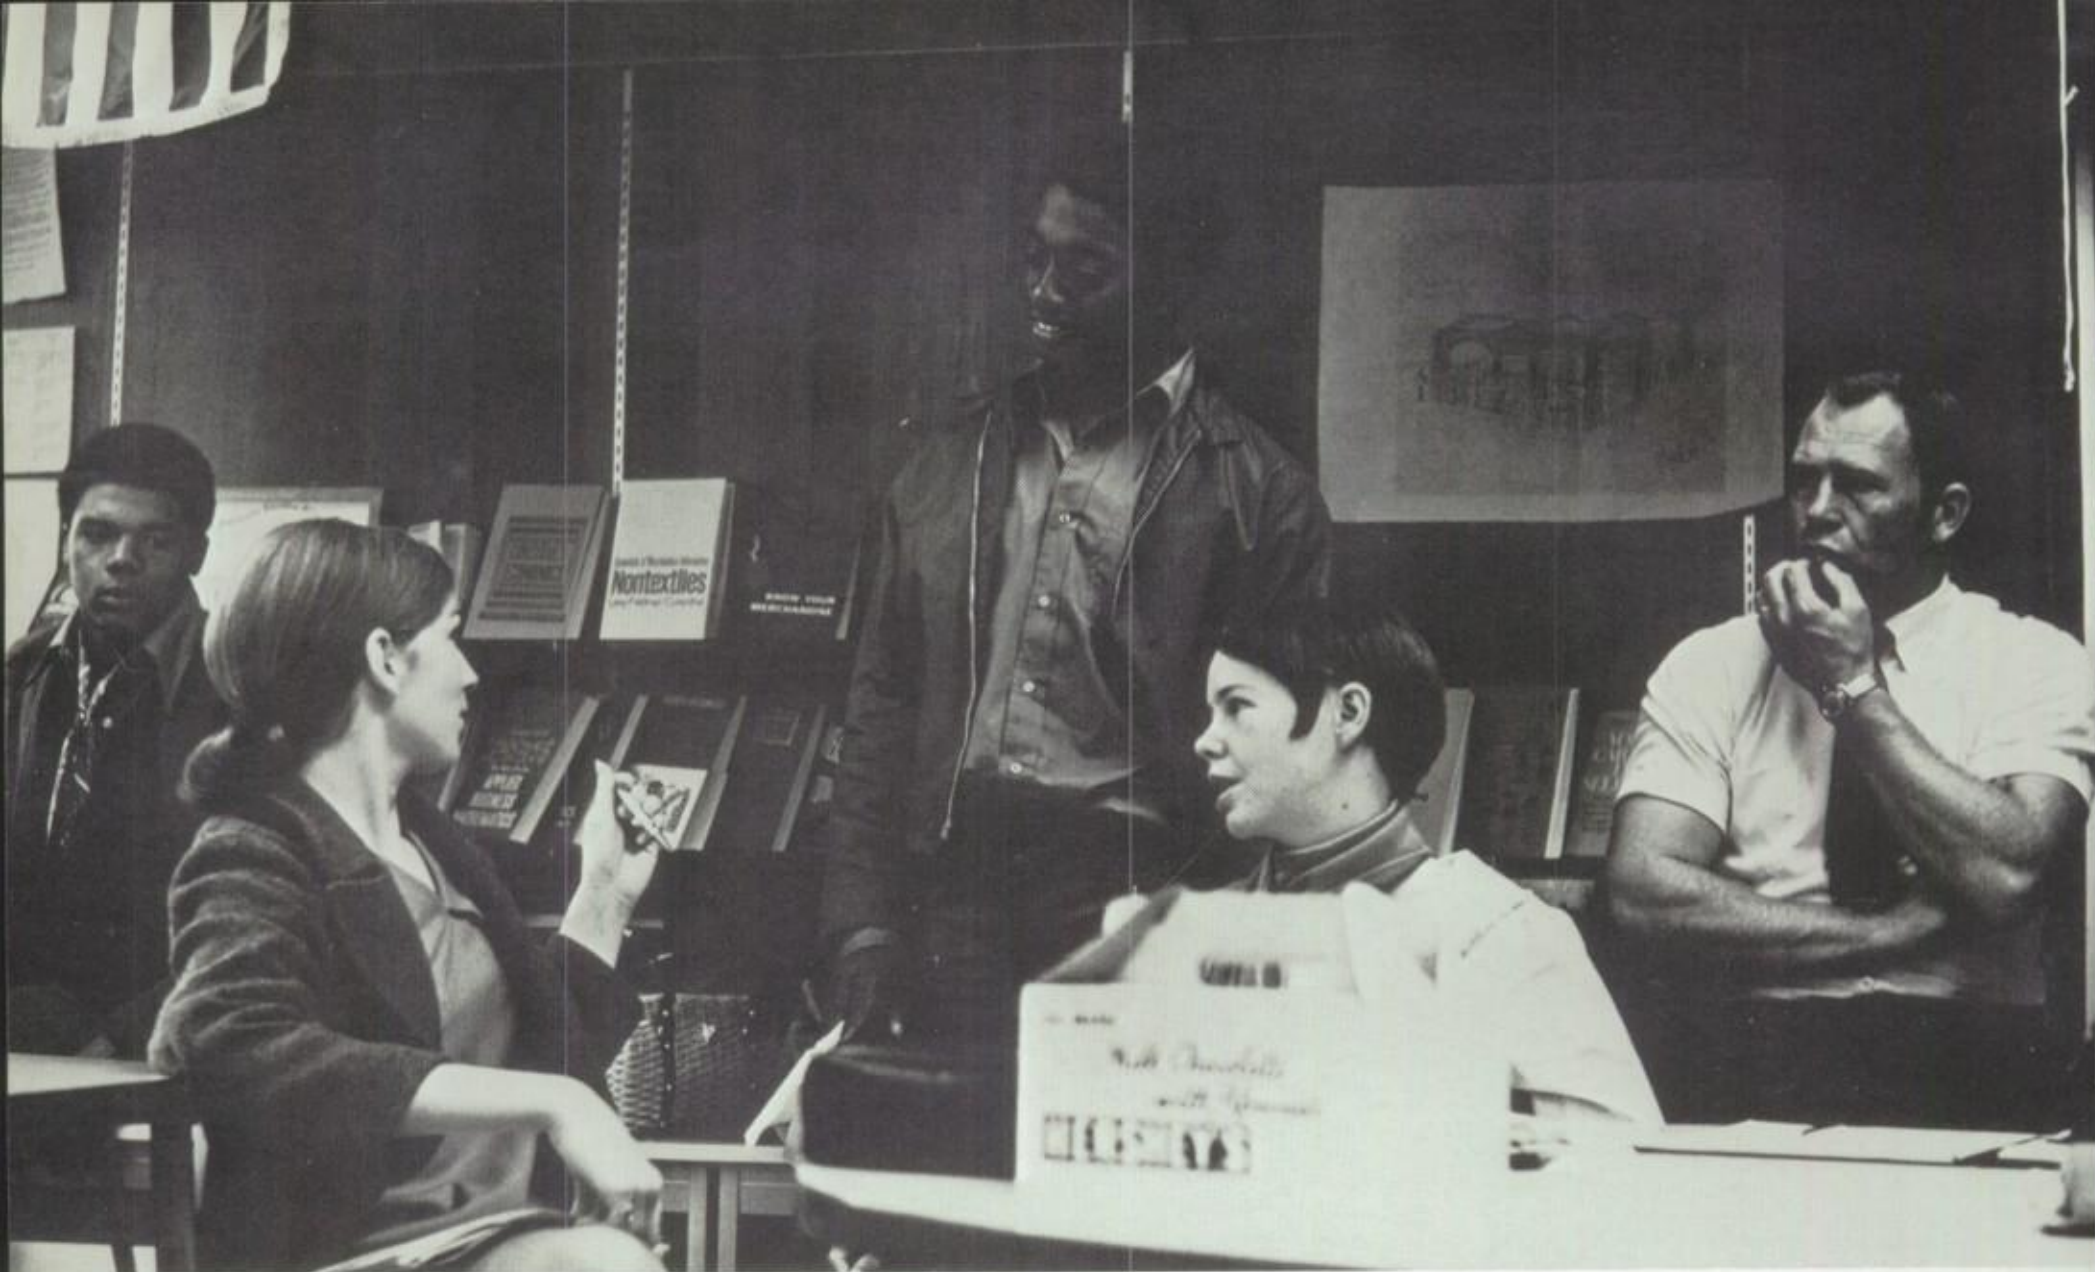

Pensively awaiting the return of the ball from her opponent is Pam Rock, senior.

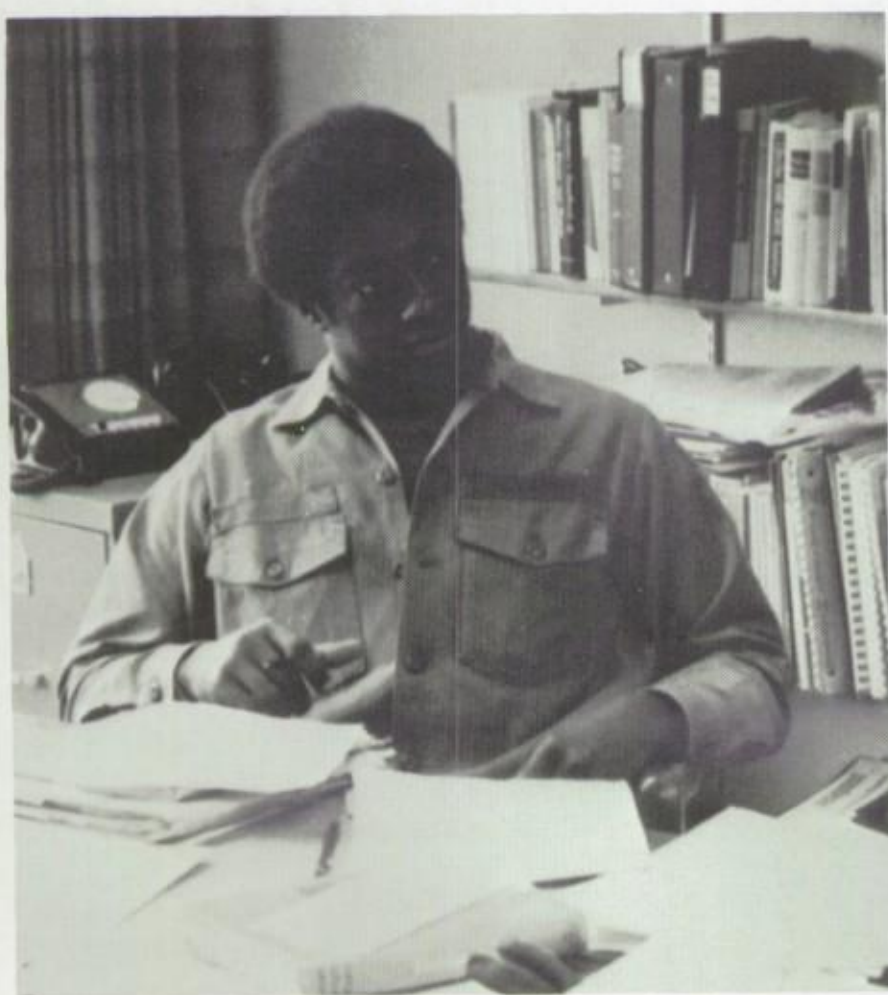

Backstroking the ball precariously in her home court is Terri McMahan, a sophomore dedicated to the improvement of her game.

Dedication, much time, and hard work add up to success for the girls' tennis team. These devoted athletes captured both the doubles and the team titles in their conference. Becky Cole, Pam Rock, and Sandy Steffan, returning letterwomen, strengthen the skills of the team. Even though there are fewer girls turning out this year, the enthusiasm shown by each individual proves that it's quality, not quantity, that is important. This enthusiasm is especially shown through Pam Rock, both captain and inspirational winner, yet, it's the combined efforts of the team that make it go.

Letting the students voice opinions, obviously, proves that ASB meetings can be very controversial at times. Stating a point on the previous question is secretary, Cindy Olson, junior, as her fellow officers, along with Mr. Malnes, adviser, listen intently.

Using good judgement, fairness, and leadership is the job of ASB President Cecil Boot.

Associated Student Body— time for change

Cecil Boot, senior, reveals a new Hawk emblem to members of the student government. The emblem is the work of Kyle Buslach.

With raised hand, Sandy Steffan, senior, proceeds to carry a motion on the previous question as Chuck Edlebrock, senior, and Jim Stillian, junior, look on.

Music lovers everywhere enjoy the sweet sound of music, as do Roger Seathrlee and Roger Connelly, seniors, having a juke box handy.

By wearing slacks to school, Karen Choate, senior, exercises her right which ASB prompted.

No one can say "ASB is dead". Headed by President Cecil Boot, the student government is one of the most active organizations on campus this year.

Dress standards have been revised and approved through the functions of ASB. Girls can wear slacks and boys are allowed a longer hair length, including beards.

Cultural developments have also become visible as well as audible. Students are now listening to the new juke box while, at the same time, they're making profit for us. As we can see, ASB is "moving right along!"

Screams from the class of 1970 thunder endlessly through the bleachers as all cheer the team on to hopeful victory. Active enthusiasm creates a stir of excitement which makes the first pep assembly a roaring success. Spirit becomes the theme as every Hawk expresses and feels pride.

Happiness and spirit prevail as Gary Shumski, April Cruse, Terri Elsasser, and Becky Stout, juniors, prepare confetti for the first pep assembly.

Topless, John Jury, junior, barely mumbles his yell through muted laughs. Inspiring enthusiasm, pep squad exhibits their spirit in their first skit.

Here comes the team! Spirit soars as they enter. Neal Baker, Bill Machado, and Mike Campbell, seniors, along with Jim McGinty, junior, continue to concentrate on the important game ahead.

Feeling mixed emotions is senior, Kathy Kirkpatrick. Spirit rises; confetti flies.

Announcing! For the first time ever: SPIRIT ADDICTS!

Can spirit be a habit? Let us count the ways . . .

A thousand man spirit corps showing up at a voluntary pep rally for No. 1. No.'s 2 and 3 are a Gator-Aid presentation and a pep talk to the student body by a member of the faculty, leaving stunned silence.

This is a direct cause of No. 4: Three full roter buses screaming to Bellingham. However, silence is not a part of No. 5: Mobs of boosters meeting to tear confetti.

Skits to promote an already eager spirit is No. 6, with treats for the team, No. 7.

No. 8 is pep club painting signs. No. 9 is the pep squad working to make this happen.

Finally, No. 10 is the largest, loudest crowds ever at games and meets.

Can spirit be a habit? Maybe not, but many people let spirit become a part of their life; and never lose it. Even when Mountlake Terrace is down and out it is still No. 1 in the eyes of one of the most spited student bodies ever.

Racing to devour a delicious watermelon football at a pep assembly is Randy Rausher, senior. Cheering him on are Gayle McDonnell, LEFT, and Evie Rhodes, RIGHT, seniors on the pep staff.

One of the many national assemblies to entertain students during the year, the Utah Rockettes give an interesting finale to a tumbling act that, unfortunately, didn't get off the ground.

Terrace students "make the scene" at one of the all-district dances held at Mountlake Terrace this year.

Active Terracites live, learn, and have fun

Cast in an eerie glow at an FBLA installation are officers Sharon Jones, Sherry Cook, Barbara Roberts, and Diana Berg, seniors.

With activities bountiful and the co-operation both within and between schools high, this is a year of bright times.

One of the lights is the assemblies that not only subtract from class time, but entertain, as do the exciting New Hope Singers, or inform, which is the job of a panel discussing the Vietnamese war or our state penitentiaries. Most are worth the time and effort that goes into them.

It seems that once the light is on, students don't want to quit as they take part in the many activities sponsored by Mountlake Terrace, the classes, or Inter-Hi. Friends, skills, and a means of expressions are all a part of the whole.

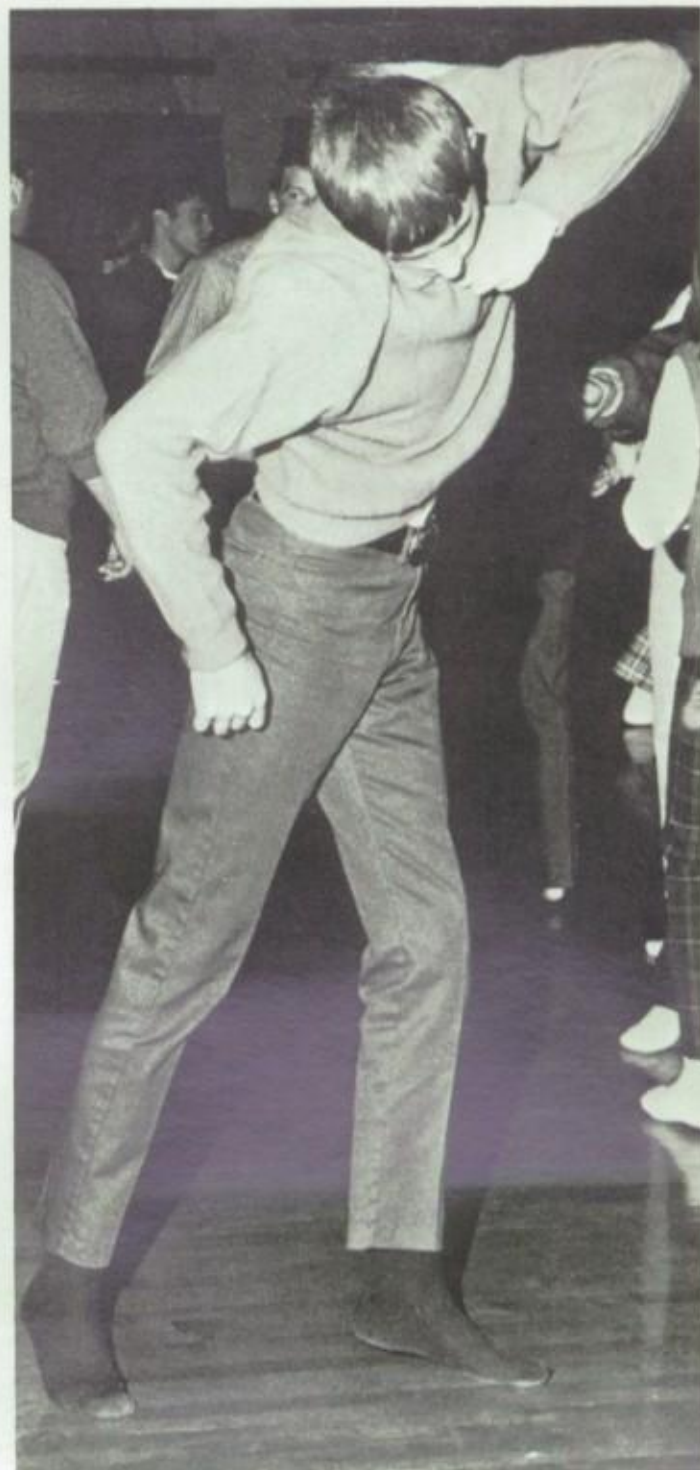

It is the year of the active Terracite.

Hey, Linus, the Great Pumpkin rises from the Mountlake Terrace cafeteria. As students socialize, dozens of pumpkins come to life at the senior sponsored pumpkin carving contest.

Keeping the pulse of Mountlake Terrace aimed at thanking those who work to entertain, THS students give an ovation that will echo in the minds of the people at the receiving end.

The beat goes on. Jim Littlejohn, senior, proves that the distortions of a good dance help the soul.

Mixed feelings penetrate throughout student activities

In French class, Paul Olson, senior, perches himself upon the heater to express his point.

While sitting in art class, juniors Brent Isam and Teri Northrup concentrate upon the subject of which they are drawing.

"One, two, three, kick!" is the chant of these beauties at a Tri-Hi-Y kidnap breakfast.

Miss Standards, a Girls' Club activity, draws a large variety of interested girls to choose three outstanding lasses each month.

Homecoming — one of the most exciting experiences in the entire school year. From the beginning of the pep assembly to the last step of the big dance, there are people always working; trying to make it the best Homecoming ever.

Apprehension hovers the queen candidates as they prepare speeches for the all-school assembly. Toilfully, the football team labors for perfection. Entangled in their arduous tasks, the rally squad never ceases to work for an excellent Homecoming assembly and game.

Struggling for a gain is Buford Ransom, 30, as John Walker, 33, senior, saunters to aid him in the victory over Blanchet, 20 to 0.

"A root-ti-toot-toot, we are the girls from the institute!" Depicting the 1929 Blanchet cheer squad, the rally squad humorously acts.

Blowing by the enthusiastic crowd, the Homecoming queen candidates, princesses, and the 1968 queen happily ride at half-time.

Through tears of joy, Marti Mallory, senior, whispers her thanks to the enthusiastic, adoring throng.

Not only is it very thrilling, but, Homecoming is also a time of perplexity, hard work and sentimental feelings. Bringing the alumni home to a victorious shut-out game and a very melodramatic dance, sets the mood for an expressive and excited student body welcoming them.

Proudly, the senior class creates a grand Homecoming float for their reigning queen and queen candidates to ride upon during the impressive halftime activities.

In triumph, a seasonal shut-out game makes the Homecoming spirit rise to its height as the first Homecoming win is sought.

Topping off the glorious night, the 1970 Homecoming court is chosen. Tearfully, Marti Mallory is crowned as queen followed by her princesses Gayle McDonnell and Evie Rhodes. As one can see, Homecoming is one of the big highlights of every year.

With inexpressible joy filling her eyes, Marti Mallory, senior, gasps as she realizes that she is the 1969 Homecoming queen. Escorting Marti is Mark Erickson, senior.

Victory resounds through halls as Terrace joyously crowns Marti as queen

As Marti Mallory glances towards Evie Rhodes, senior, Neal Baker, senior, presents Marti with an autographed football from the victorious squad.

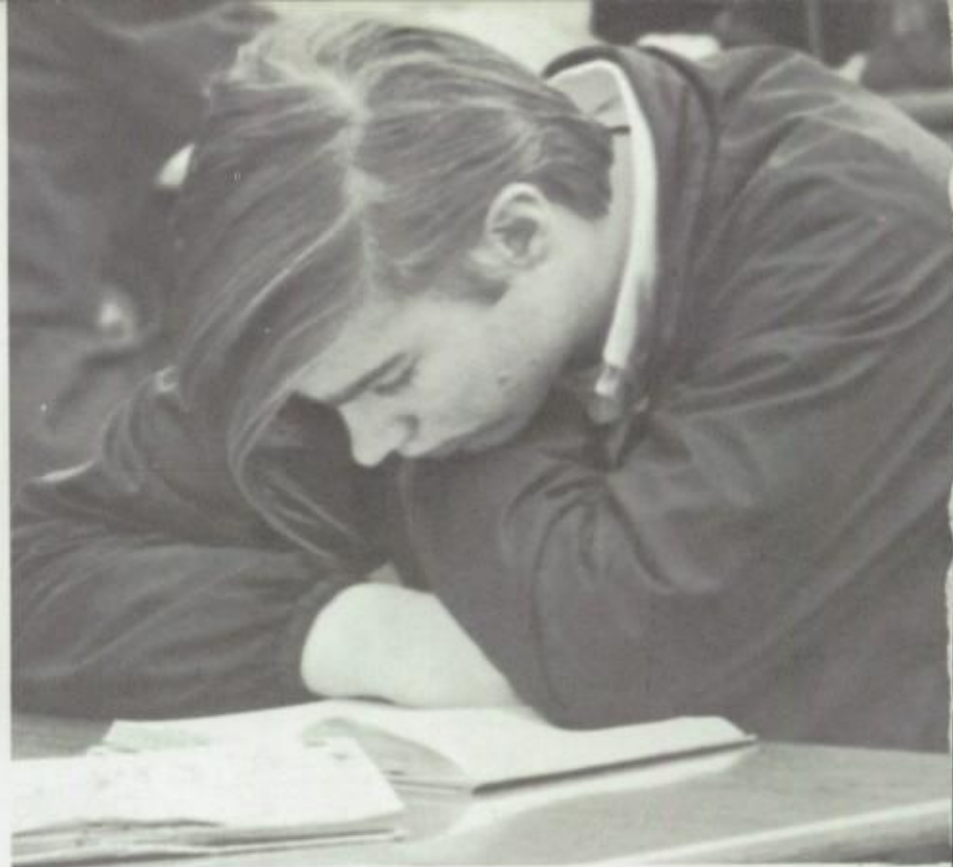

Excitement, tranquility, and joy fill the faces of Gayle McDonnell, Marti Mallory, and Evie Rhodes, seniors, the 1969 court.

With the victorious cheers still ringing through expectant minds, the cheerfull dancers sway and rock contentedly to the strains of "The Kings of Soul."

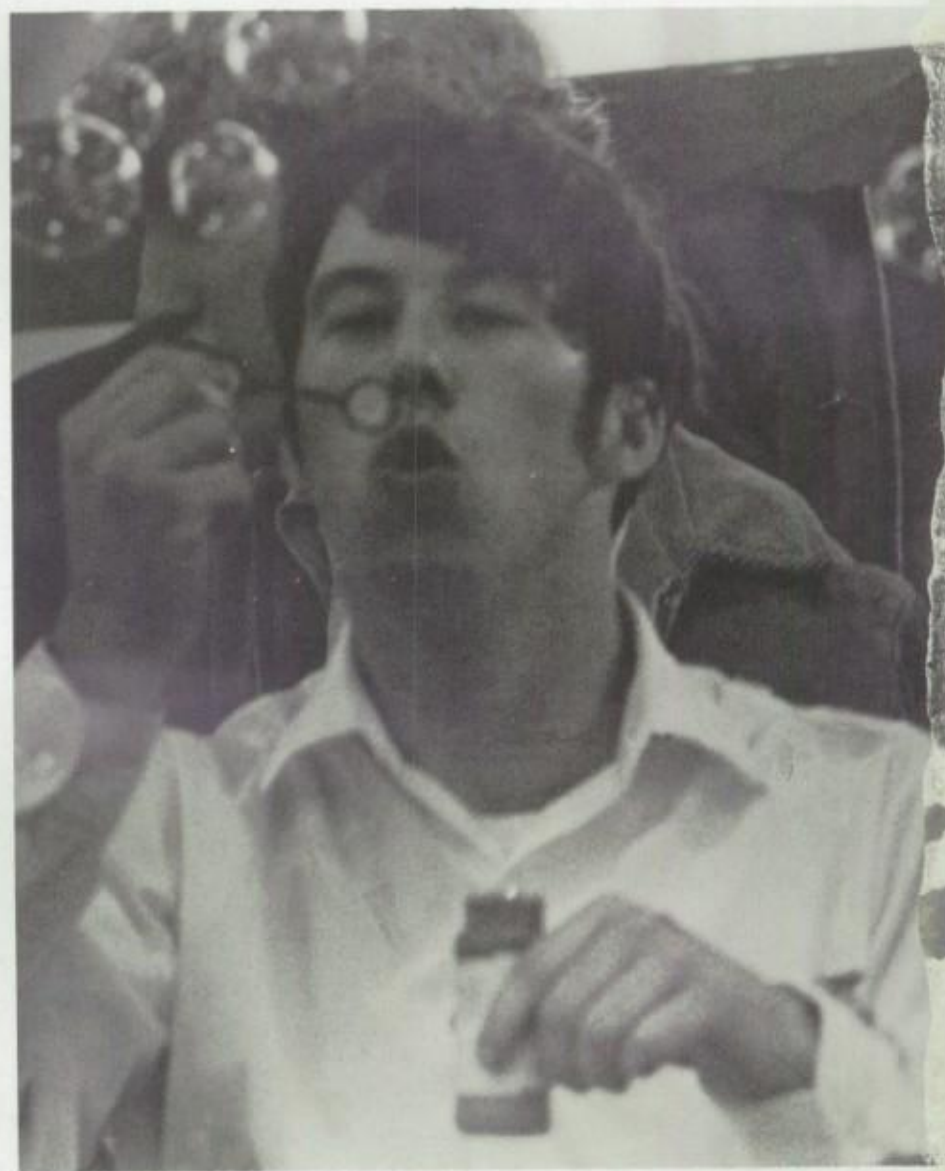

Assemblies prove to be a great place for secret-telling as Tim King and Jeff Voogd seniors, discuss a very important matter.

Jerry Hanson, senior, is leading us to believe that a library can be a very interesting place.

Mules meet muleheads;

Larry Hutchins, senior, seems to "bubble" up the assembly by displaying a creative show of fun.

By breaking the rules and jumping off his donkey, Mr. Winnerlend, cadet teacher, tries desperately to steal the ball away from Neal Baker, senior letterman.

Roger Connelly, senior, tries, in despair, to get his donkey moving in order to keep playing in the game.

assemblies unfurl excitement; library is serene

Dressed so femininely are the lettermen with their victory trophy upon the defeat of the faculty at the "Donkey Basketball" game. By sponsoring the successful event, lettermen are able to pay for their annual fall sports banquet with the use of funds raised.

'Miracle' draws overwhelming crowds

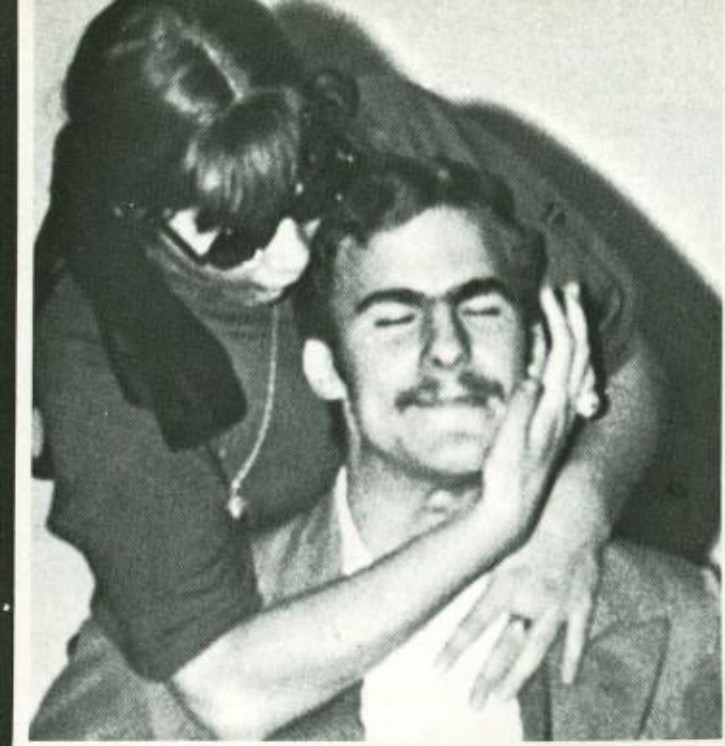

Anne Sullivan (Pam Christensen) receives a surprise while unsuccessfully trying to teach Helen (Patti Moore) table manners. Entertaining the student body and community with four outstanding performances, "The Miracle Worker" proved to be another THS Fall Play success.

Struggling with a slave girl. Helen portrays an uncontrollable blind child. Yet, soon she learns to realize a true type of love, and shows her deep affection for Anne, her teacher.

Mr. Keller carries Anne down a ladder from a room upstairs. Helen is pleased for locking the door.

Deciding that he does not need a ladder, Mr. Keller (Cecil Tyler) orders James and Percy, played by Sam Elwonger and Ken Crandall, to take the ladder back. Martha and Kate, played by Debra Lawson and Kathy Foltz, entertain Helen (Patti Moore) while Anne is retrieved from upstairs.

Taking a bite out of life; it's part of everyday

With a cheerie smile, Carolyn Kallstrom, senior, is a fitting model for the Ski club fashion show.

Of the many assemblies to entertain this year, the most dynamic has to be the New Hope Singers. Those who hear them know they like what they're doing.

You can get anything you want at Mama Snoey's Restaurant, especially during the feed held for the senior boys.

With a winning smile, Sandy Steffan, senior, left, places fourth and receives the scholastic award in the Edmond's Junior Miss Pageant as Sue Elvrum, senior, right, places fifth.

Colleen Walker, center, senior, looks on as Sandy Steffan, right, senior, is third runner-up Jr. Miss.

Home Ec. is more than just cooking and cleaning. Karen Hamilton, junior, works to refinish a chair.

Coach Buslach accepts a medal of memories from Neal Baker, senior.

Living and taking a big bite out of life, Terrace students do more than keep things going. They keep them hopping.

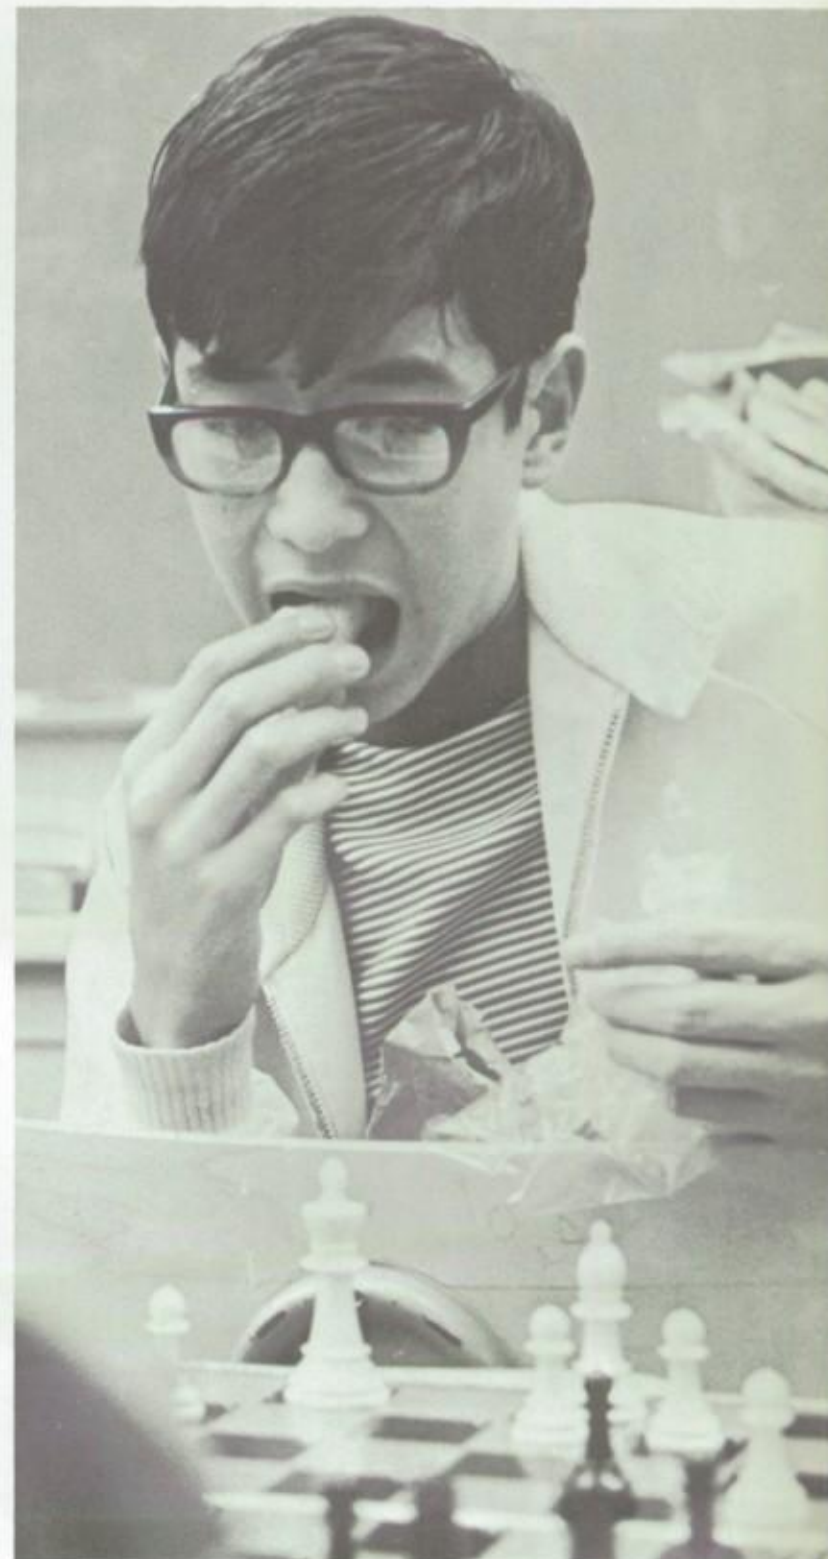

Big bites were most assuredly taken at the first Fall Sports Banquet held in three years.

Even activities not related to, but working with the schools, such as the Edmonds Jr. Miss Pageant, become mind-broadening experiences, and five girls from Terrace took part.

Taking part in many activities gives a chance to taste the sweetness of victory, the bitterness of defeat, and the pleasure of having taken part.

Coach Timmerman receives a gift from Cross-Country captain Dan Hutchins, senior.

Taking a giant bite, Pat Marshall, sophomore, contemplates his next move.

Tooters, tweeters,
strummers, hummers
open musical season

In their lavender dresses with assorted ties, Girls' Glee Club commences their musical presentation.

As the close of a beautiful concert, Band, Stage Band, Orchestra, Choir, Dynamics, Girls' Glee and Chorus combine their talent and efforts in a rendition on "The Christmas Song."

Basses, tenors, altos, and sopranos combine their lung power to make beautiful music as they conclude the first musical production of the season. Choir, along with other musical groups, perform at junior highs and elementary schools in the area.

Winter came early this year, at least in the music department. With December 6, the date; 8 p.m., the time; and Edmonds Junior High Auditorium, the location; three long months of work and determination come together to form an evening of enjoyable music.

Over 400 members of the student body are participants in some phase of the music scene. Some members have dual roles in either Choir-Dynamics or Band-Stage Band-Orchestra. A few brave souls are even in three or more parts of the actively melodic music makers.

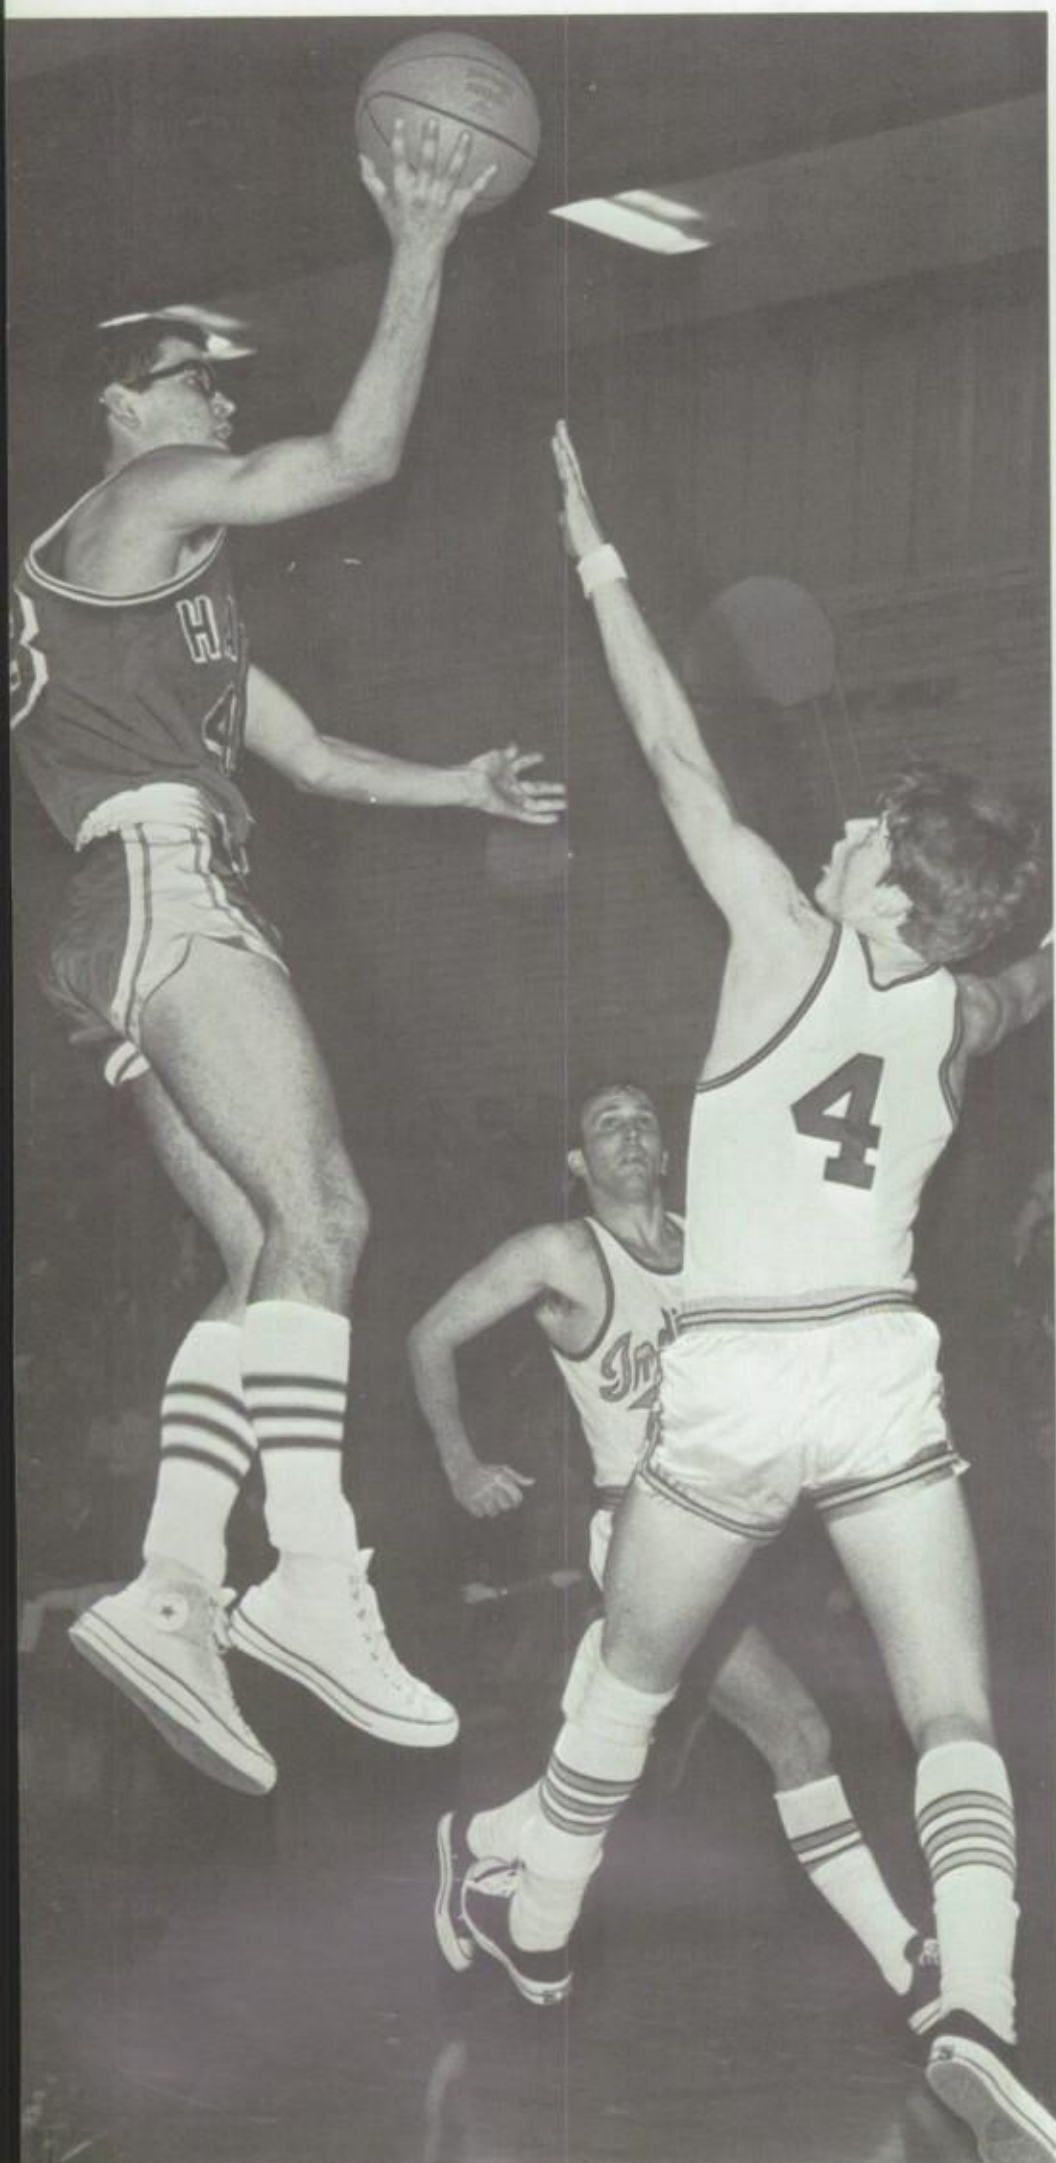

Violins and cellos put forth mellow tones as the orchestra performs at the first concert of the year.

Stage band swings into the season of snow with "Spinning Wheel", as recorded by Blood, Sweat, and Tears. This group of select musicians rehearses twice-weekly, after school, to prepare itself for the many performances of the year.

Reaching for better season, team tries harder

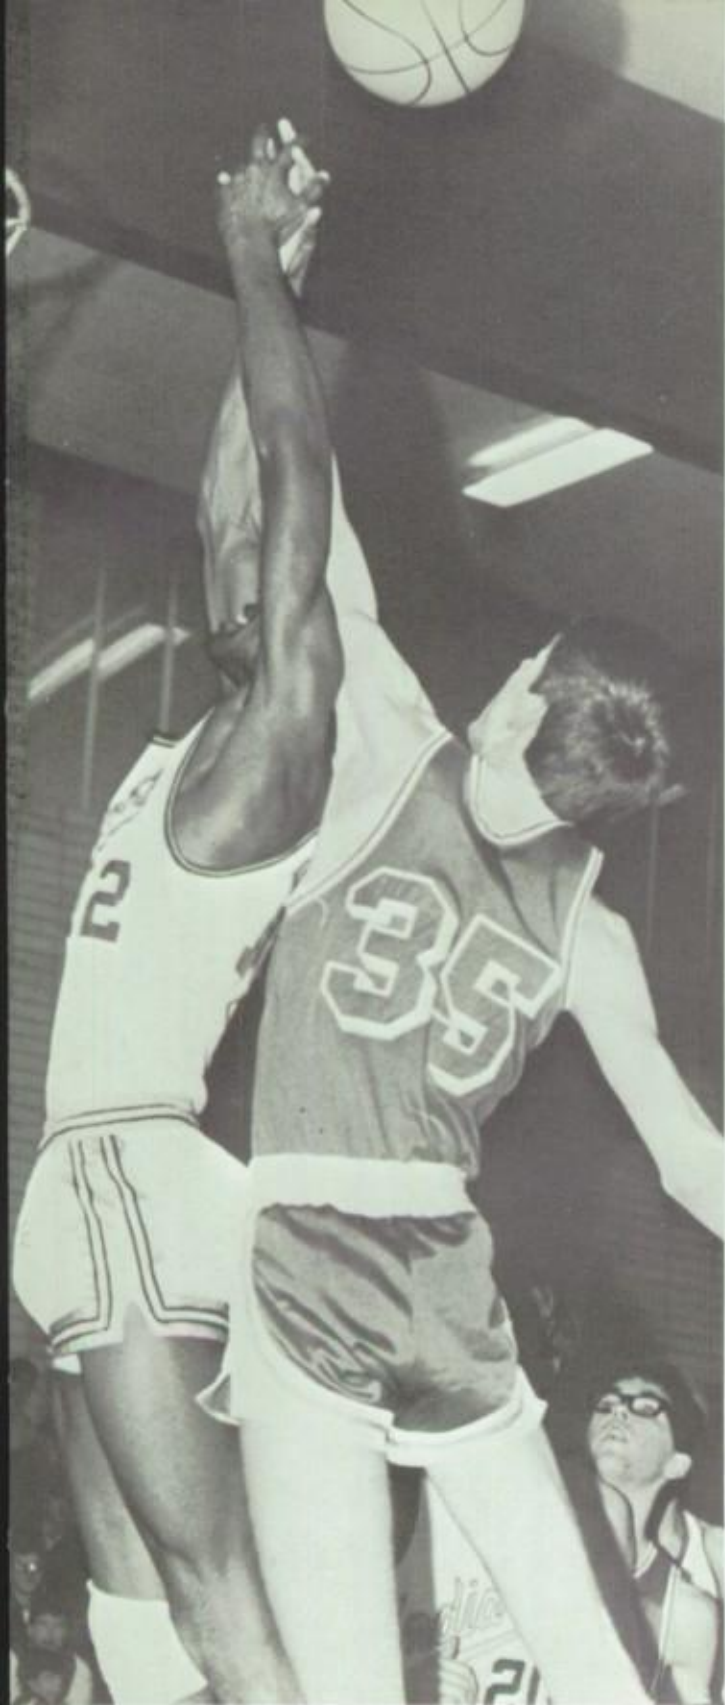

Leaping to shoot over opponents, Rocky Farrar, senior, sinks another basket for the Hawks.

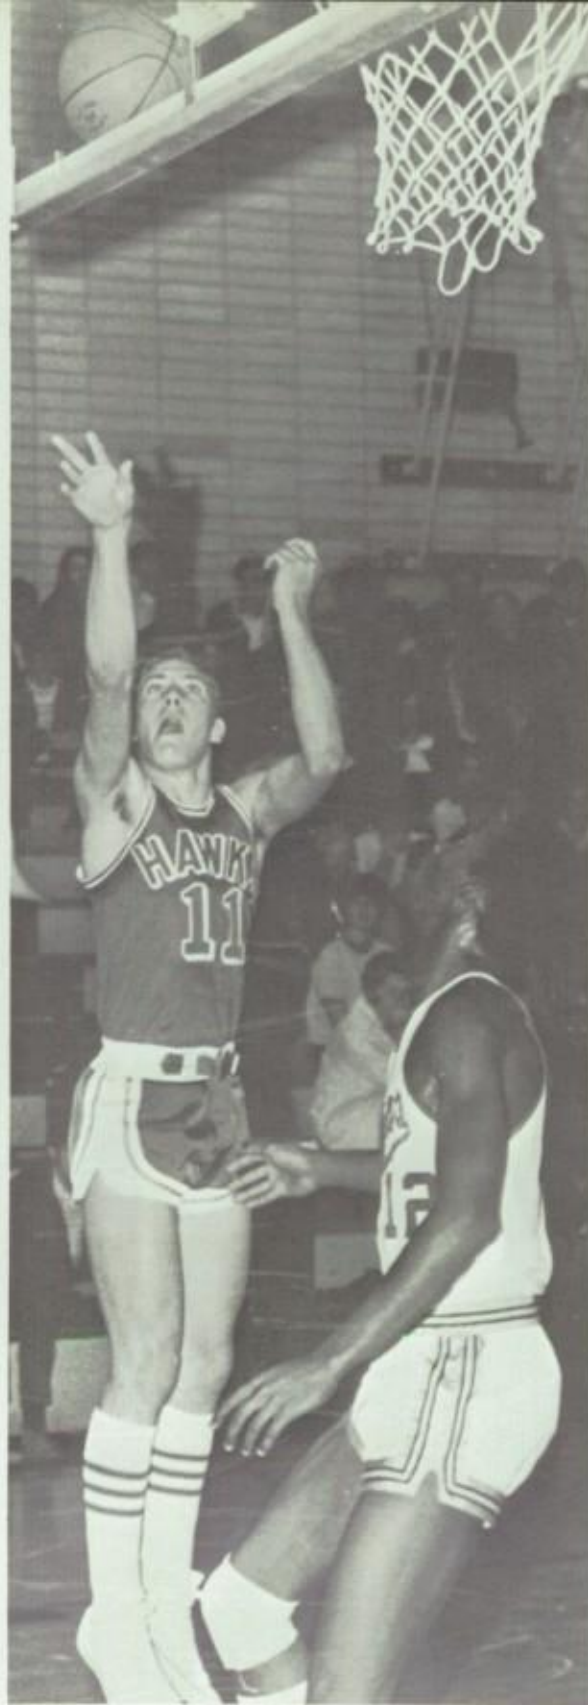

Stretching to get the rebound, Bill Hale, senior, gets help from teammates, Craig Ortloff, junior, and Steve Lance, senior.

Launching herself into a frenzied display of spirit is Lisa Ward, junior, as on-lookers restrain themselves.

Stretching to block an attempted basket, senior Bill Hale, 35, extends his body to its entire capacity.

Striving to sink his basket, senior Kyle Buslach takes direct aim.

Getting the rebound is the goal of senior center, Steve Lance.

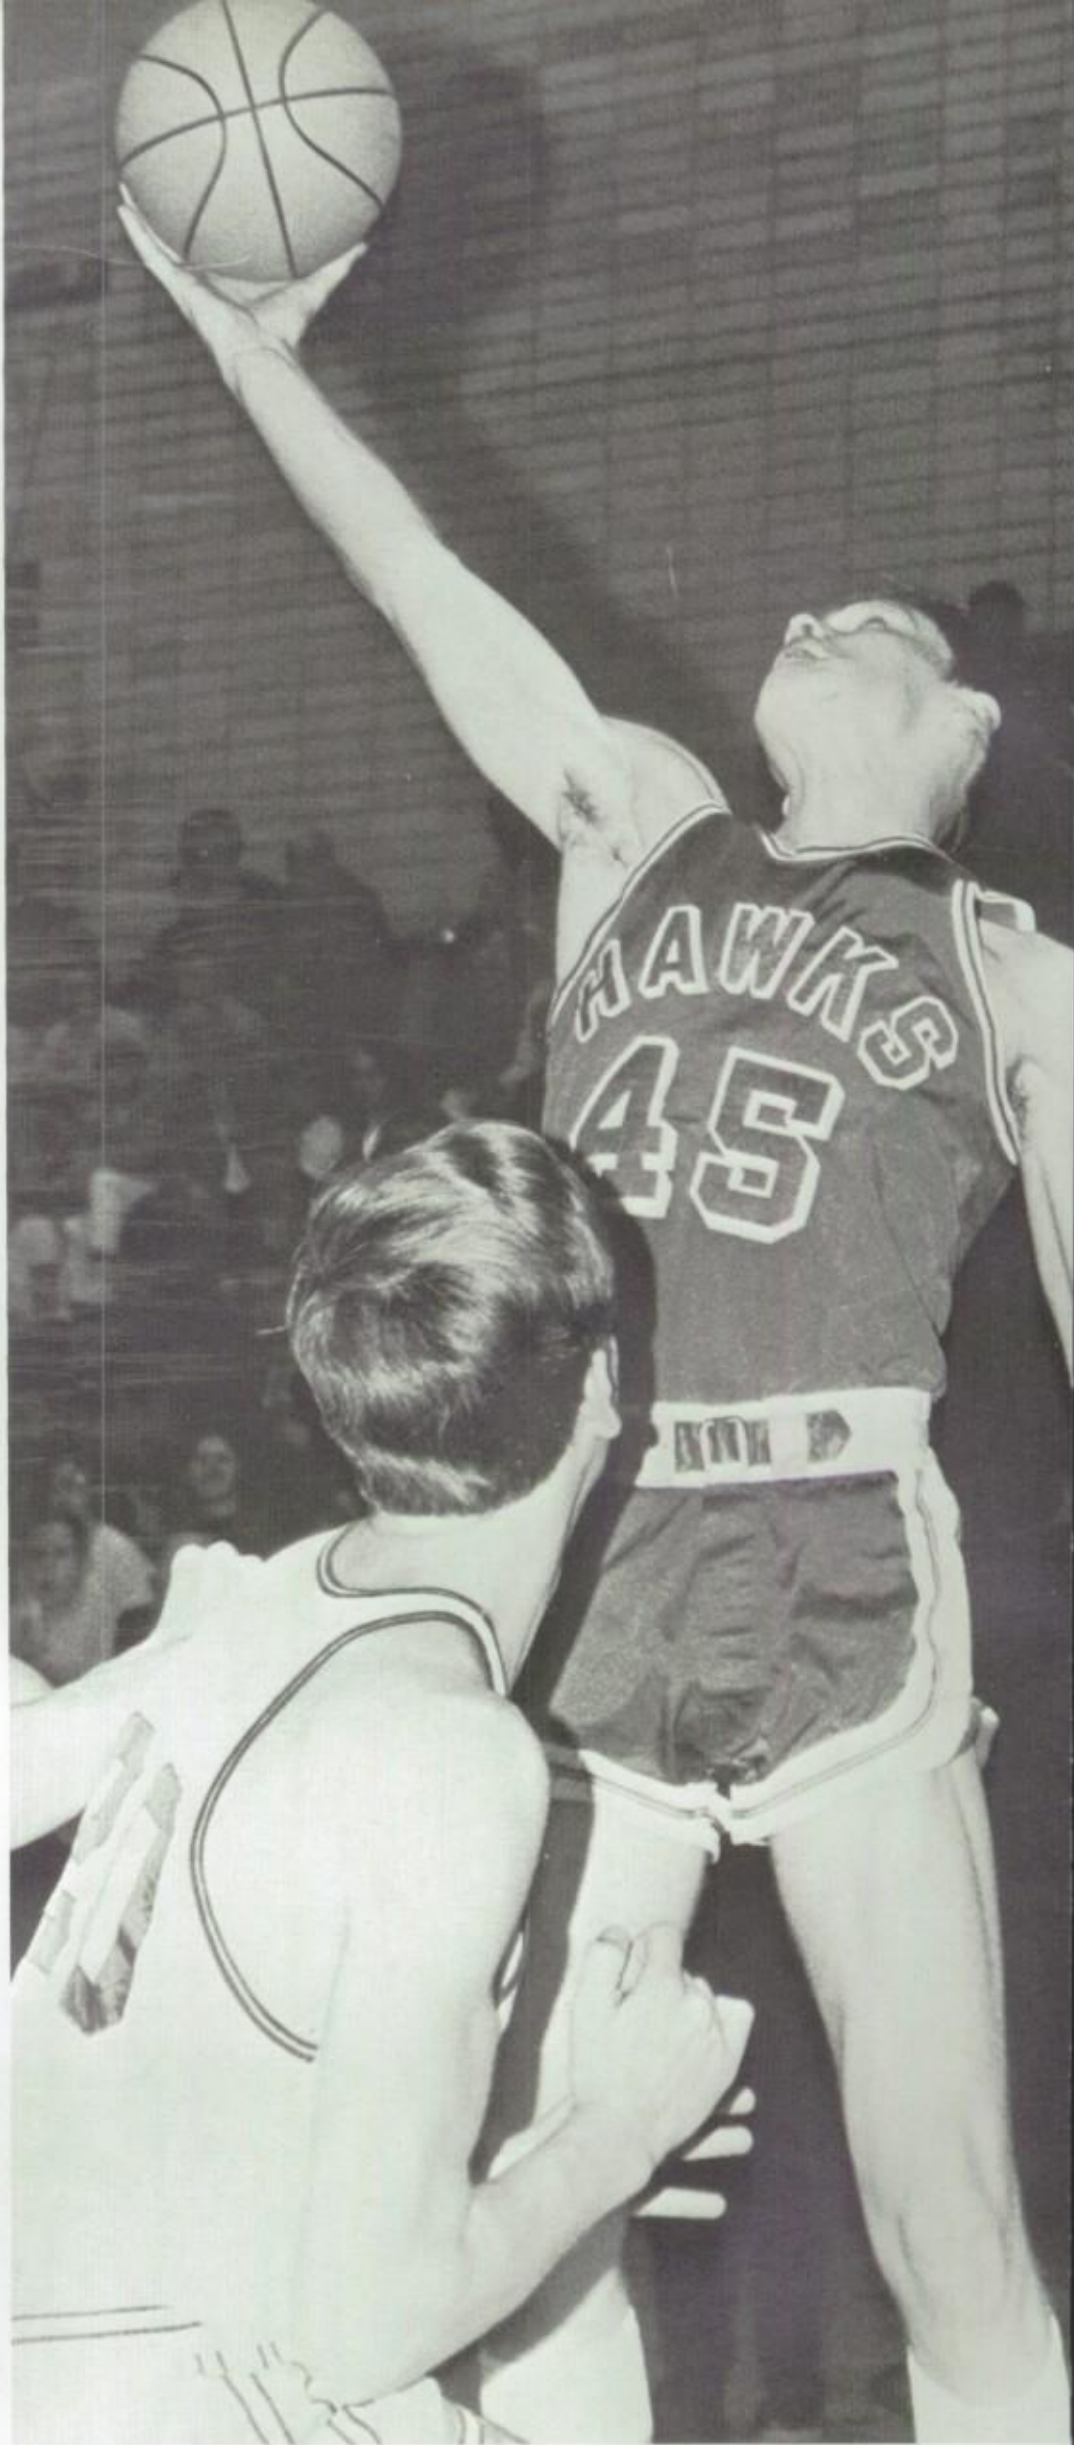

Excitement overflows as the crowd realizes that the Hawks have won. At the close game in which Terrace was victorious over Edmonds 56 to 55 in the closing seconds, shock and disbelief were prevalent.

This rebound is possessed by the enemy Gull, but not for long if Rocky Farrar, center, can help it.

Foes struggle with senior Rocky Farrar, 43, as he battles not to lose the ball.

Towering over his opponents, senior Steve Lance holds the ball high above their heads and out of their reach.

Time, time again

Hawks outplay, outhustle, outrun others in conference

Starting out the season with only five returning lettermen isn't too bad; but, due to unfortunate accidents, two had bad leg and ankle injuries which occurred before the conference games even got started. During the basketball season, one up-coming player was injured in a car accident and several more were hurt in other incidents. If having many members of the team hurt wasn't enough, compared to the other teams, they had height and experience against them. To the league's surprise, their good points outweighed the handicaps, and they came out as one of the more powerful teams. The Hawks could outrun, outhustle any team in the league. Time after time the Hawks became a challenge to the other conference teams, and showed them that a small team in size can become, and is, a big team in strength and skill.

Blocking the ball without fouling his opponent is the pursuit of Lynn Johnson, junior on the J.V. squad.

Assisted by Coach Bob Jacobs is Ron Bart, sophomore, as he practices to improve his quickness and throwing ability on the sophomore team.

Dribbling skillfully through a maze of bodies, maneuvering around a mass of grabbing hands, clasping the ball with the knowledge of practice and sureness of ability within, teamsters of the 1970 dribbler squads playfully outmove their opponents. "We've done it! We've done it!" cries a coach with the talent and experience to carry a Terrace team to a WesCo championship. Lacking the height of their opponents, lacking the support of pre-season predictions, the 1970 version of a basketball team proved to be able to out hustle, outshoot, and out spirit any opponent it faced. With an enthusiastic student body behind it, the team soared past predictions of its winning four games, soaring all the way to the WesCo title. Rebounding by Steve Lance, the baby in the center position in the league, and Craig Ortloff, a spirited junior among the senior squad; shooting by Captain Roger (Rocky) Farrar, a cool-headed member, and again Craig Ortloff; assisting from Bill Hale, a welcome transfer from a Seattle team in his junior year, Kyle Buslach, an athlete all-around, and Roger Farrar, the thinker, aided the team in its efforts and rewards to gain the WesCo crown. Backing the starters was a group of hard-working, pushing players. Constantly attempting to gain a starting position, these men kept the starters on their toes, making them earn their positions. Junior and sophomore hoopsters similarly strived for the top. But with a team like this year's, inspiration spread from the varsity to the other teams.

Receiving the WesCo trophy from Mr. Jim Rothnie and Coach Merle Blevins is Captain Roger Farrar.

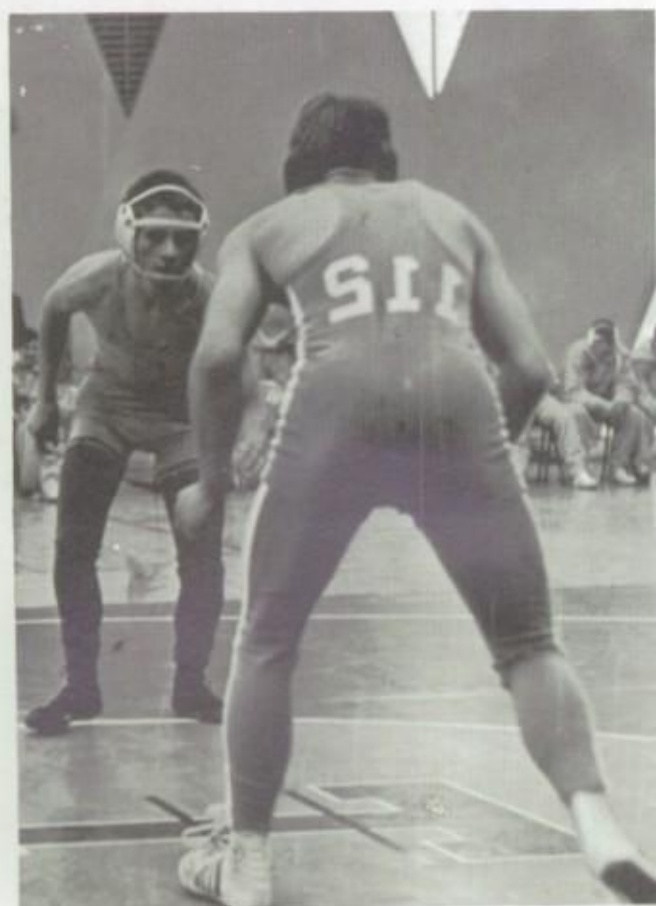

Breathlessly holding down his opponent is Bill Machado, senior while trying to make another pin for his team. Machado had four straight pins in mid-season.

Pulling to free himself from opponents grip is tight-lipped Merlin Reeder, sophomore.

Bone-crushers meet match as they grapple for championship.

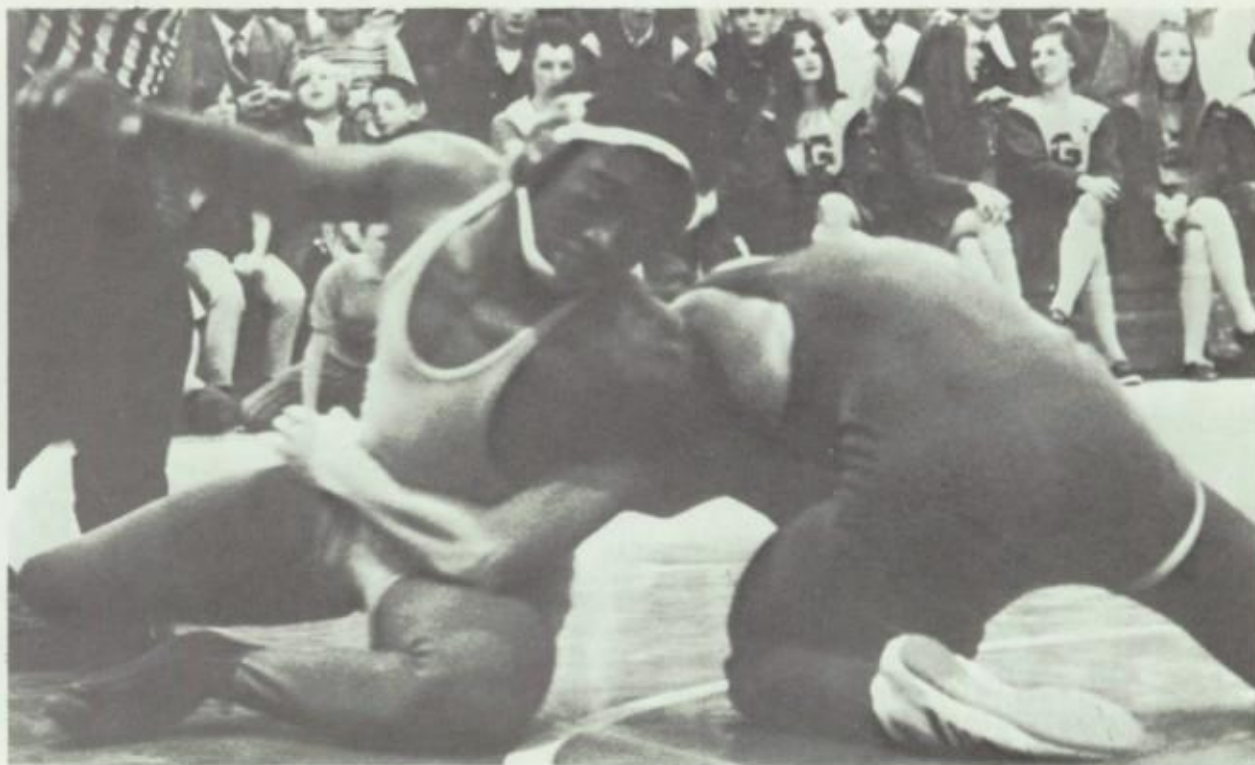

With a look of determination, Dave Garen, senior starts forward threateningly.

With muscles flexed and chin digging into his opponent's shoulder, Gordy Buslach, junior, forces his opponent to give way.

Facing bouts with unknown opponents, the grapplers peer calmly at their rivals.

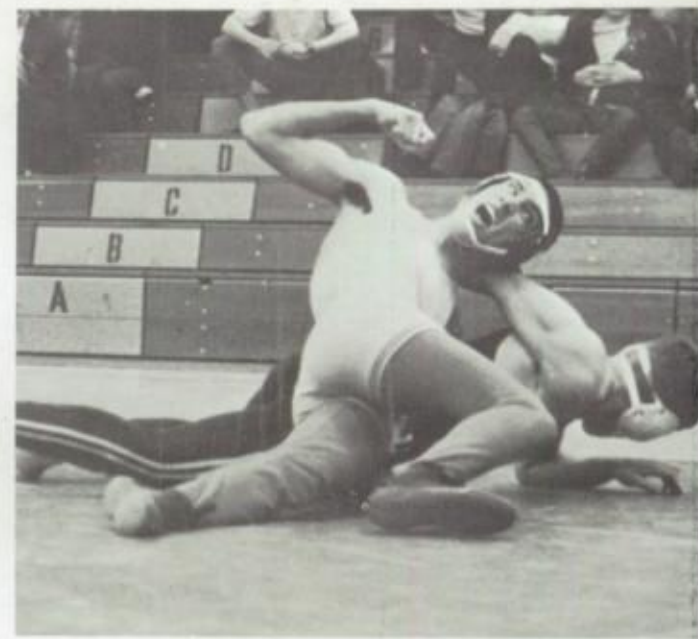

As desire and knowledge flash inter-mixed through a well-disciplined, concentrating mind, Cecil Boot, senior, reaches around desperately to reverse a dangerous position.

(BELOW) Mouthing a command to his powerless foe, Jim McGinty, junior, yanks at a painful limb to flip his rival into a pinning situation. A determined wrestler struggles to free himself from the 154 pounder's vicious grasp.

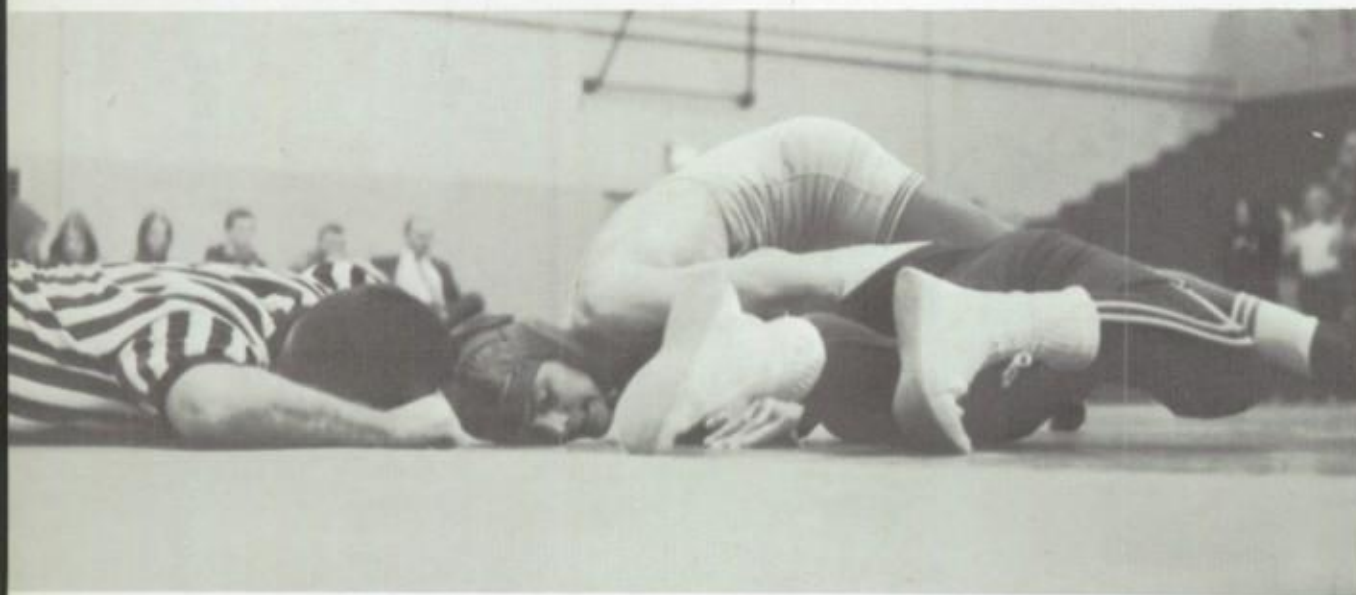

Flexing to relieve the agony of the wait, rolling to feel a mat of confidence and reassurance below, anxious members of a well-disciplined, determined unit stretch and limber-up.

Driving an opponent into a sweat-strained mat is Tom Castillo, senior.

Feeling the weight of a competition strengthened Gordy Buslach, junior, as opponent struggles helplessly as his shoulders are lowered silently, relentlessly to the mat.

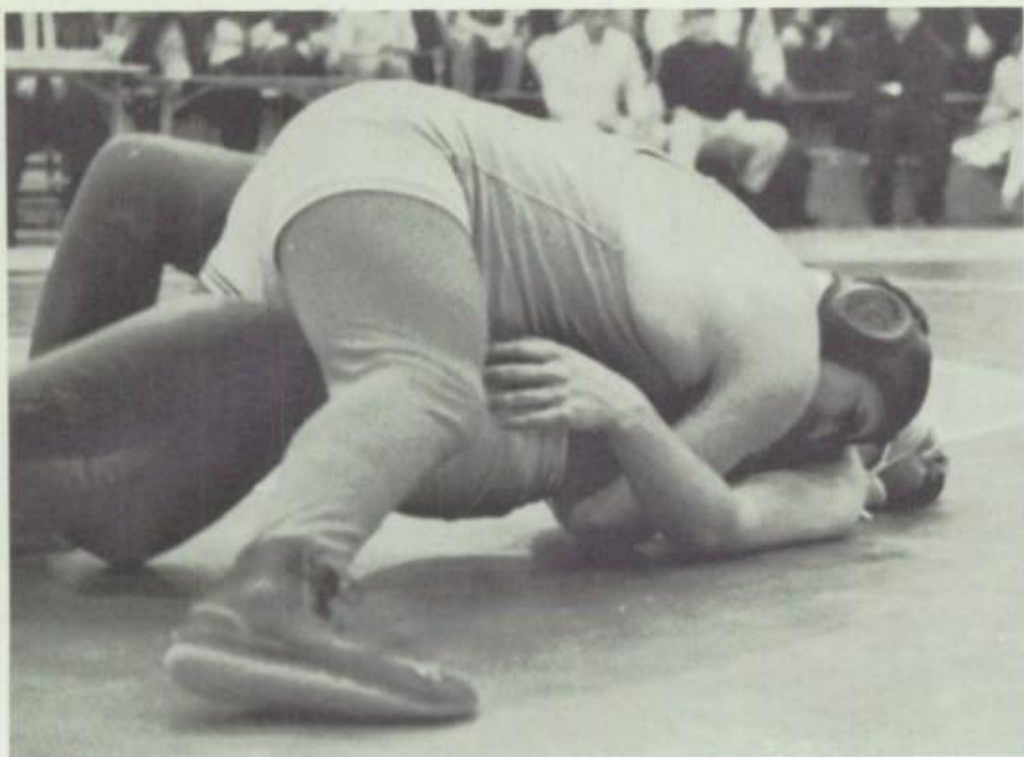

With muscles taut and chin driven painfully into a tight muscle is Dave Garen, senior.

Achieving the goal of wrestling, a hard-fought pin, an unbiased referee, below, raises the hand of puffing but internally happy, Ray Howland, junior.

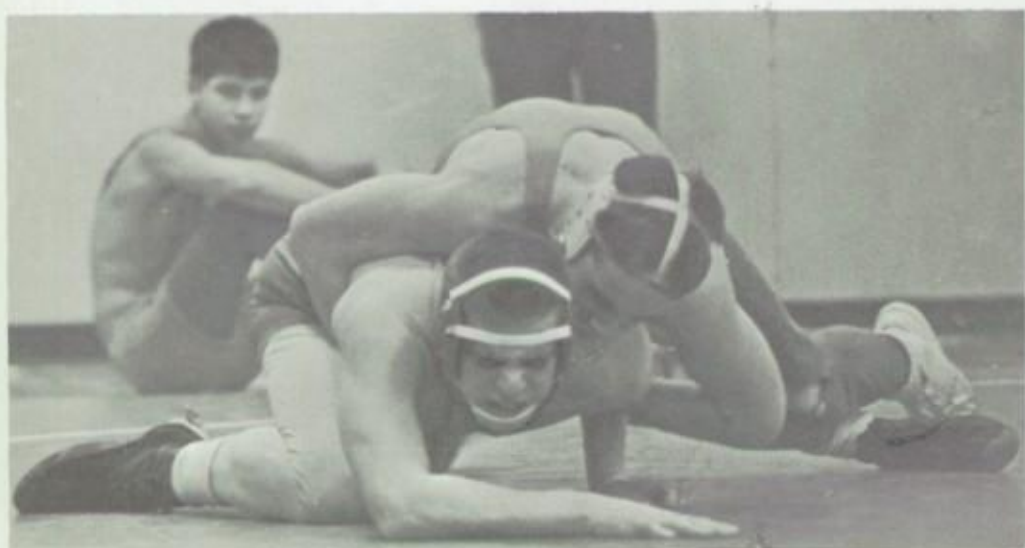

A Cascade opponent finds his feet flying as Jim McGinty, junior, lifts him skyward.

Using his weight to acquire a pinning hold, Ray Howland, junior, forces his opponent to succumb to his superior ability.

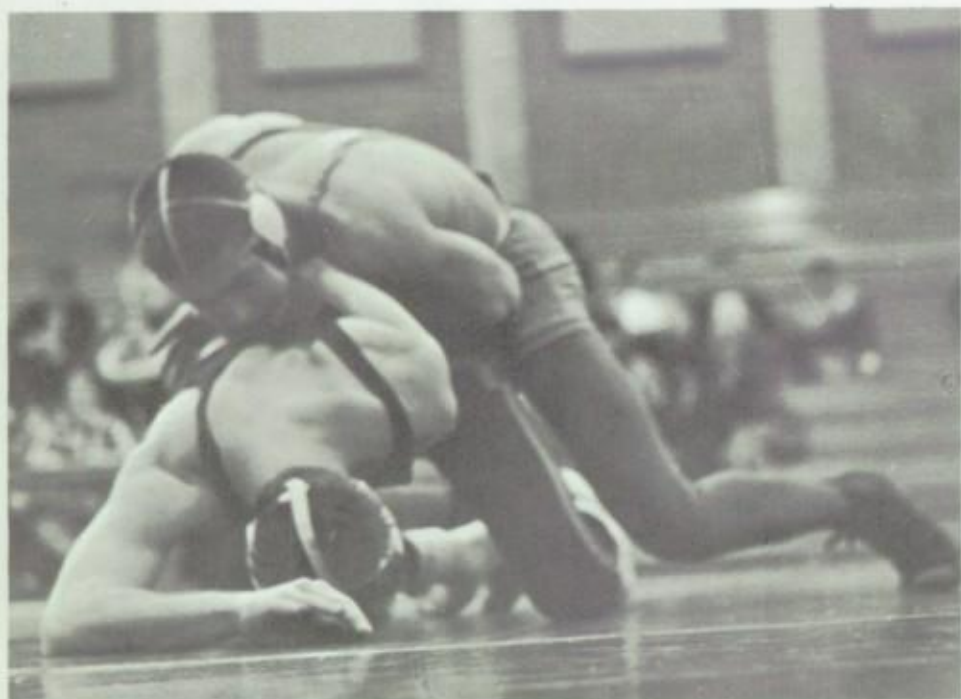

Pleating with the matmen, anxious members of a spirit-enhanced crowd breathlessly await a victory.

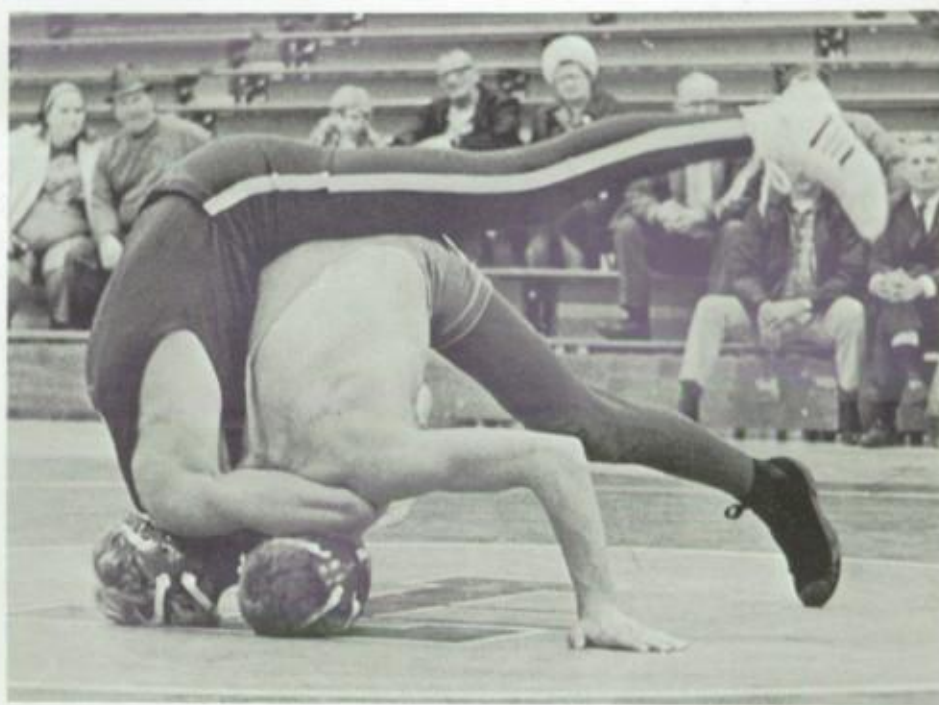

Eyeing a vicious struggle for control, Tom Wilbur, sophomore, silently aids Lou Beatty, (bottom) sophomore, in his excruciating attempts to win.

Flipping, balancing,
matmen edge to victory!

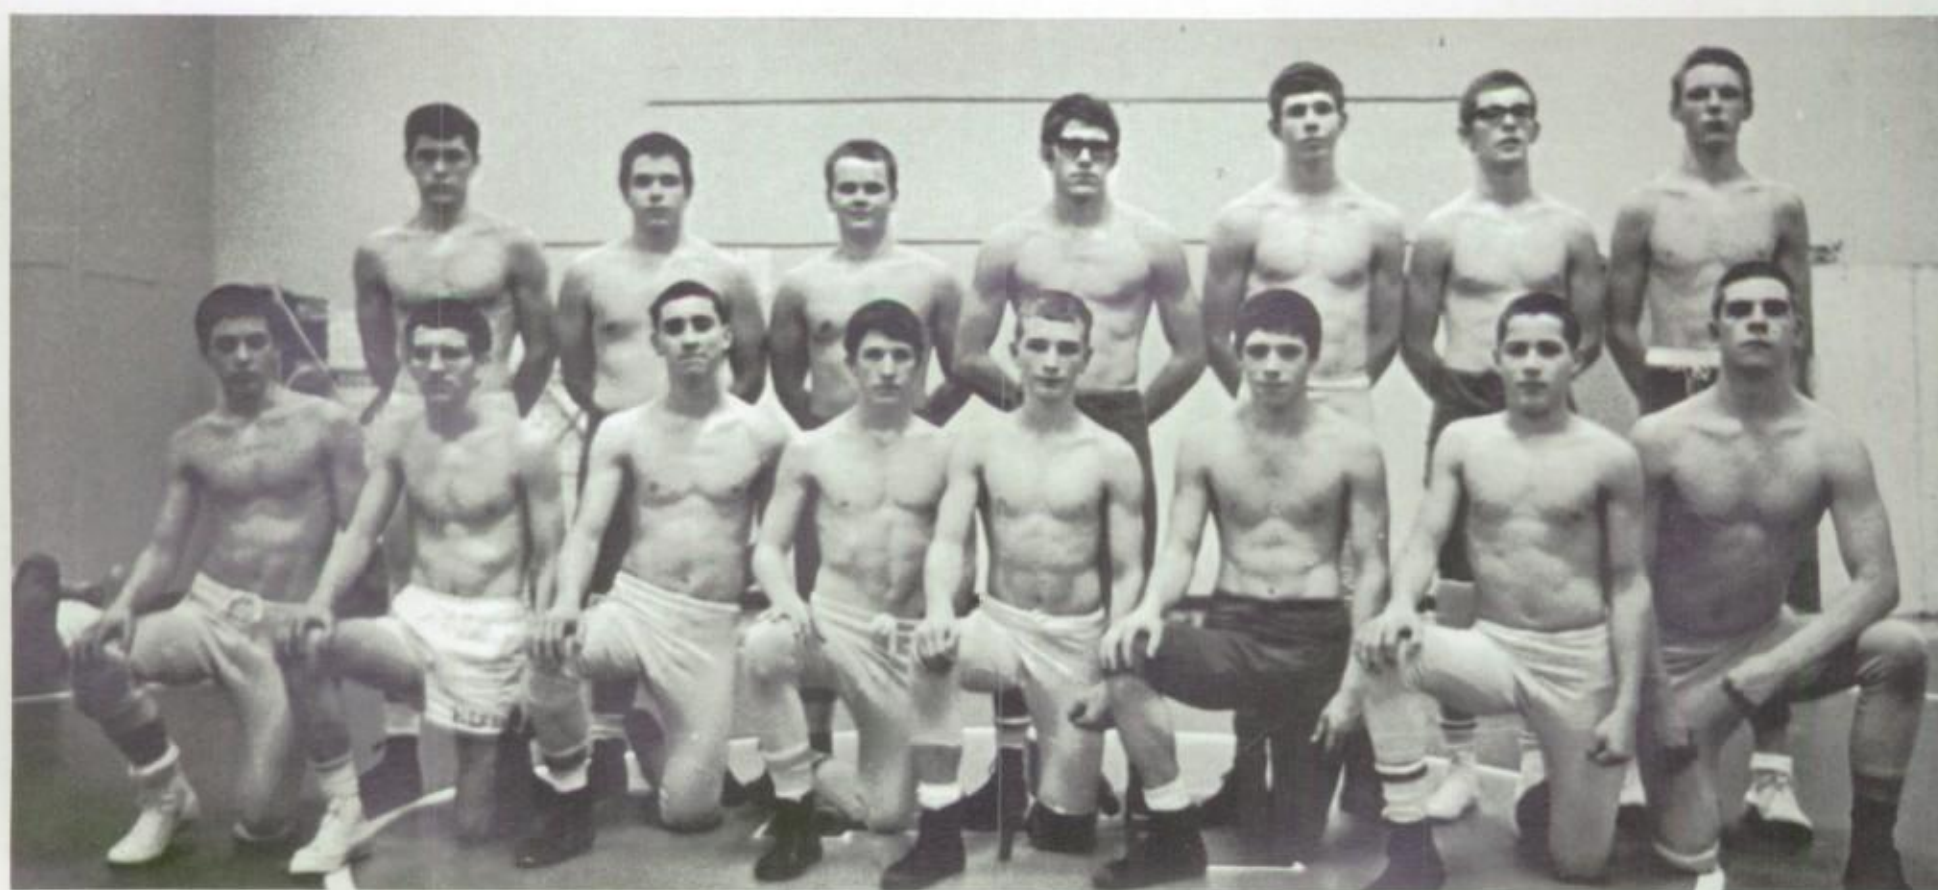

Controlling the squirming motions of an agile rival, Rodger Bleiler, sophomore, flips the squeamish mass over to pin.

Trickily balancing on firm neck and muscular shoulder muscles, Dale Dake, senior, sways to the music of his opponents odd hold.

Bridging an international gap, communicating through a mutual understanding of wrestling, Cecil Boot, senior, a regional champion and state participant, struggles fruitlessly to overpower a touring Japanese wrestler, but Boot was barely defeated by his foe's superior ability.

MTHS sent eight to regionals
MTHS sent two to state

Hard luck and injuries plagued this squad of individually strong grapplers. Only twice throughout the season did an opposing team win more matches than this squad. Ironically, though finishing sixth in the WesCo standings, this group achieved third at the WesCo tournament. Only Bellingham, sending 9, to the Hawk 8, sent more men to the regionals than Terrace. Arm and ankle injuries at critical times during the year stunted progress; but hard luck failed to halt personal drive.

Being one of the most exciting seasons of the year, basketball has aroused many fans. Combustible Terri Elsasser, junior, arises at a flurried moment and then retires with great satisfaction.

Winter activities: aggressive, powerful, educational

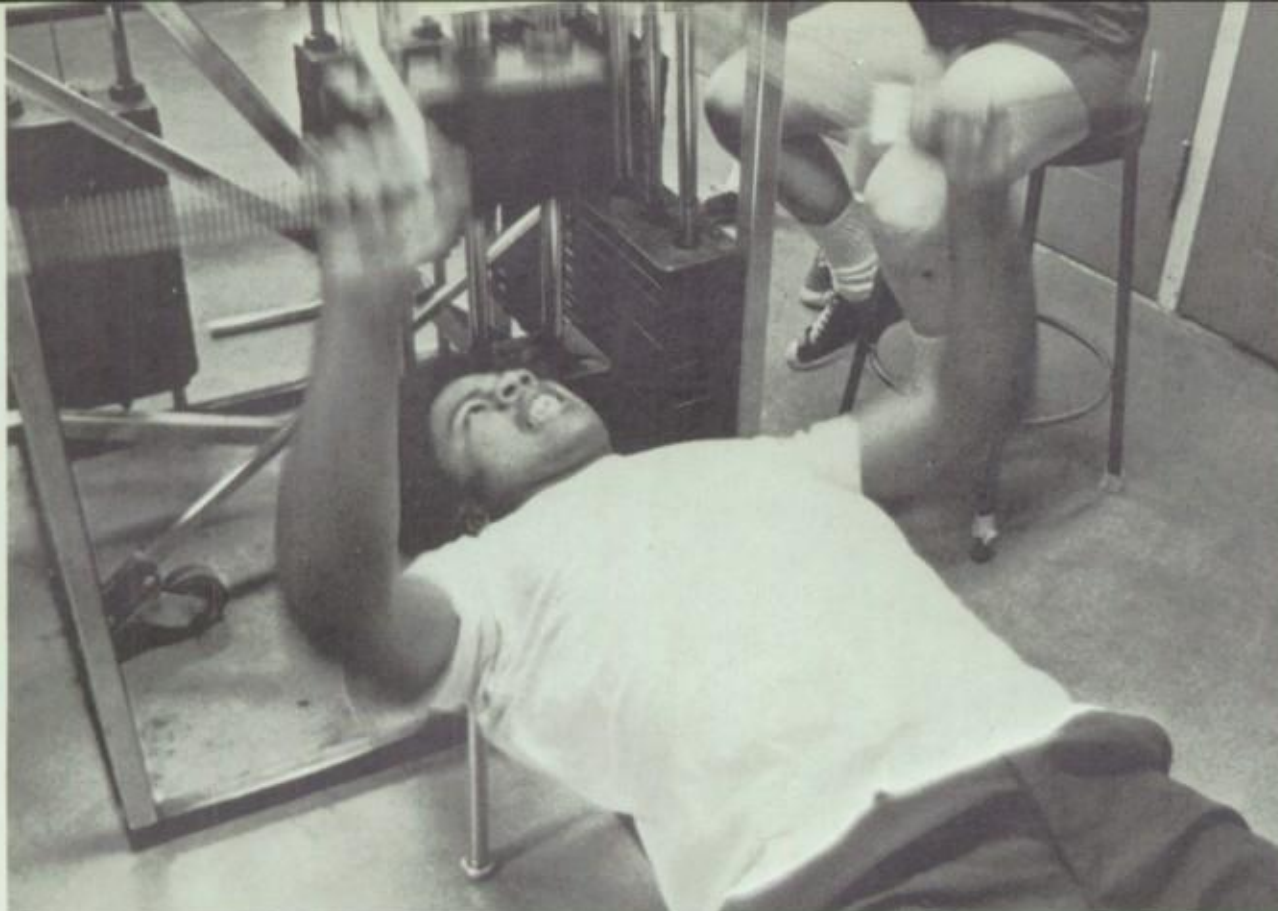

As a beginner, Pam Massey, sophomore, prepares a layout for a "Cub-Scout" newspaper.

Using all his strength, Buford Ransom, senior, endeavors the laborious Universal Gym weight machine to keep in shape between his athletic seasons.

Discussing team strategy by the use of visual aids, Head Basketball Coach Blevins diagrams a play during a time-out.

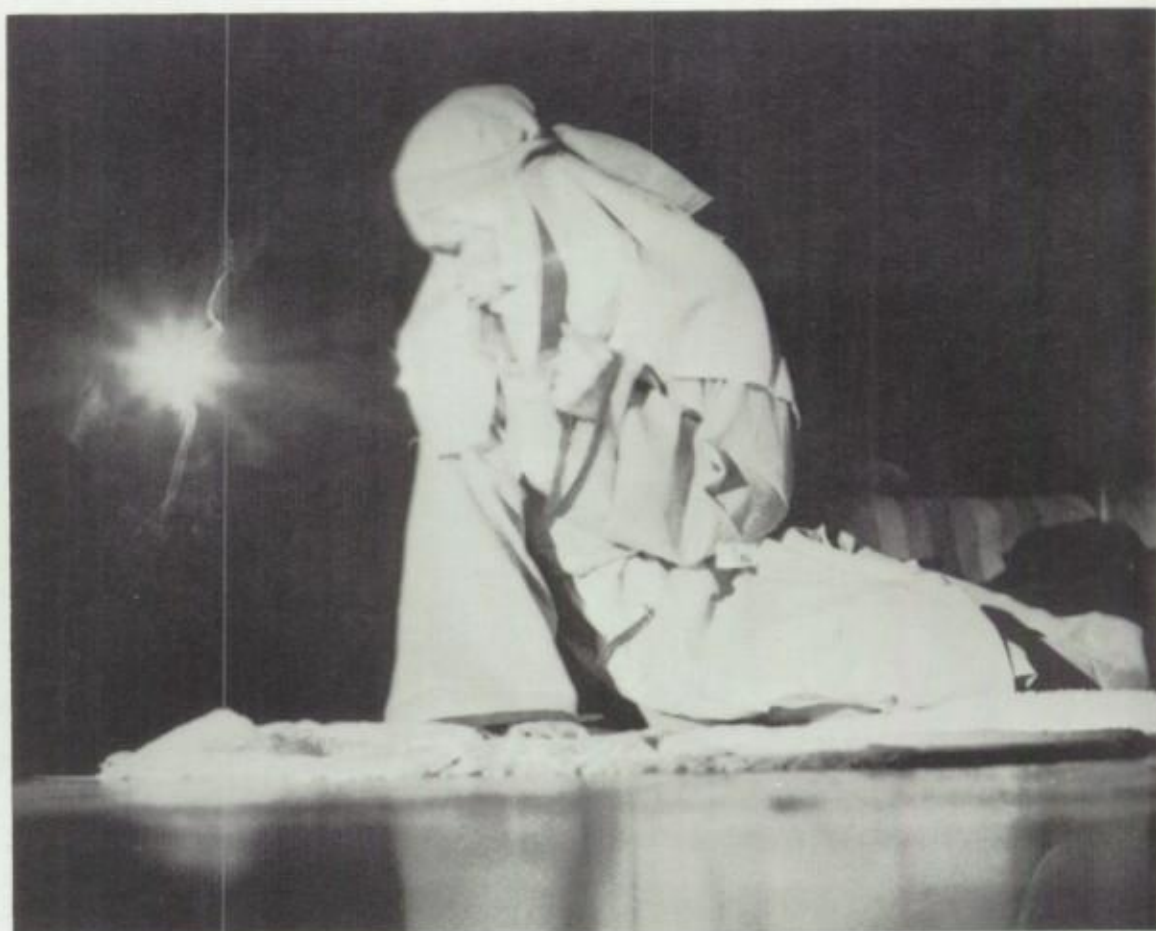

Worn out from a hard practice, the cheerleaders still labor on to reach perfection in their routines.

Gleesome and contented, the student body is satisfied after a successful assembly is dismissed.

Amahl, Mark Erickson, senior, comforts his mother, Sue Elvrum, senior, as she cries in distress at their poorness.

What is the fate of the widowed mother? How will we keep warm? How will we eat? Amahl's mother, Sue Elvrum, senior, knows something will be done for her crippled son.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors"

The "fathers" of Terrace's production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors," Mr. Frank DeMiero and Mr. Ed Aliverti, give direction to part of the cast. Mr. Steve Eells is the pianist.

Making a true Christmas spirit available to many who had not been able to develop one on their own, the opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors" seemed to fill a void in the season.

"Amahl" is a story of a young, crippled shepherd boy and his mother who are visited by the three kings on their way to find the Christ child. The villagers visit Amahl's home to see the strange guests, and bring both food and entertainment. In the end, Amahl offers his crutch for the Child and regains the power to walk. Truly a miracle, this.

Ed Aliverti and Frank DeMiero worked hard along with everyone else getting ready for the production of Terrace's three week wonder.

Amahl asks the valley people to come see the kings and bring what food they can. While there, the peasants do one of their native dances to entertain the kings and celebrate the guests' arrival.

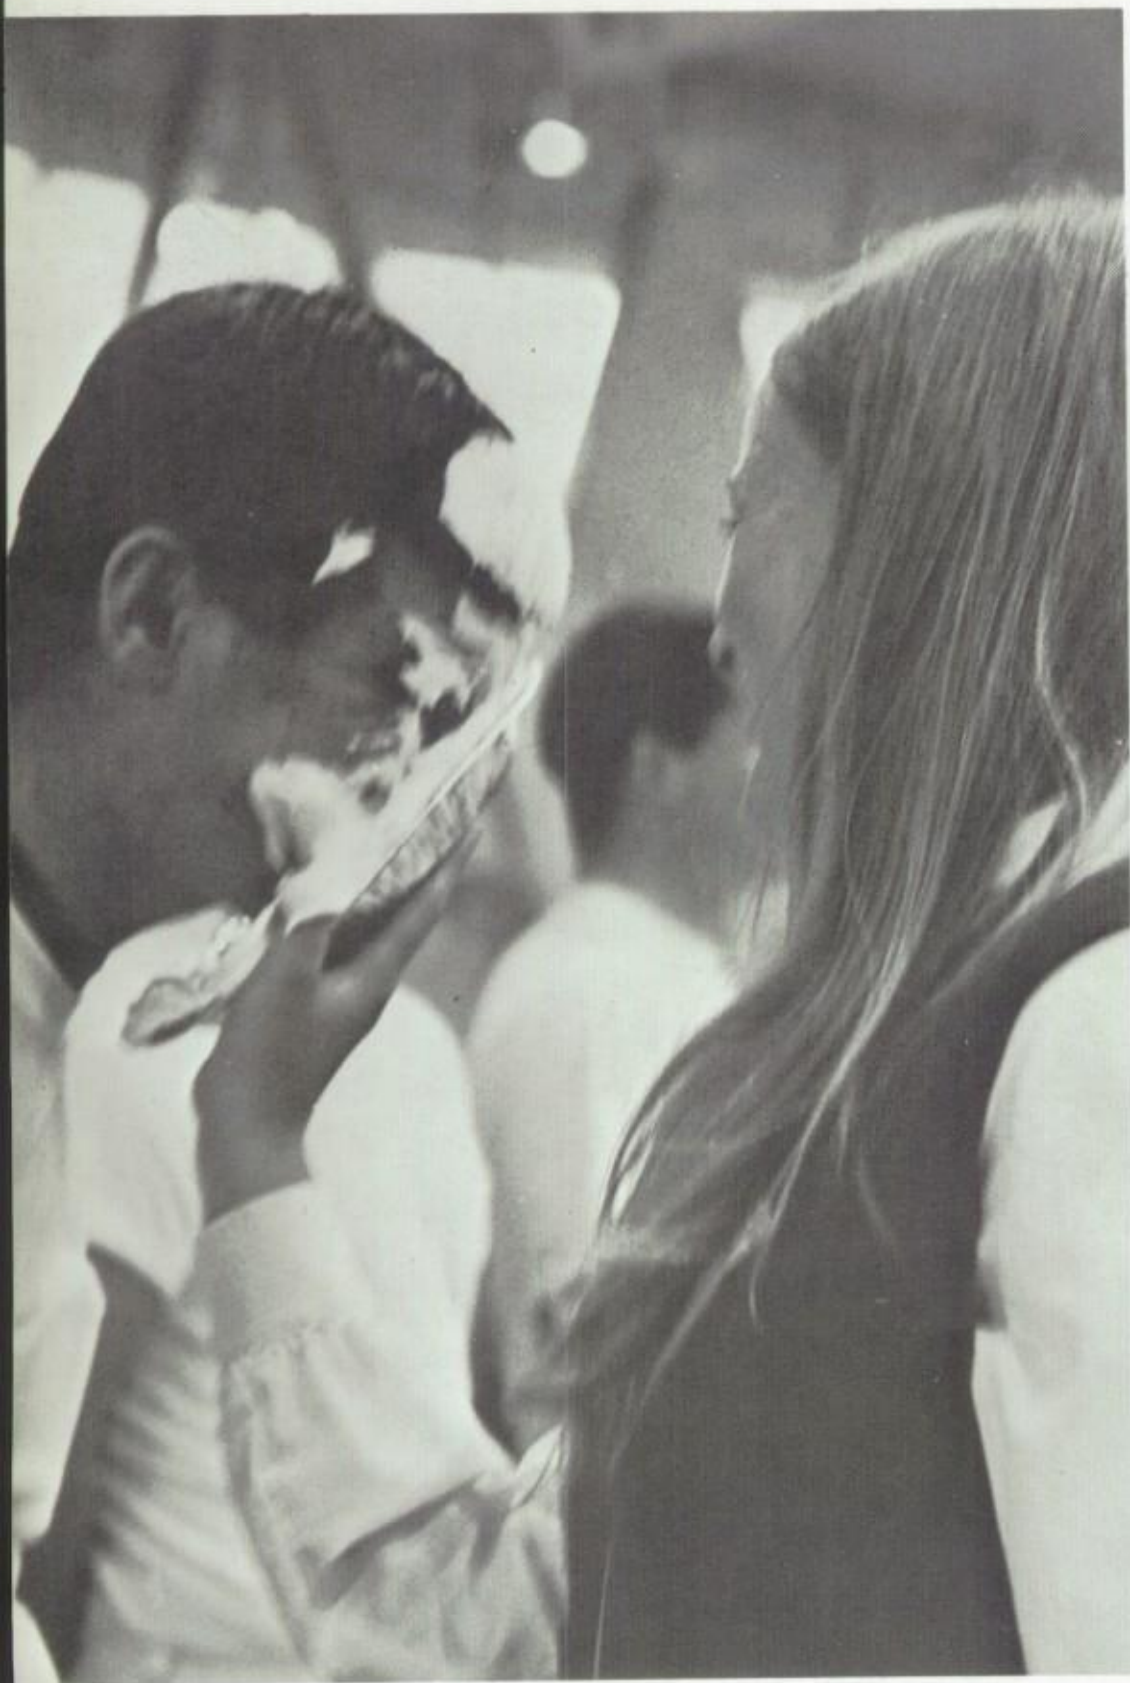

— Terrace's three week miracle fills season

Shocking is the first confrontation between one of the three kings, senior Cecil Boot, and Amahl, played by seniors Bonnie Costa and Mark Erickson, as shown on the faces of all concerned.

Collecting the offerings of the neighbor children is Amahl, Senior Mark Erickson.

Providing good time for

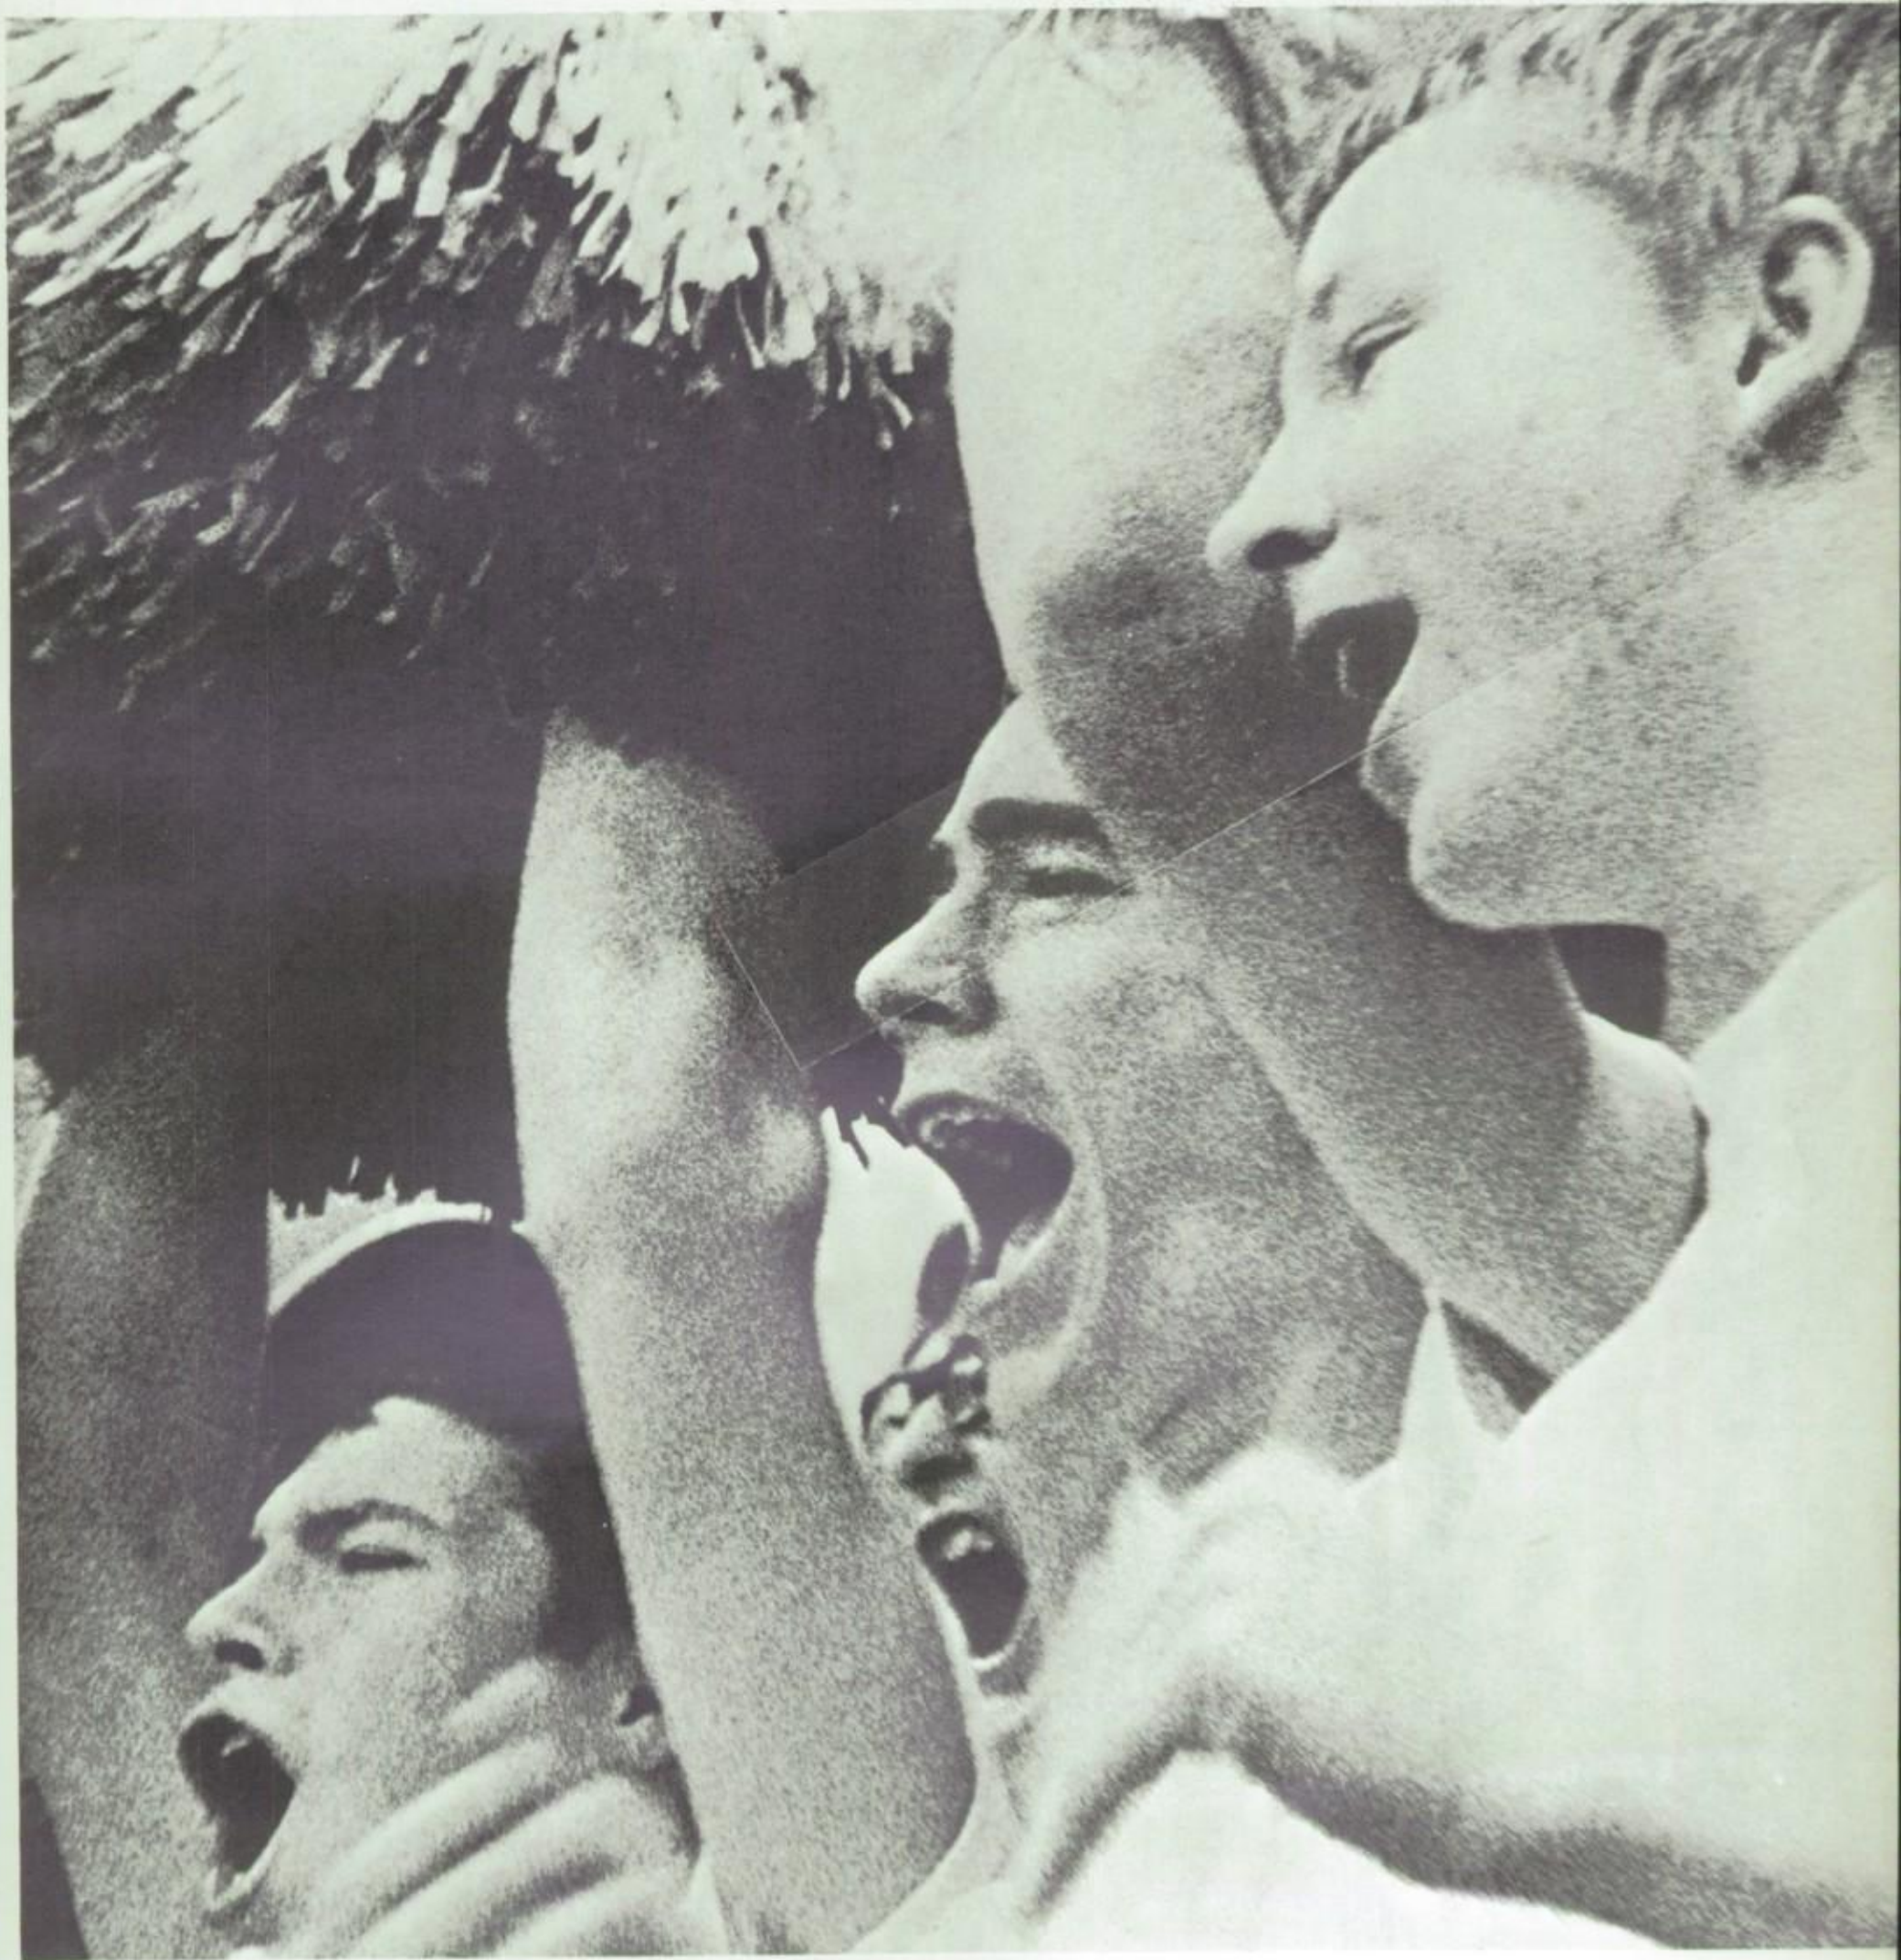

Upon the boys losing the canned food drive, senior Neal Baker receives a "pie-in-the-face" from Barb Miller, senior, Girls' Club treasurer.

Enthusiastically, Doug Roberts, junior horn-blower, is again stirring up pep for a game.

all, assemblies instill spirit, produce laughter . . .

Starting a short-lived trend at Terrace, many enthusiastic athletes have started a unique pep club of their own. Wearing white shirts and carrying a storming voice, these boys led by senior Neal Baker fully supported their fellow athletes in the winter season.

Senior class seems to be reluctant to leave an assembly as shown by Mark Engler, senior.

Sleeping is a very restful thing, especially when you're bored! Taking class "very" easily is Rita Rice, senior.

Observing the Smith Tower in Seattle is the art class on a downtown field trip. This excursion taking place at the Seattle First National Bank is to provide the class with varied art structures within the bank.

Peace, serenity at drop of snowflake

Adjusting his camera for Santa Claus poses is Bob Koch, senior. Art Club uses this project for raising funds.

Tranquility sets the mood as Marie Rubio, sophomore, heads silently, in the falling snow, to her next class.

With the snow in their eyes, Becky Lee, and John Krueger both juniors, walk quietly through the damp corridors.

Showing his electronic students how to analyze a circuit by using an oscilloscope is Mr. Dale Shotwell.

Being photographed by Tim King, senior, is clerical lab student, Sharon Jones, senior.

Cindy Wolfe and Cindy Dale support their team to another victory with enthusiastic cheers.

Learning to argue the facts expertly is one of the many aspects of debate class. Enjoying a friendly conversation are Dave Lowe and John Lawson, seniors.

Revolting as his car is being towed away for having no parking sticker is Buford Ransom, senior Modeling for the Inter-High Fashion Show is the "dreaming" Linda Merriman, junior.

Wrestling matches can be so electrifying that at times one can almost cry! Tingling with frantic excitement is Renee Burgoyne, sophomore team supporter.

Students entail in arguments, fashion shows, events

Wild arguments to mild disagreements seem to center around the HUB all day. Providing themselves with a good discussion on school policies are Milo Pipkin, Gordy Buslach and Jim Quintel, junior class representatives.

As pom-poms fly and enthusiasm soars, the songleaders perform one of their many unique and original routines. This pre-game spirit is one of the many factors that inspires the Hawks on to victory.

This year's spirit leaders are extremely energetic and hard working. Unlike football or basketball, their season lasts throughout the summer and the entire year.

During this time they are constantly busy practicing routines, planning pep assemblies, and building enthusiasm and spirit for the athletic events. Besides these activities, each game day the Rally Squad invades the team room to surprise the team members with good-luck posters and some goodies.

Although squad members must devote much hard work to the squad, in return they gain a fun-filled and rewarding experience.

Members of the Rally Squad are Bonnie Haas, Evie Rhodes, Machel Murdock, Gayle McDonnell, Marti Mallory, Lisa Ward, Pam Driver, Steph Sharp, and John Jury.

Hand in hand and constantly in motion are the Herkies and the yell leader.

With clasped hands and gapping mouths, the tense members of the Rally Squad display diversified emotions. Anguish, anxiety, and shock are all revealed by squad members at a wrestling match.

Nine active pepsters drive spirit machine...

Tolo marks zodiac theme; couples seek fun, fortune

Teaming together toward a common goal, these senior boys demonstrate their strength and ability to carry a big fountain through a small, divided doorway.

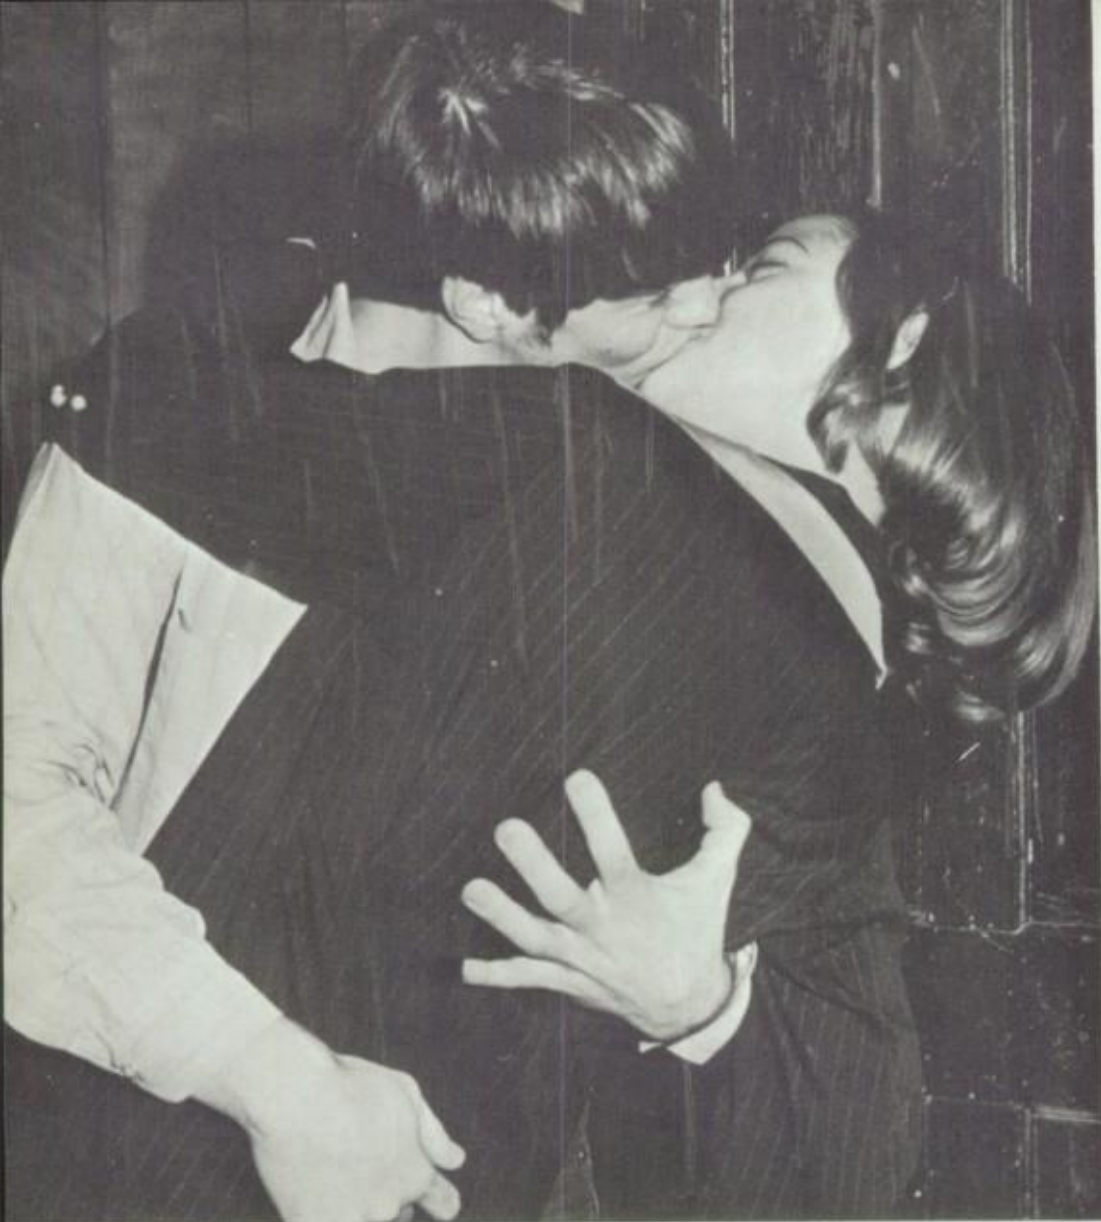

Toiling for Tolo, making the Greek decor part of the affair's overwhelming success are spirited seniors Trista Carlson and Julie Vallejo.

'Love will steer the stars,' as demonstrated by the stars in the eyes of sophomore Pam Larson and her escort, Rick Scates, senior.

"...And love will steer the start." Tolo 1970 is the most exciting dance ever held by Girls' Club. Based around the Zodiac cycle, the theme has an air of the the new generation. Each sign of the Zodiac hangs high upon the walls; glittering in the decor of purple and pink. In a secluded corner lit only by the sparkle of various candles, a fortune-teller pours out fantasies to her contemplating customers. Twelve different types of cakes surround the room; each decorated with a sign of the Zodiac. Bursts of colors flash throughout the room as the sign of the sun glares down upon its worshipers. Saving the maxi-dressed girls from getting the edges of dresses soaked, the chaperones make last minute attempts to mop up the water from a leaking fountain. Floundering through the many preparation, head chairmen Sue Elvrum and Carolyn Kallstrom, work arduously for two months preceeding the big event. Working together and taking much personal time makes Tolo 1970 a wonderful memory.

"I wouldn't want you to think I was backward!" Embracing Louise Bendt (understudy), Sam Elwonger expresses his feelings.

Being a stage crew member is one of the utmost jobs of presenting a play. Jerry Wahlstrom, junior, works on setting up props.

Spring Play involves talented hearts- 'young and gay'

Certain techniques are used in applying the make-up properly at right, Cindy Kemper, sophomore, employs the "gooey mess" upon a cast member.

Gina Bailey and Stephanie Bonneau rejoice after learning they're going to be on their own.

Emily Kimbrough is tearfully frightened as she thinks the chair which she threw into the water to help a man overboard, hit and killed him.

Later, to Emily's relief, the admiral enters to congratulate her as she unveiled the identity of a stowaway.

Clowning around under the cherry blossoms in preparation for the Talent Show of April 10-11, is "The Black and White Affair," composed of Mark Gilbert, John Walker, Earl Brock, John Lawson, Cecil Boot, Ben Umayum, Tim Yates, Bob Bleiler, and Buford Ransom.

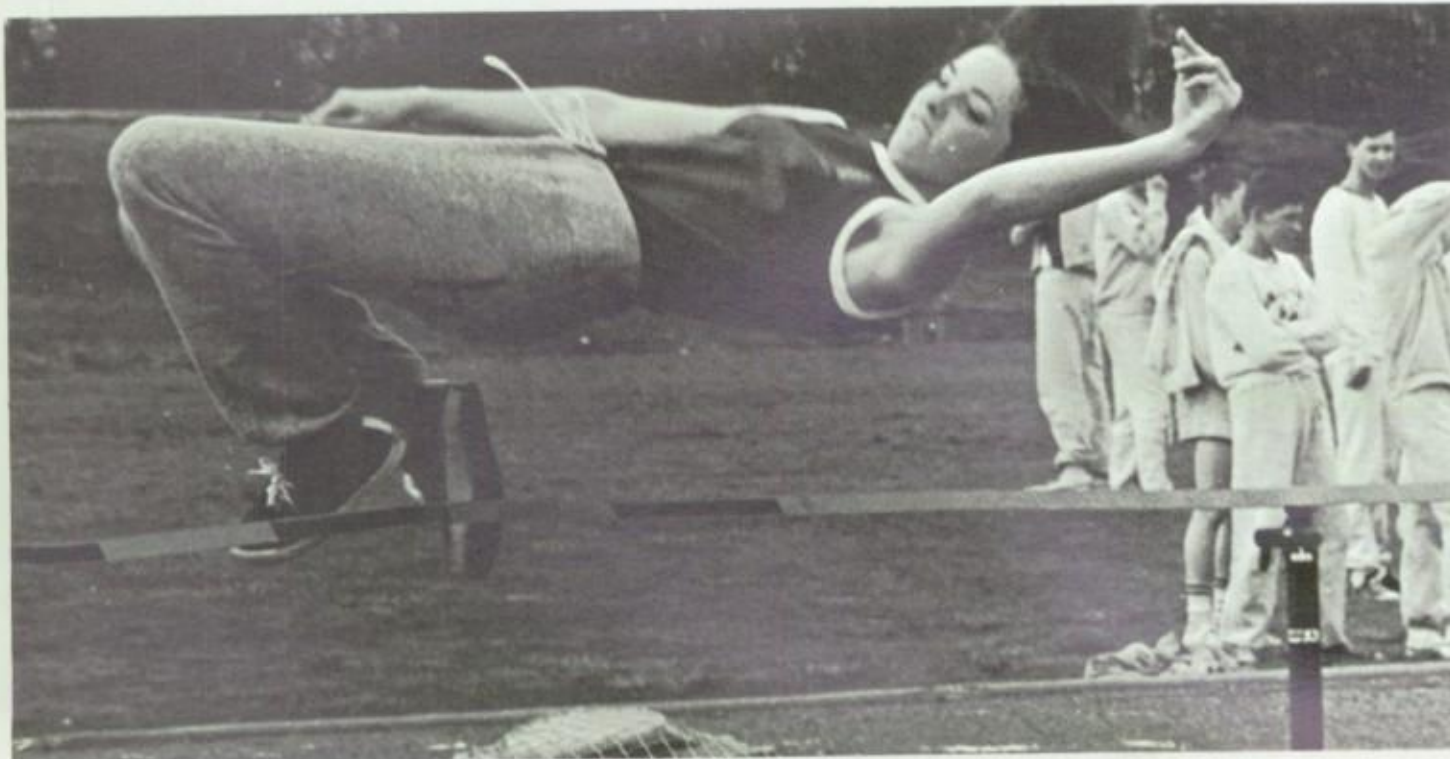

While auditioning for the spring Talent Show, Richard Nelson, junior, sings in an operatic pose.

Cindy Olson, junior trackster, proves her ability by much practice and hard work. Flying over the high jump bar is one of the specialties Cindy competes with during track meets.

Feminine tracksters run, jump , throw to victories

Girls involved in spring track experience many trials and tribulations throughout their season. Headed by Coach Margaret King, these seventeen girls run, jump, throw and skip their way to numerous victories. New red , white , and silver uniforms perk up the field as the girls infest contending schools. Hopes are high for a first place seasonal standing.

Announcing for the district's last "Pops" Concert is Mr. Ed Aliverti , counselor. For a grand finale, the four high schools in District 15 will join together to sing "America the Beautiful."

Growling some remark to John Krueger, junior , at the "Pops" Concert is Pam Christensen , junior , a member of Dynamics.

Gazing intently at the variety of wares displayed at the Art Fair is Mrs. Jean Ove , adviser for the Art Club. Featuring original works by students, this event gives many talented artists a chance to exhibit their skills.

'Symphony of spring,' inspiring for artists,
musicians, politicians

Yawning happily as she goes over the agenda for an upcoming Inter-High meeting is Sue Elvrum, senior.

Carefully examining a piece of fruit to make sure it has reached its peak of mellowness is "chef" Rick Scates, senior.

Going over the minutes of a recent Inter-High meeting are Cecil Boot , senior, and Jody Keys, a senior at Meadowdale.

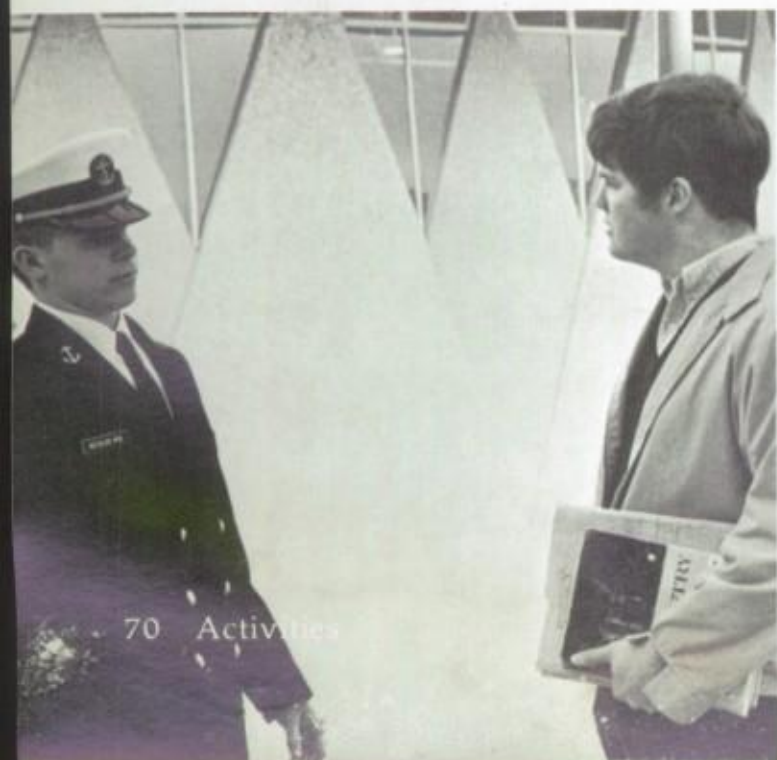

Spring fever ignites . . . excitement burns in all

Starting off the season with a 6-1 victory, baseball begins stepping on the right foot, as the Music Department rushes around entertaining junior highs. Mother Daughter represents full fashion as the Dad-Daughter Banquet falls through. Zooming through the streets are cars of the senior class Car Rally, as the Slave Auction is "heavy" -- for the slaves. Booming voices cheer out at Rally Squad try-outs as the Spring Play closes a success. Spring fever burns us all . . . over.

Nerves on end, sore limbs and tight muscles accompany the many hardworking girls who participate in the Rally Squad turn-outs.

Returning graduate Mike Kessler discusses the ROTC program at the University of Washington with Roger Seatthlee, senior.

Each week diligent workers of Mr. Malnes prepare spring announcements for the public on the reader board. Throwing up an extra letter for Rod Martin is his fellow senior, Chuck Edelbrock. Looking on is senior Roger Connolly.

"A Time For Us," senior ball theme, will linger in the mind's eye as will the high school years. While observing home base for the 1970 senior ball, chairmen (pictured left and right) browse through the Washington Plaza Hotel lobby:

-Swinburne, An Interlude

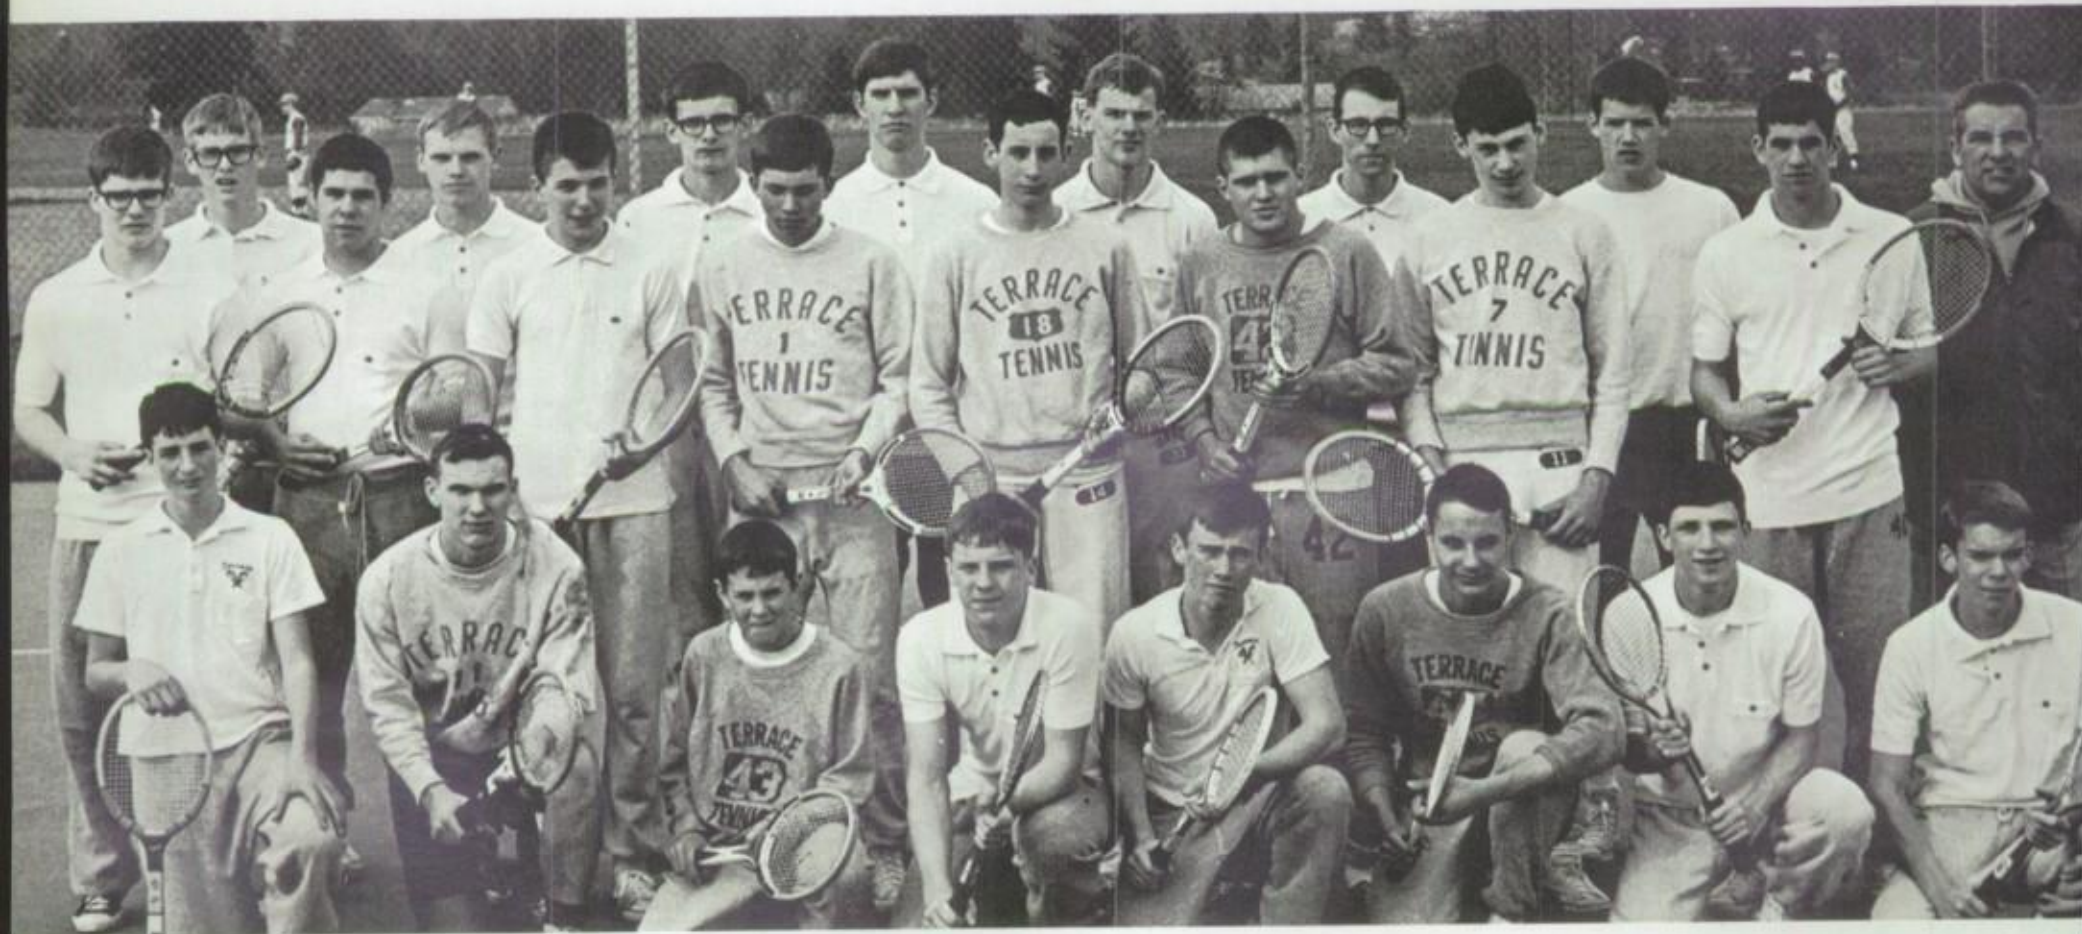

Luv-one, luv-all; lobbers, smashers, swing again

Showing two different ways of smashing the ball are senior, Scott Morgan, RIGHT, and Mark Engler, LEFT. Scott prefers the side smash while Mark's favorite style is coming down on top of the ball. Holding number one position, Scott has lettered since his sophomore year, and was chosen captain while a junior. Being a real competitive player, Mark Engler is the only other returning letterman.

Stroking the ball over the net , left , is consistent Roland Roberge, junior.

With much strength and control, Mark Engler, senior above, powerfully enters his follow through of hitting the ball.

Tracksters attempt to set records, reach new heights

Squinting interestingly at a multitude of events, panting wonderingly as tracksters pound down a cinder stretch, soaring into a pit, or shooting a missile from a body built like a battleship, crowds unite in common expectation of results at track meets.

Sprinting lightly but powerfully from RIGHT TO LEFT, balancing a fiberglass, flexible pole within agile hands, John Krueger, junior, glides toward the vaulting pit. Gaining forward momentum from a quick dash, John plants his pole at the base of the pit to fly up to the bar. Upon reaching the bar, he flops over and onto a mat below. Flying excites John.

Curling fingers tightly around a mud-slippery disc is Ray Howland, junior.

Hugging the air, curling over the bar with experience, Kyle Buslach, senior, smoothly clears the bar.

Expectantly awaiting a relay baton, Mike Baunach, senior, alerts his muscles and mind.

Muscles pulsing with power, Chuck Edelbrock, senior, catapults a shotput.

Hippity-hop to the sand pit! Leaping rabbit-like into the sand, Bill Hale, senior, recoils for extra feet.

Gliding effortlessly over hurdles, Bill Hale, senior, LEFT, attempts to break his personally set high hurdle record.

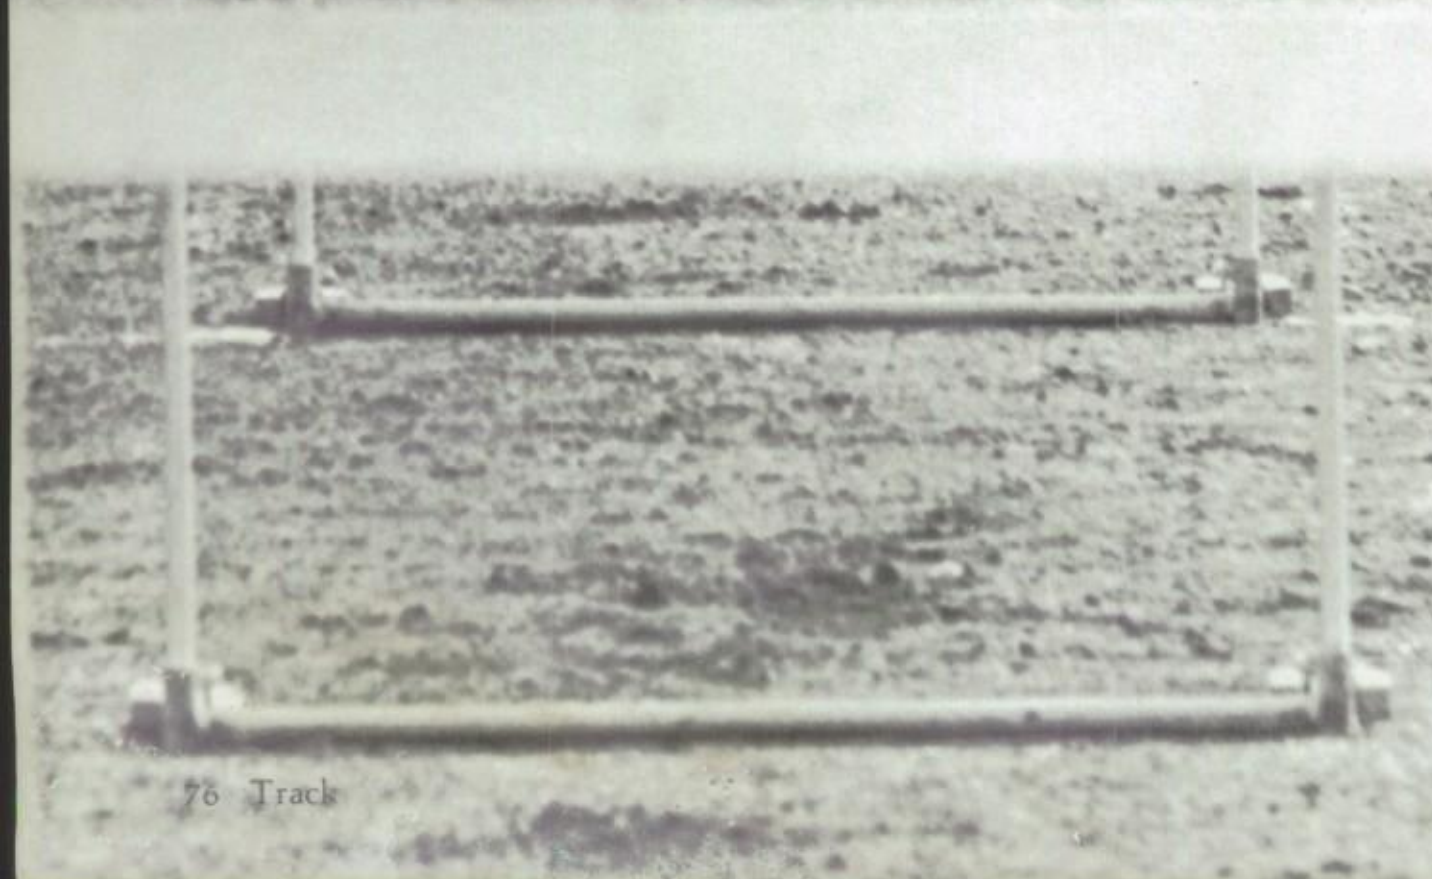

Overflowing with experience and potential, tracksters leap, stumble, and flop to fulfill the hopes of a confident coach. For the first time, the squad has the depth to not only take firsts, but seconds and thirds as well.

Similar to "Hank Aaron" is senior Buford Ransom while smashing the ball with a powerful snap of the wrist.

Using his restful moments wisely, senior catcher, Mar Erickson, decides on his next calls.

Coughing and choking up dust is Neal Baker, senior, while tearing into second base.

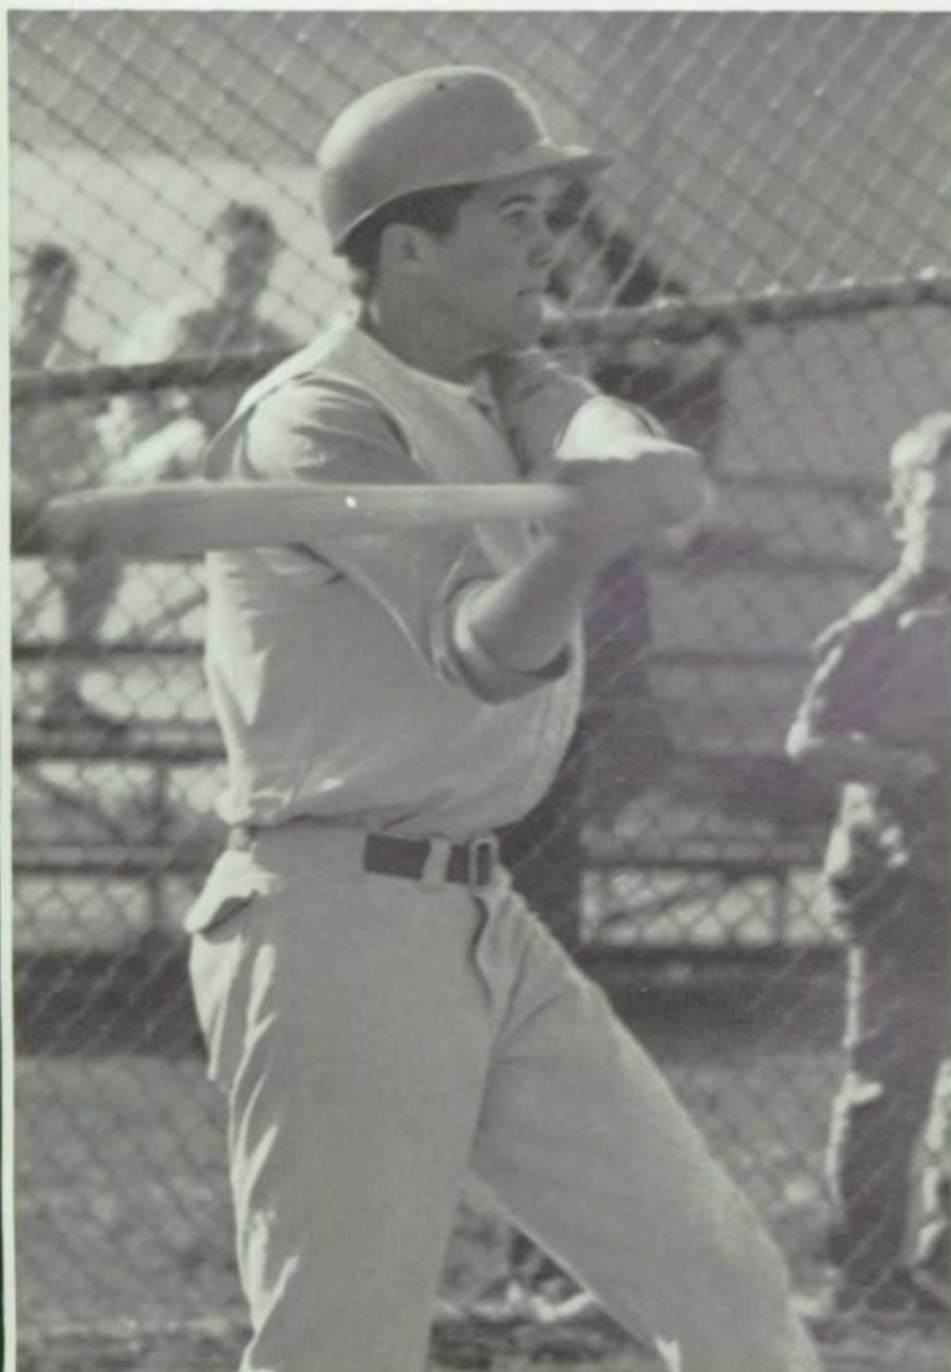

Tensely awaiting the advance of the ball, Jeff Voog senior, changes position.

"Hey, Ump! Anybody with eyes can see that that was a ball instead of a strike!" While trying to keep his "cool", Mr. Sam Beesley, assistant baseball coach, discusses a call with the umpire.

Balls, balks, buttercups, few fans: 'Batter up!'

With a determined look on his face, Craig Ortloff, junior, goes after the elusive pellet.

Bulleting the ball over home plate, Dave White, senior, completely involves himself with the pitch.

The do's and don'ts in baseball, as demonstrated by Curt Carbary, junior, appear to be very basic. Do swing straight and hard. Don't lose your head. Simple...

Getting themselves in shape for the hectic season ahead, Dave Ford, junior, and Neal Baker, senior, work out strenuously.

Terry Prewitt, junior, squints fiercely into the sun as he awaits the first pitch.

Inning after inning out, safe, hit, miss

First baseman Cecil Boot, senior, is on his toes as the opponent's batter connects with a swing that may give him his first step to home.

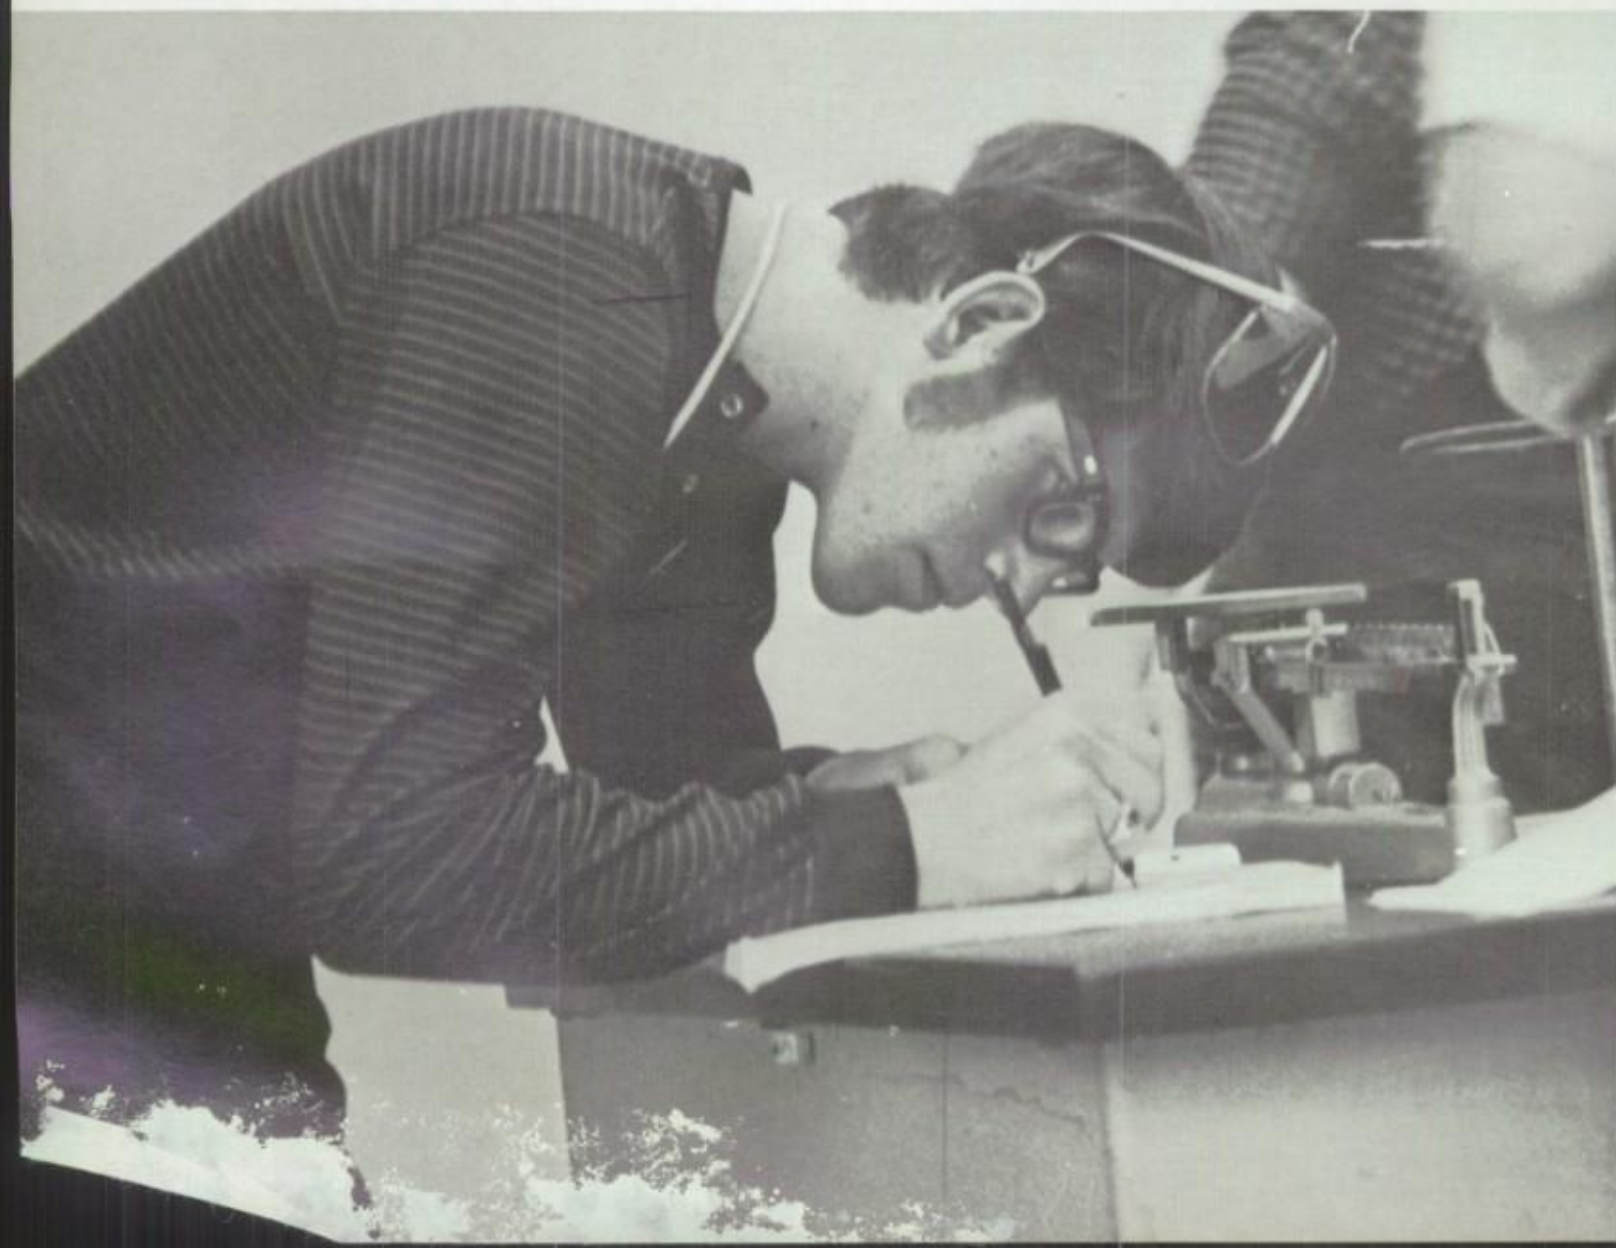

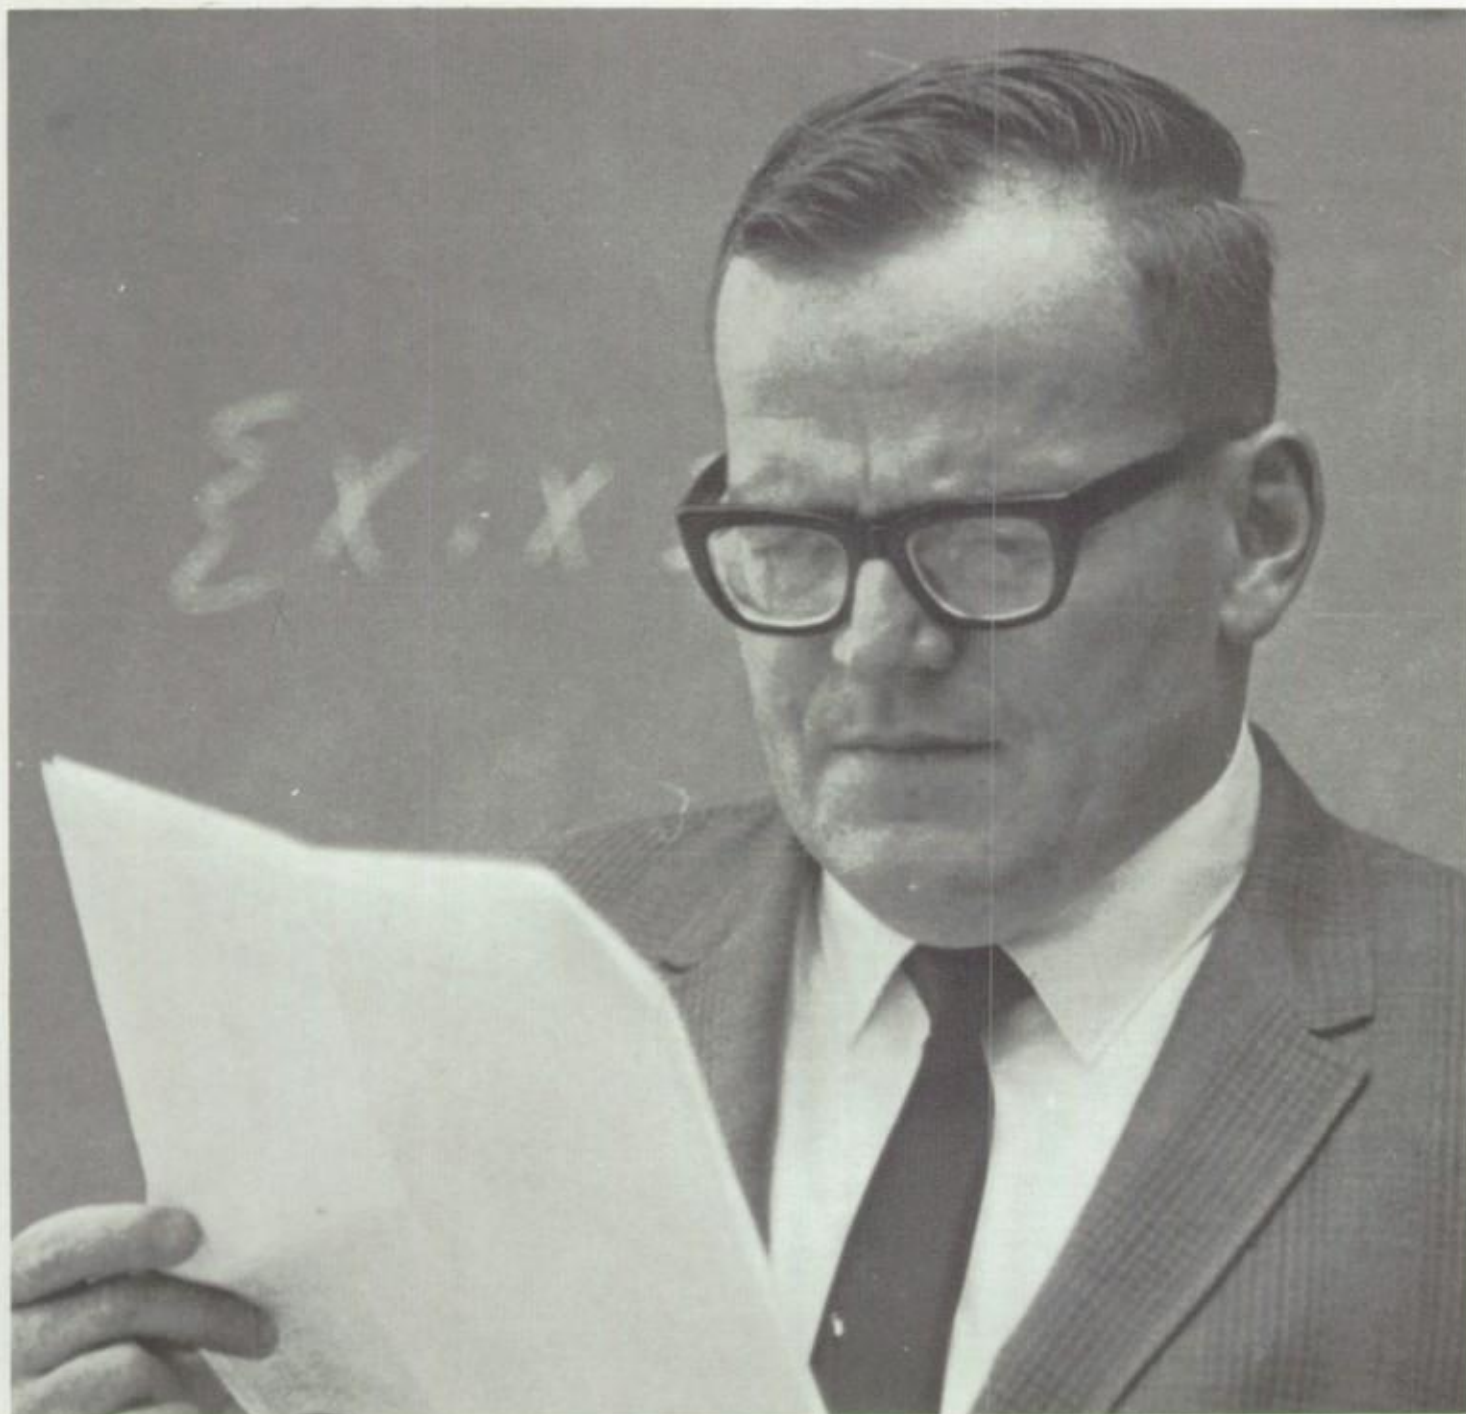

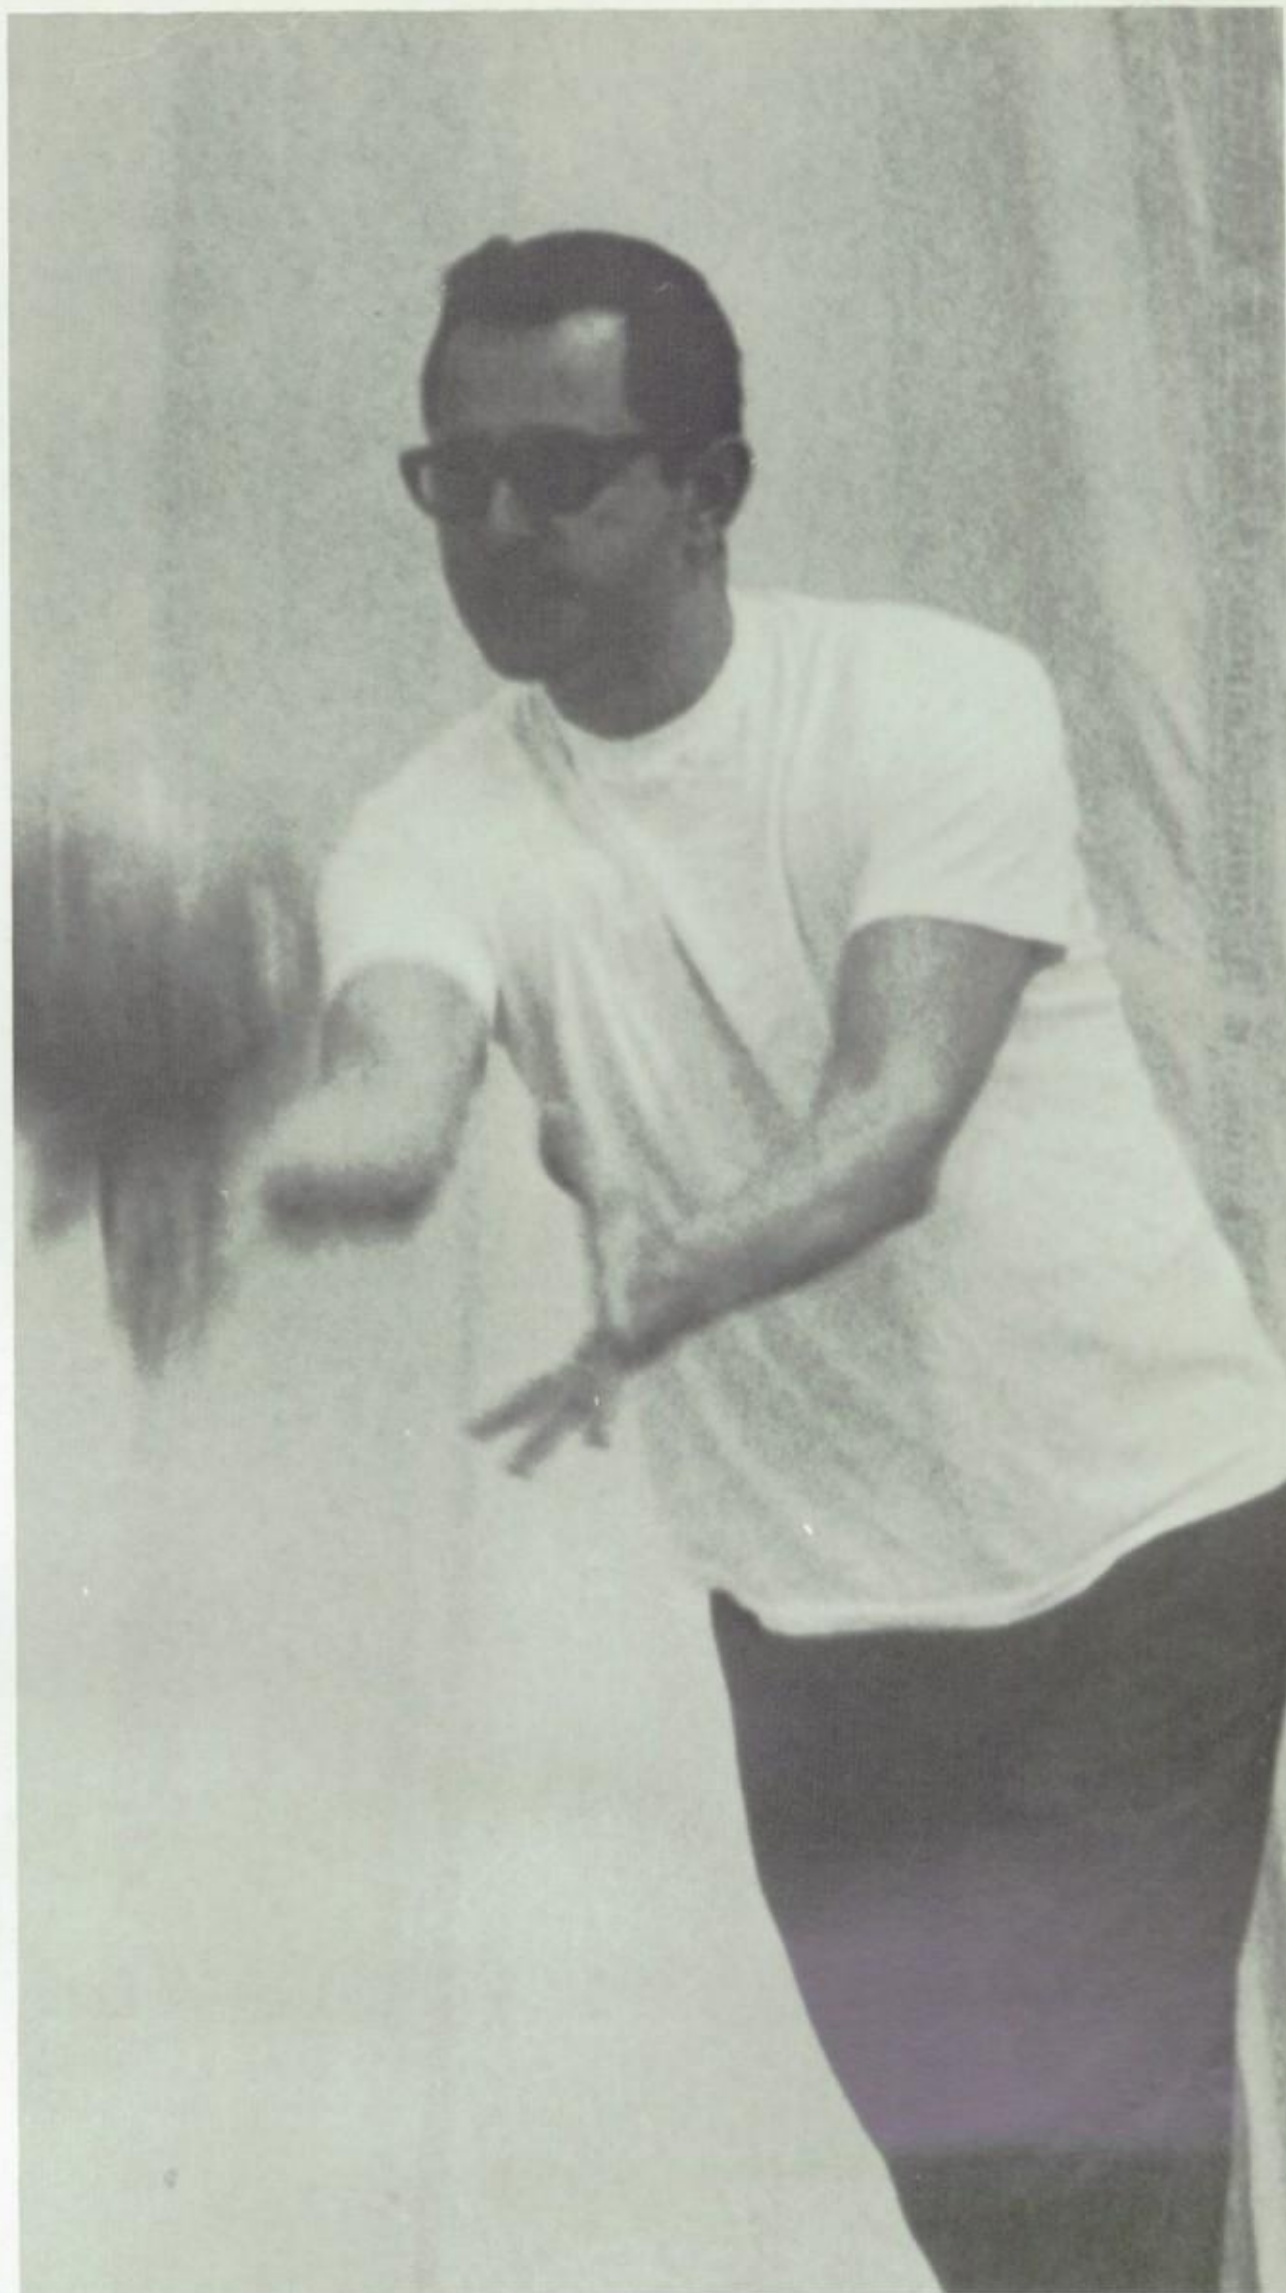

Under the watchful eye of first-year varsity Coach Bob Freisen, Dave White, returning senior pitcher, winds up and delivers.

Varsity Hawks are, standing, Chris Paulson, Craig Ortloff, Neal Baker, Dave Ford, Cecil Boot, Ryan Gausman, Jeff Voogd, Kim Voelker, John Walker and Coach Bob Freisen. Kneeling are Dave White, Artie Cisneros, Curt Carbary, Terry Prewitt, Mark Erickson, Buford Ransom, and Jim Dunn.

Members of the varsity squad practice each afternoon in the soggy quagmire known as the MTHS baseball field. Lack of attendance by spectators does not stop this group from giving their best effort to provide Terrace with a baseball season to remember.

Working to bring news to the eye of the reader are Cynny Lowman and Randy Rauscher, both seniors and members of the busy HAWKEYE staff.

Accuracy is the goal of Rick Hall, sophomore, as he carefully plans and draws a layout for the greater-than-ever TEMPO '70.

English: the never-ending talk of time

Co-operation between newcomers and the experienced enables the TEMPO staff to reach each deadline successfully. Katy Gunn, junior, explains the tricks of the trade to Laure Schindler, sophomore.

Friendship and loyalty are shown in Speech by Dale Wilson, senior, and companion.

"Buy your TEMPO now" rings throughout the school as full or down payments are received during all three lunches.

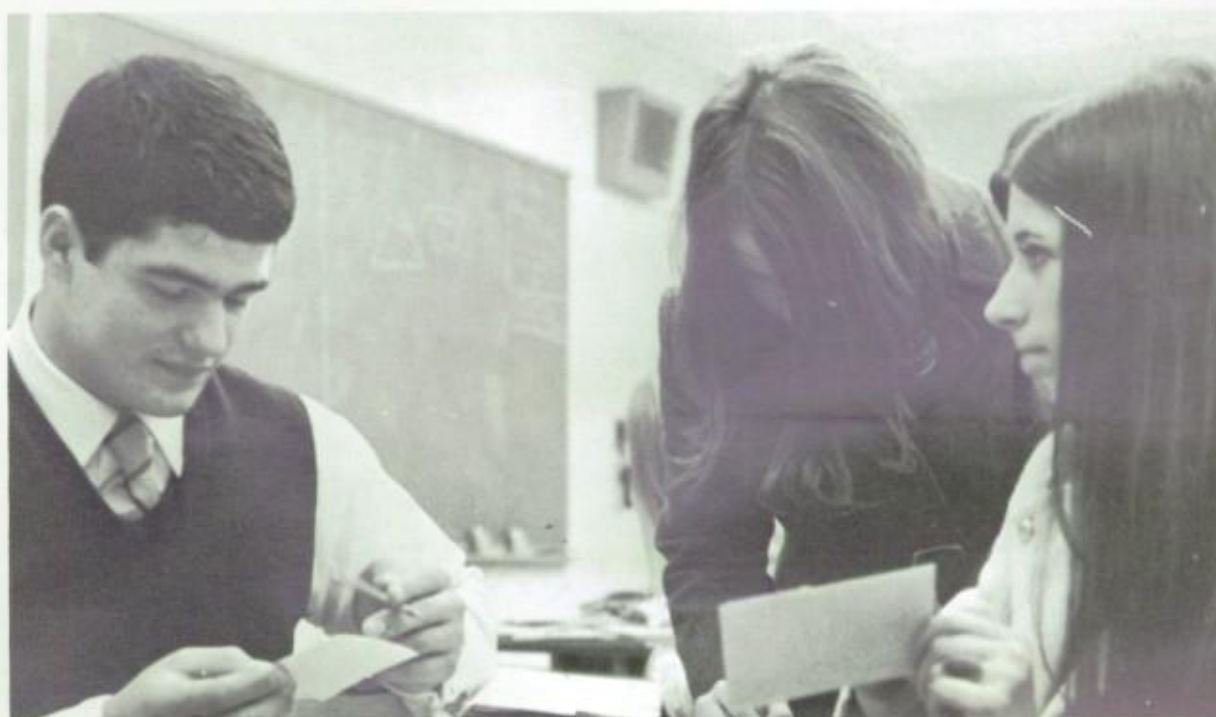

Expressing opinions plays a large role in the debate class. Nancy Cooper, junior, tells her side of the story.

Natural skill emerges as dancing Earl Brock, junior, demonstrates the correct method of swinging and swaying to the beat in Speech.

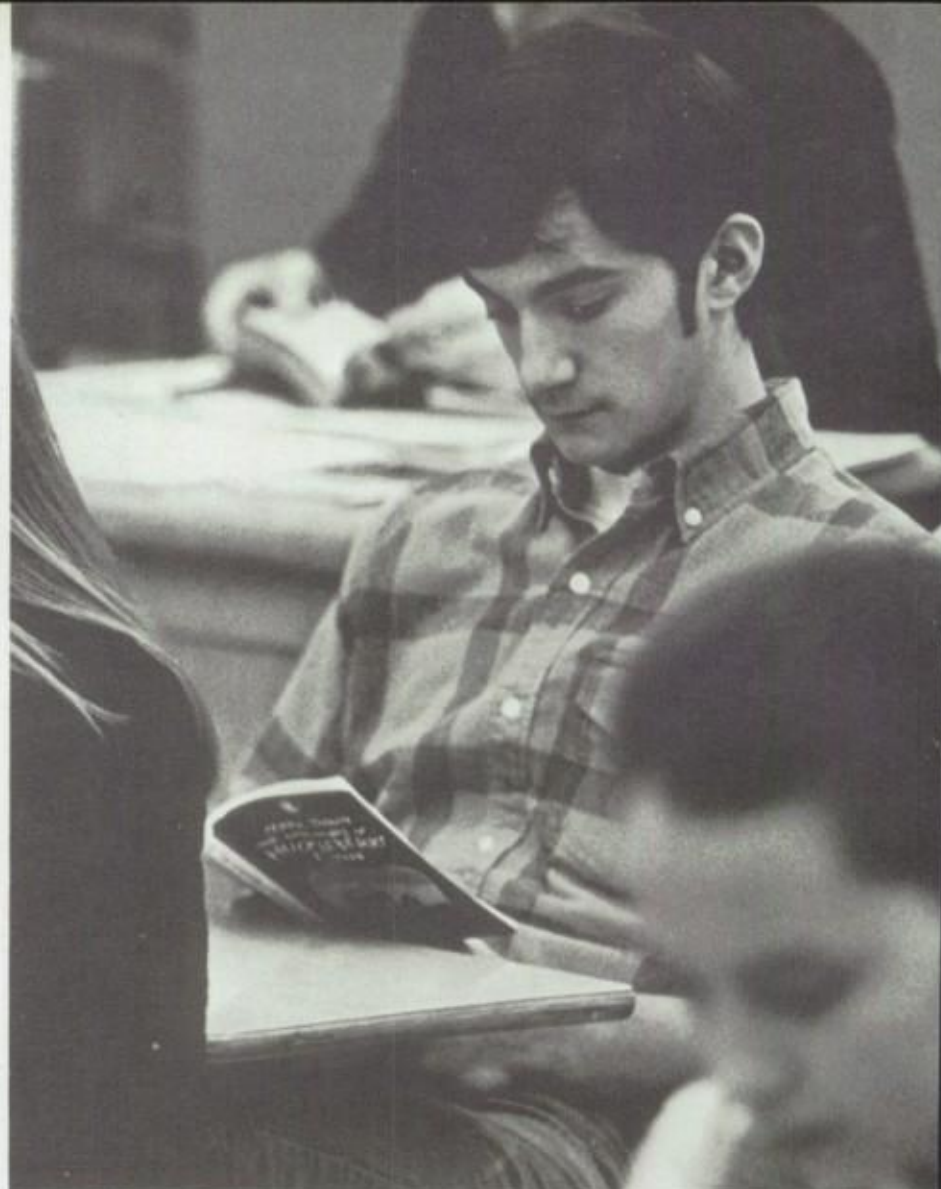

From essays and novels to speeches and deadlines, the English curriculum is by no way sparse. Offering much more than the required sophomore and junior English, this department expands to include the fields of journalism, speech, yearbook, and a number of senior classes including Shakspeare, humanities, college prep, short stories, novel, and poetry. Adding excitement, the members of speech class and HAWKEYE are film producers. The first reel, "Spirit" brought profitable success. There is no way to escape the never-ending English classes. We run into it in all walks of life. Rich or poor, young or old, weak or strong, for all, English is the talk of time.

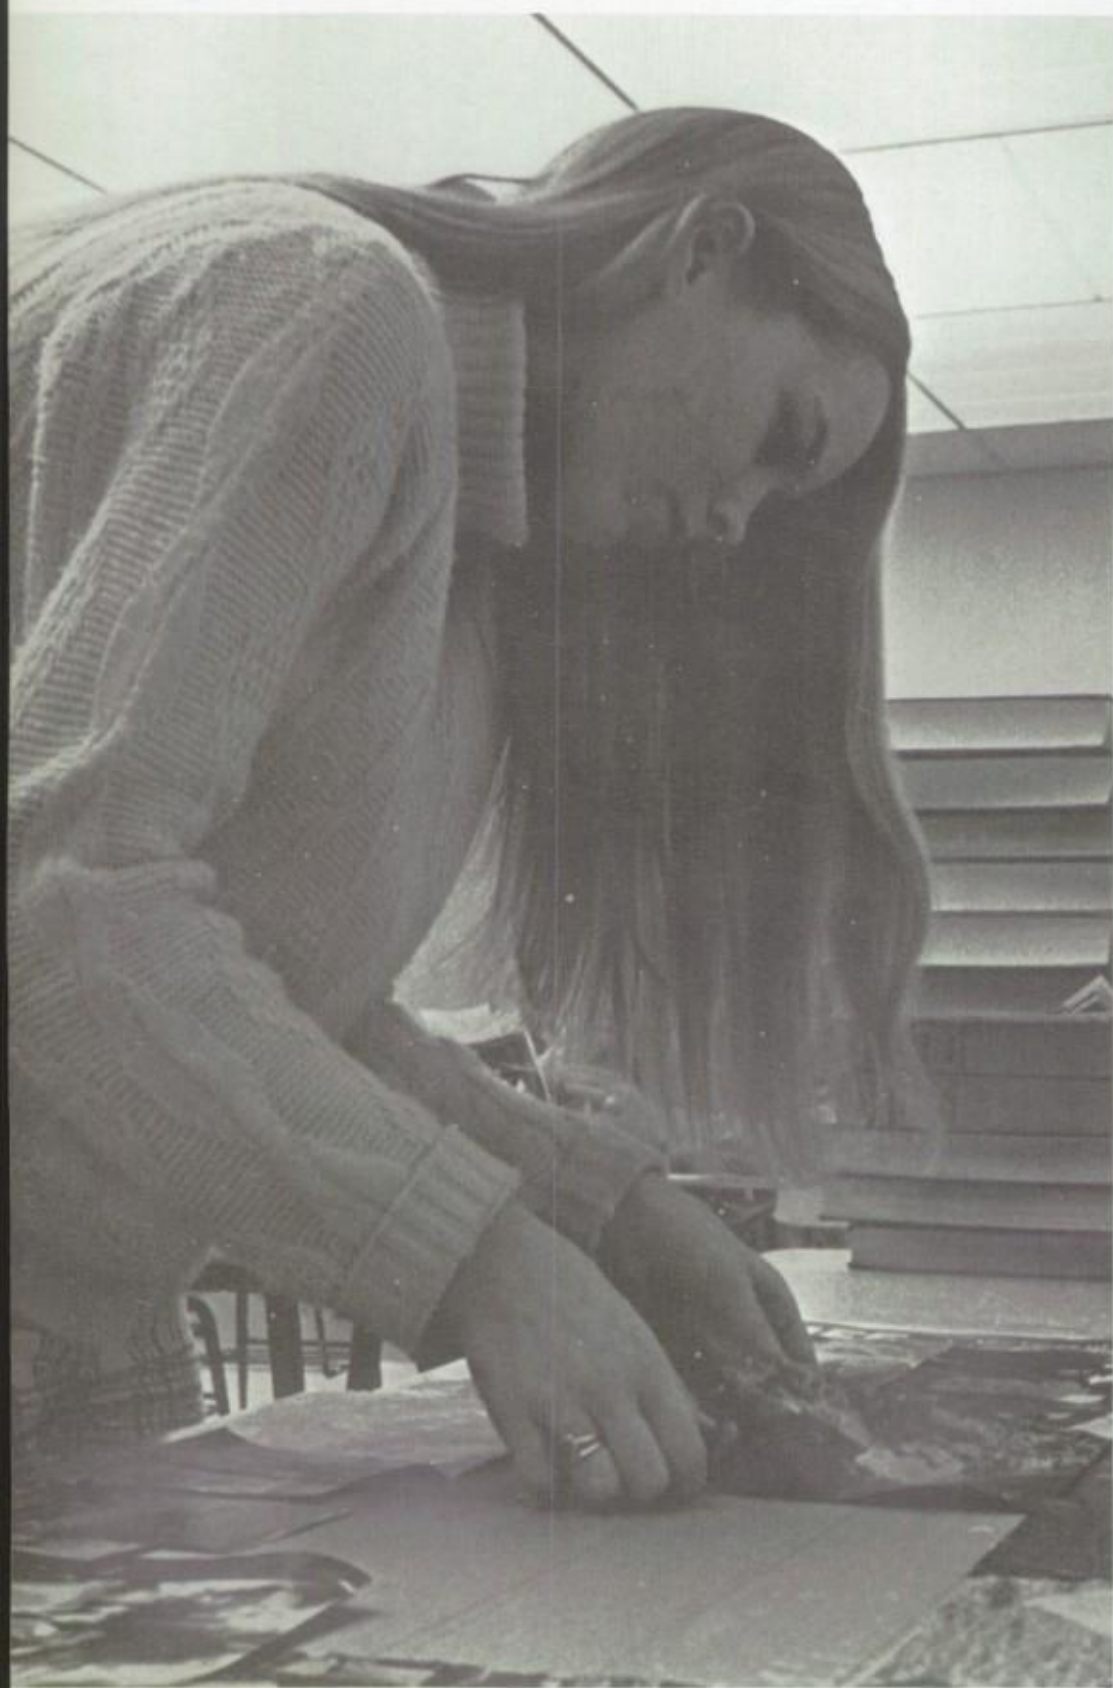

Pictures tell the school year. Sorting clear from blurred and action-filled from dull are Bill Machado, senior, Teri Koepp, junior, and Diane Hill, senior, all members of the annual staff.

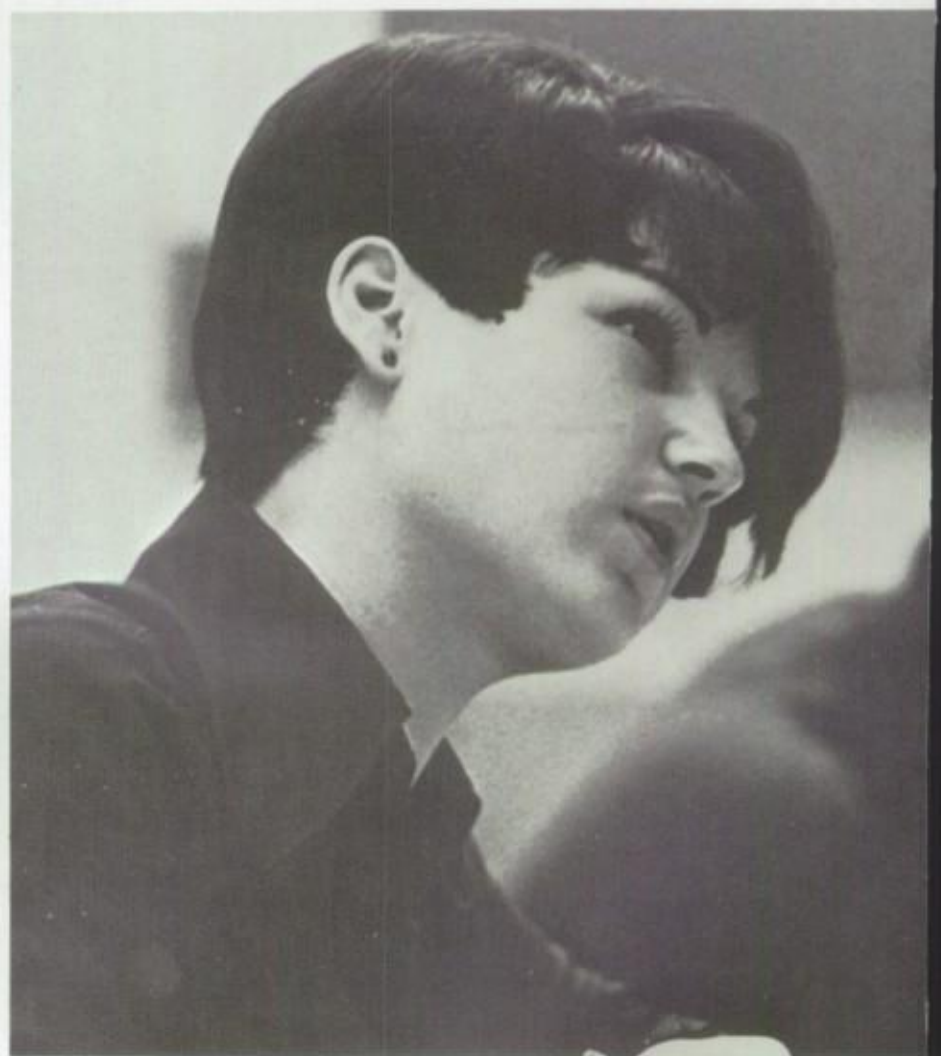

Offering his assistance, Mr. Aase, the debate teacher, helps Katy Gunn, a junior, memorize an oration for a future tournament.

Engrossed in his reading, the junior Huck Finn himself, Jim Quintel reads a Mark Twain classic in class.

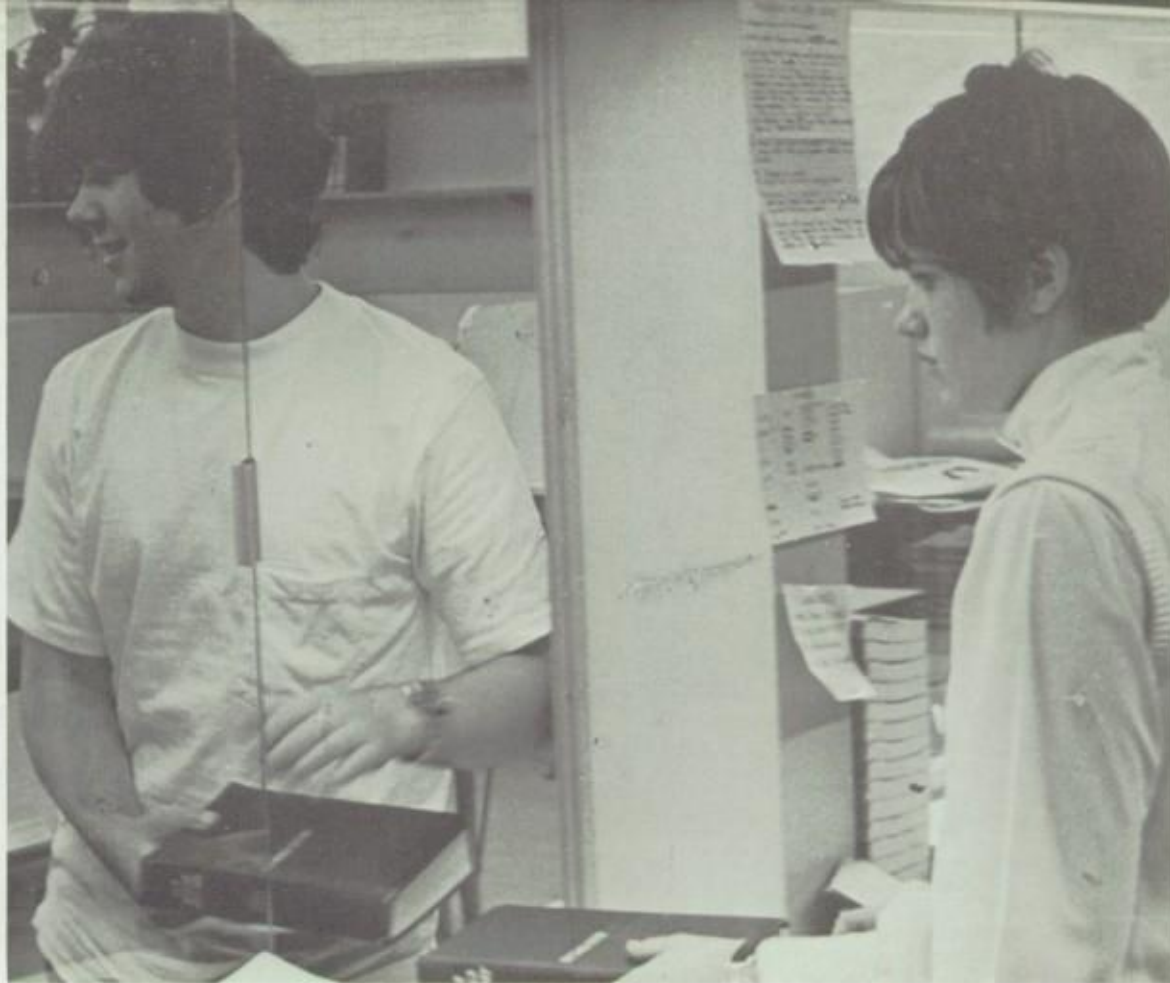

Building an unusual collage, busy Candy Tinsley, senior, arranges her picture choices for creative writing class.

In English, pretty and petite Diane Beam, sophomore, dreams up another creative thought.

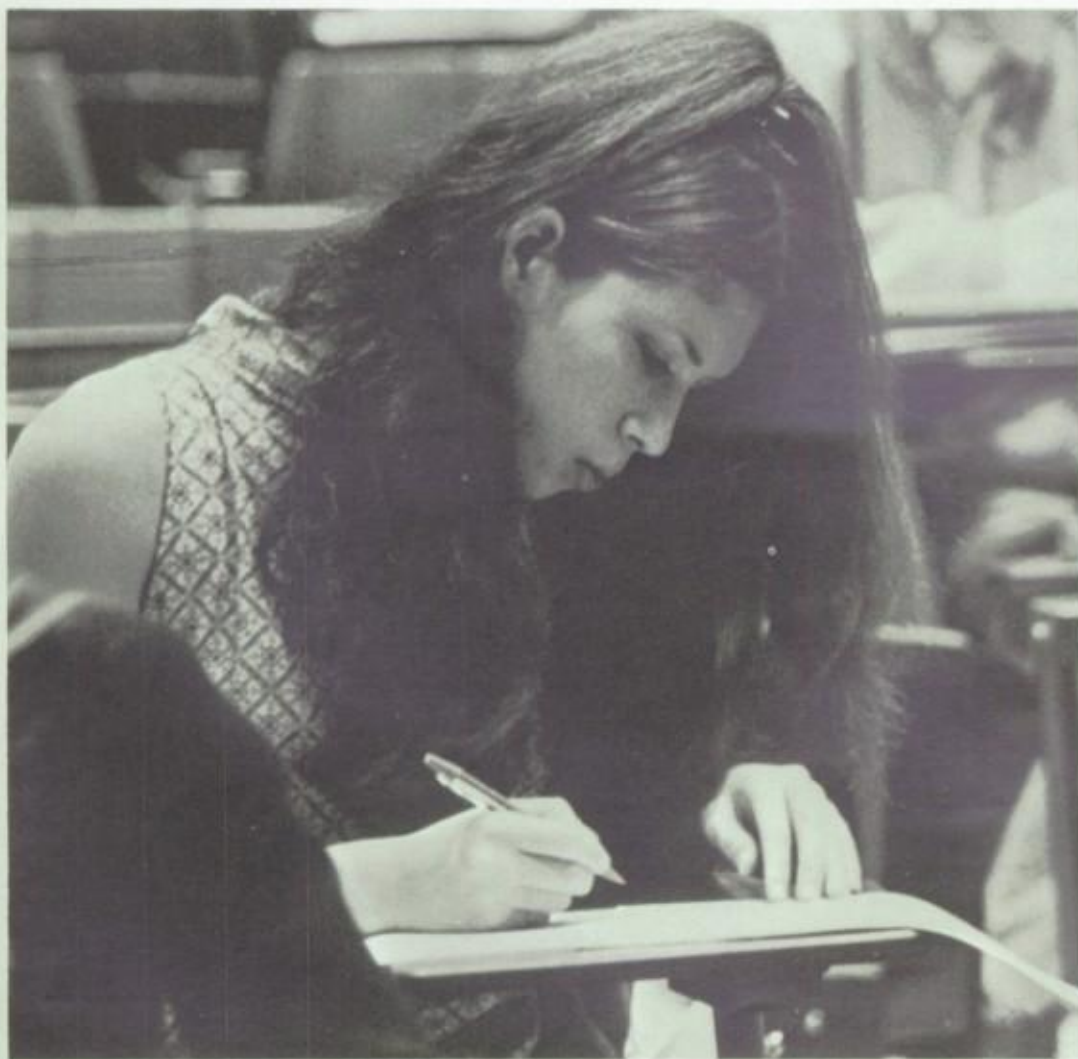

Exchanging a library card for a history book becomes a regular routine of sophomores during world history.

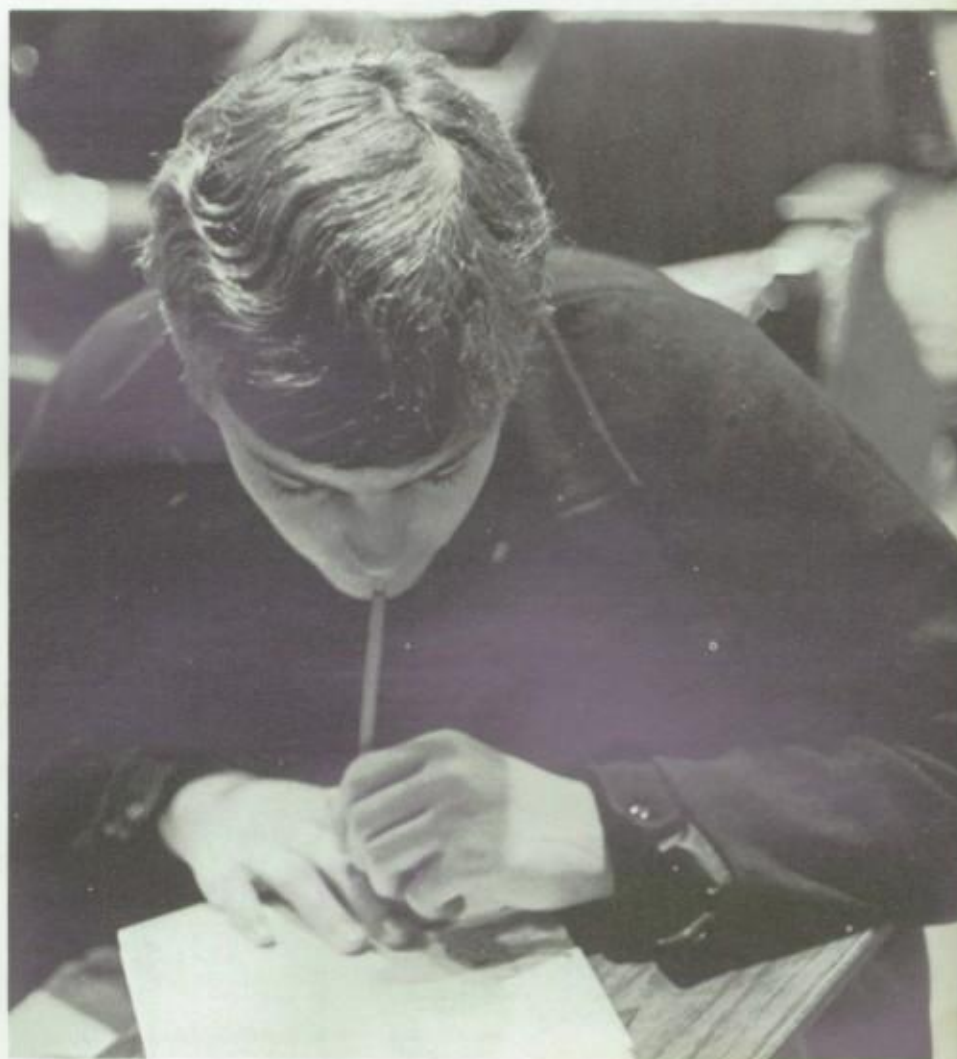

Something catches their attention as Frank Sykora, sophomore, is assisted by Michelle Gannon, supplying him with the necessary books.

Through ages history grows, knowledge mounts

The Little Theatre allows teachers room to expand their class during a test. With the seats near her empty, Shelly Keener, junior, carefully takes an exam.

While in history, Jerry Dunn, junior, intensely studies the assignment hoping the answers he selects are correct.

Do not pass "go" and do not collect $200! With a monopoly of activities, contemporary problems, including Don Kreiman, Pam Rock and Sharon Snow, seniors, visits the city jail.

"Moving up in history" are the ever busy classes of the complex history department. Sophomores experience a first in team teaching during the world history classes. With United States history as a required subject, juniors are also eligible to take courses such as contemporary problems and political theory. Seniors have all classes available to them including minority races, which explains racial problems throughout the world. Learning the fundamentals of living is taught in the community living and city administration classes.

Our world and welcome to it: Minority races . . . Polit

Team teaching is one of the biggest aspects of the history department. Various teachers take a subject and discuss it with many classes. Giving a speech to her class is Mrs. Ora Cottrill.

Taking notes on a world history class are Debbie Bolinger, senior, and Liz Engel, sophomore.

Refusing to agree with a fellow student, Lynda Molitor, senior, carries on a lively conversation.

al theory . . . History . . .

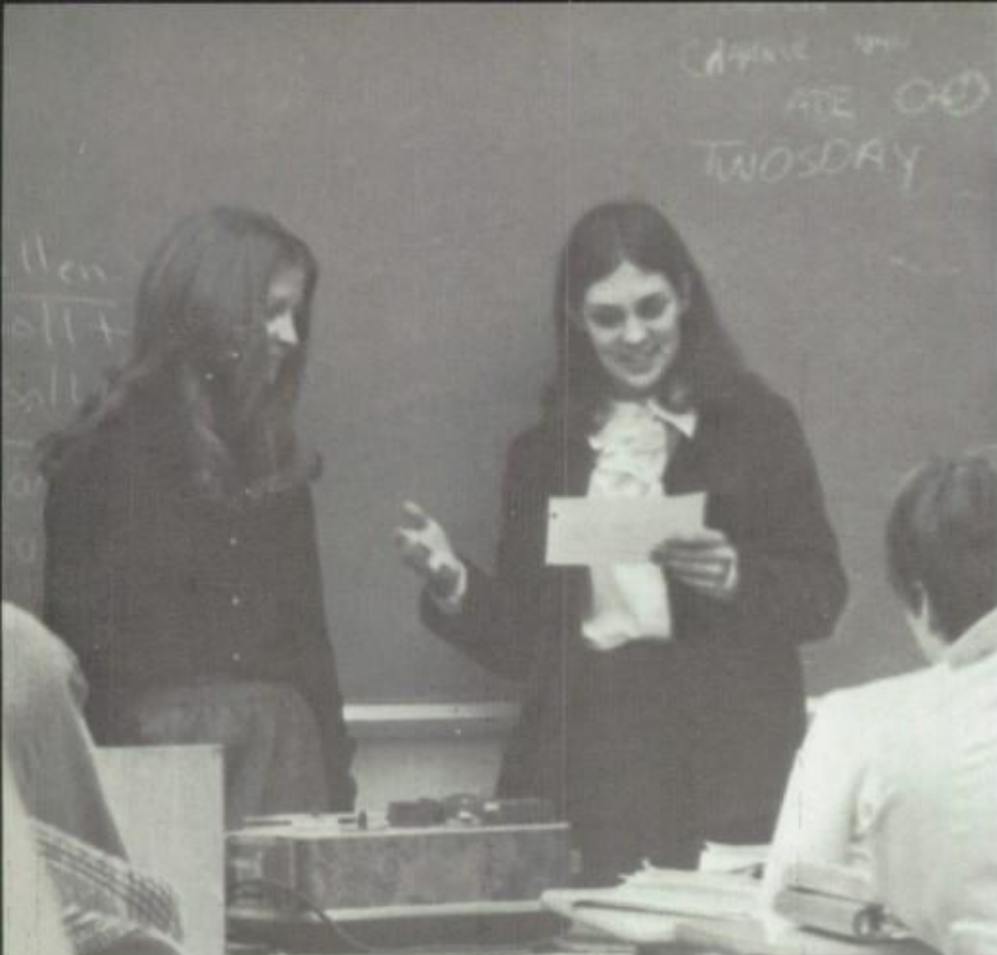

Providing facts for further studies, oral presentations are very fundamental, as shown by Lynette Andresen and Dave White, both seniors.

Studying and preparing for classes are history teachers Mr. George Yount and Mr. Don Ford.

Studying their information sheets during team history are Dave Ford and Terri Elsasser, both juniors.

Talking in front of the class looks like fun from the facial expressions of juniors Vicki Nordness and Fran Sinrud.

While sitting in Russian some students sit in a quiet daze, while others babble on idly about nothing.

Being in French holds a great deal of excitement, especially when it comes to putting on a play. These mournful on-lookers play their parts well and with great dedication to the young man who is gravely ill.

ginnings for foreigners

"El Gigante," the giant, is portrayed by Sandy Goodman, senior, as she gives a push to a little toy chicken while in second year Spanish class.

Spanish is a real swinging subject, at least it looks like it is for seniors Mike Loy, Tony Manzanarez, and Ed Sisom.

"Why should I take a foreign language when I'll probably never step a foot out of Washington," is often a remark made by students who are asked about taking a foreign language. French and German are very important for those who intend to go on and study science or medicine, while Russian and Spanish can be equally valuable. Spanish and French have been offered for a number of years; then came Russian. This year another language was added, "Deutsch," or German. One of the purposes of these languages to teach students about other people's languages and cultures. Many plays and dialogues are put on by these individual classes which add a little more excitement to the classes. Overall, the students who do take a foreign language learn to appreciate the fact that they're not a foreigner trying to learn the English language from scratch.

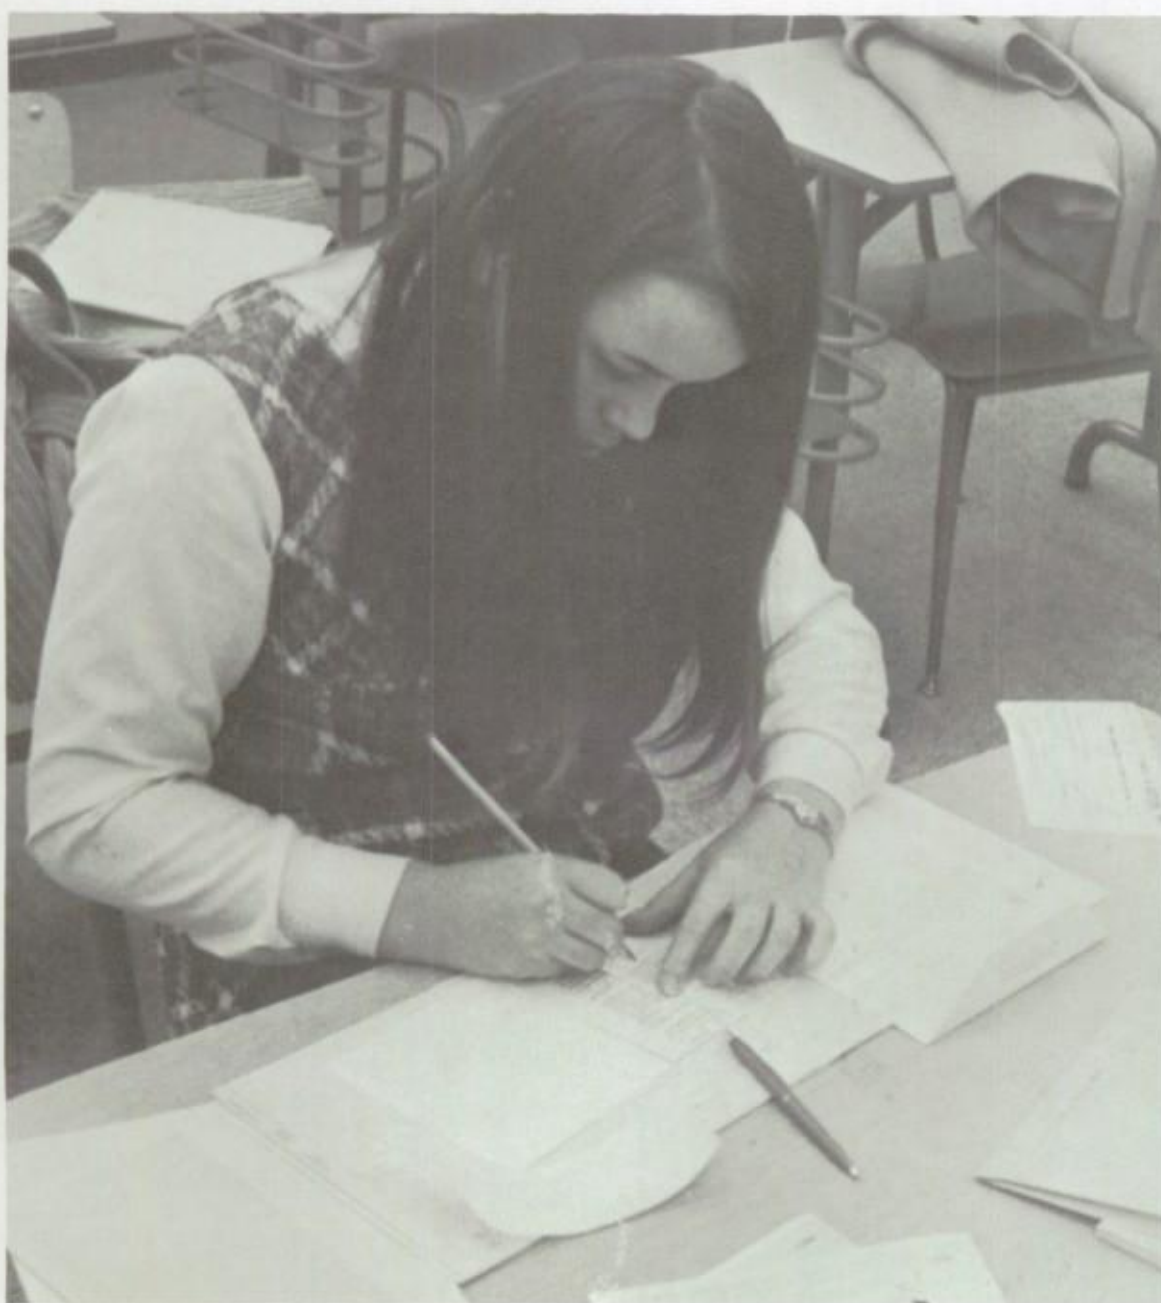

"Ah come on, we can't be that funny," giggle juniors Ann Cassidy, Ron Davis, and Leone Werner as they do their thing in front of their Spanish class.

For quick and accurate addition of her insurance contracts, Peggy Myers, senior, uses one of the several adding machines available for use by the business classes.

With deep concentration on the work at hand, Laurie Quay, senior, solemnly figures out details of a simulated oil company during steno lab.

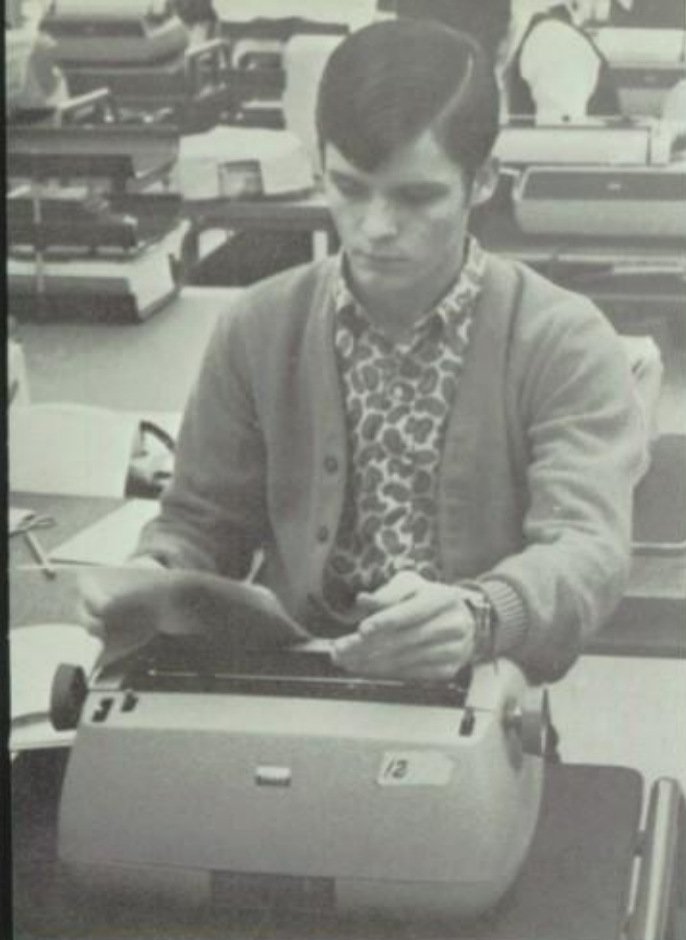

Deeply involved in her bookkeeping project, Pam Drye, senior, tackles the complicated task of evenly balancing the account.

There is more to business than just typing and shorthand. Being very extensive, this department prepares and trains students for the active business world ahead. Offering business law, bookkeeping, secretarial lab, clerical office lab, and business machines and math, students are able to become skilled at their prospective occupations.

Business moves along as a group of senior girls uses the helpful typewriters and adding machines.

Checking his typing for mistakes, John Leger, senior, is one of the few boys in office lab.

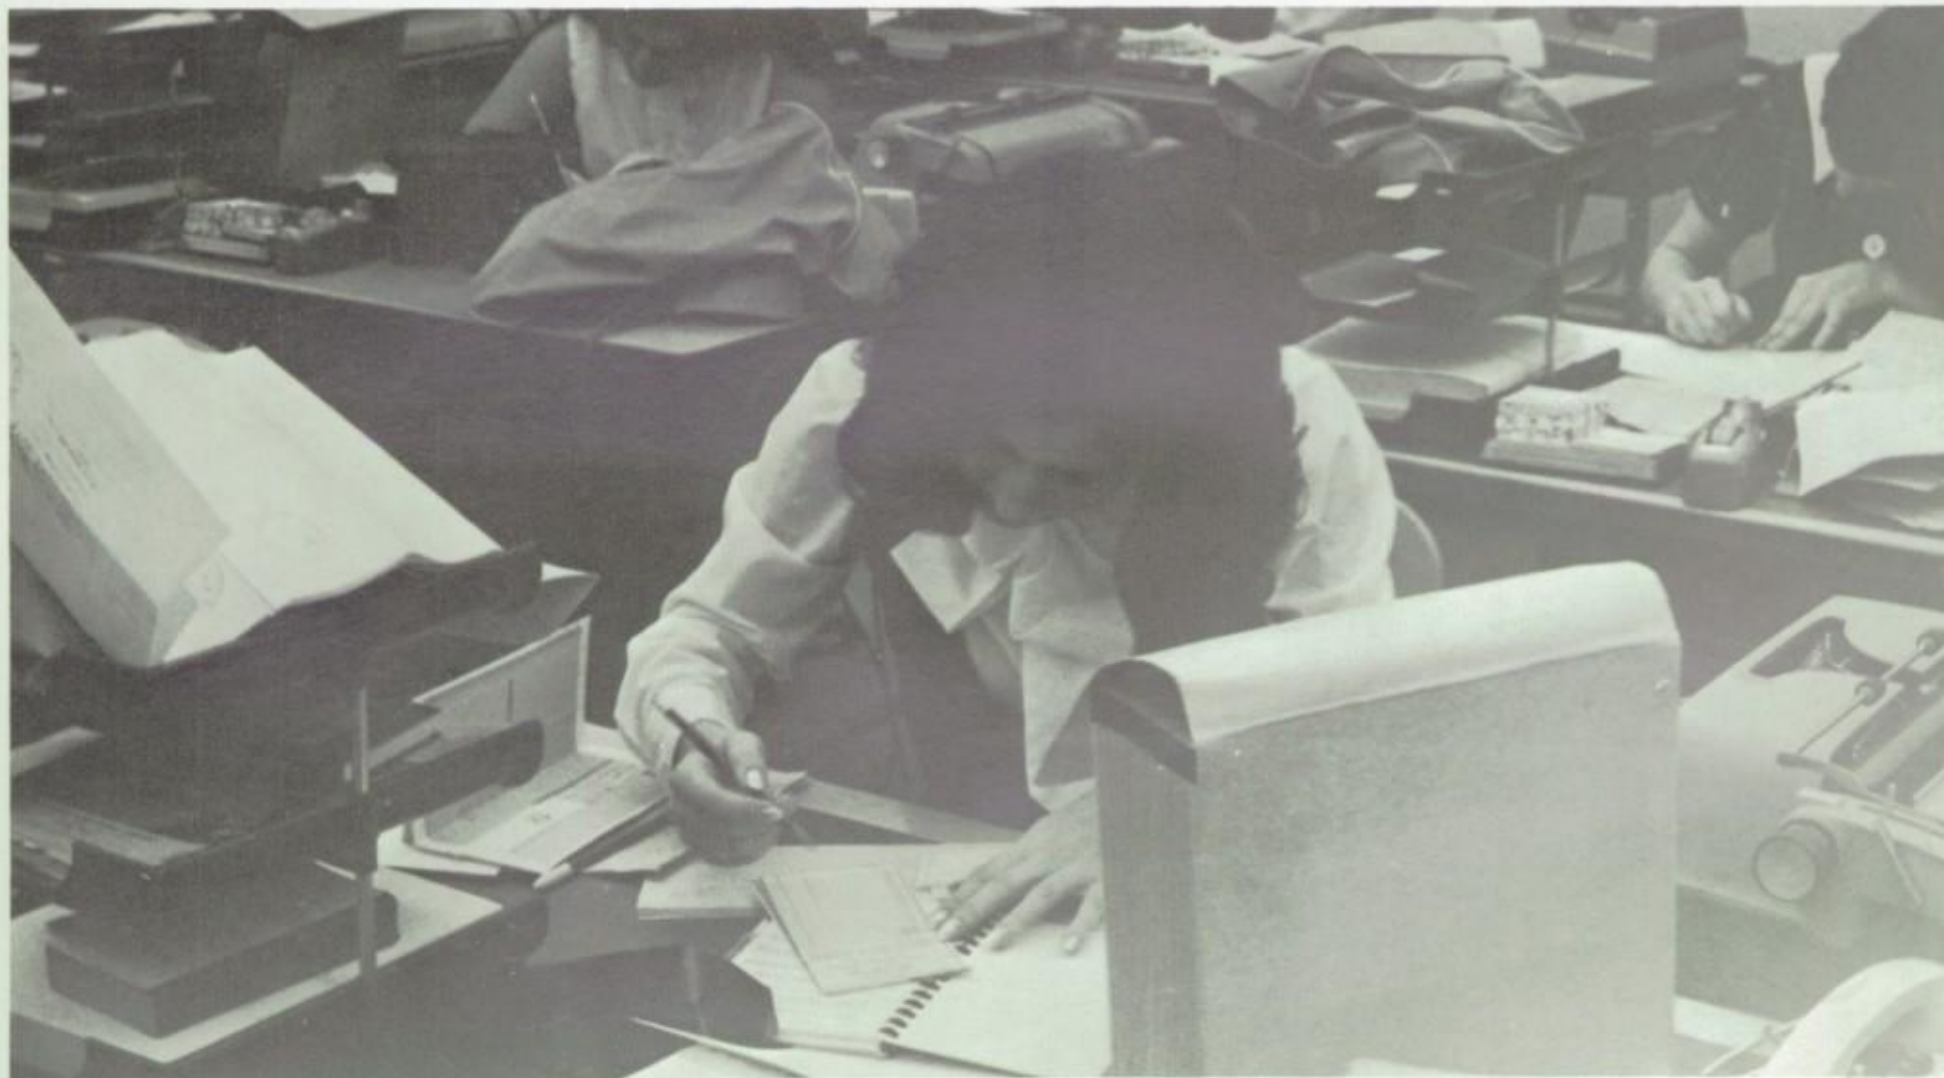

With the aid of the posting machine, Lynda Molitor, senior, figures bank statements for the model insurance companies.

Words ring in her ears as Linda Speed, senior, types while using a transcriber.

Business Education: more to it than just typing

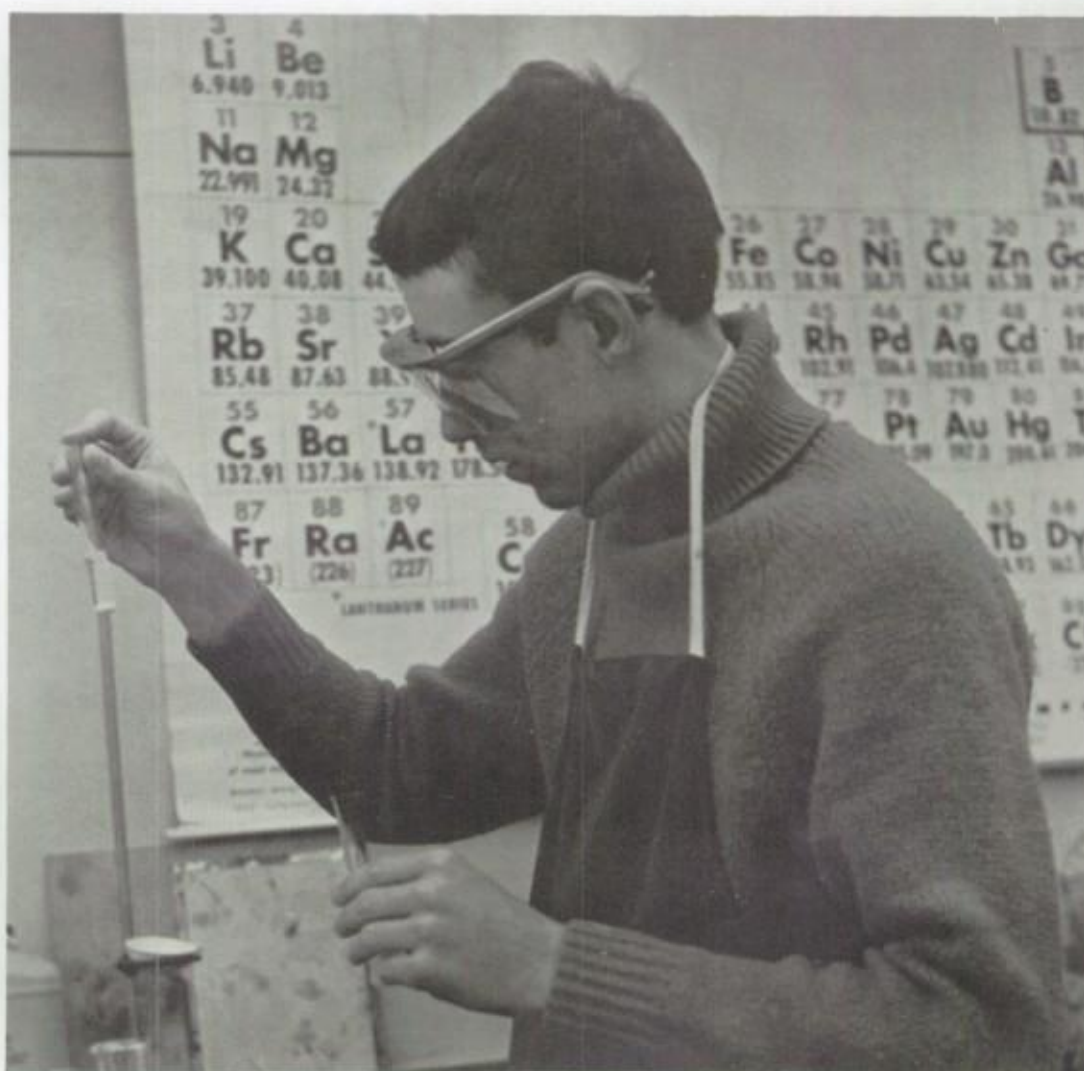

Busy at work, Renee Nelson, senior, undertakes one of the many responsibilities of successfully managing her model insurance company. During office lab, she attempts to balance the books.

Chemistry labs are sometimes very boring and mind-bending affairs. Reading up on an important experiment are Dave Garen, senior, and Dennis Hobbs, junior, as they skim their favorite lab manual complete with fold-out pre-lab instructions.

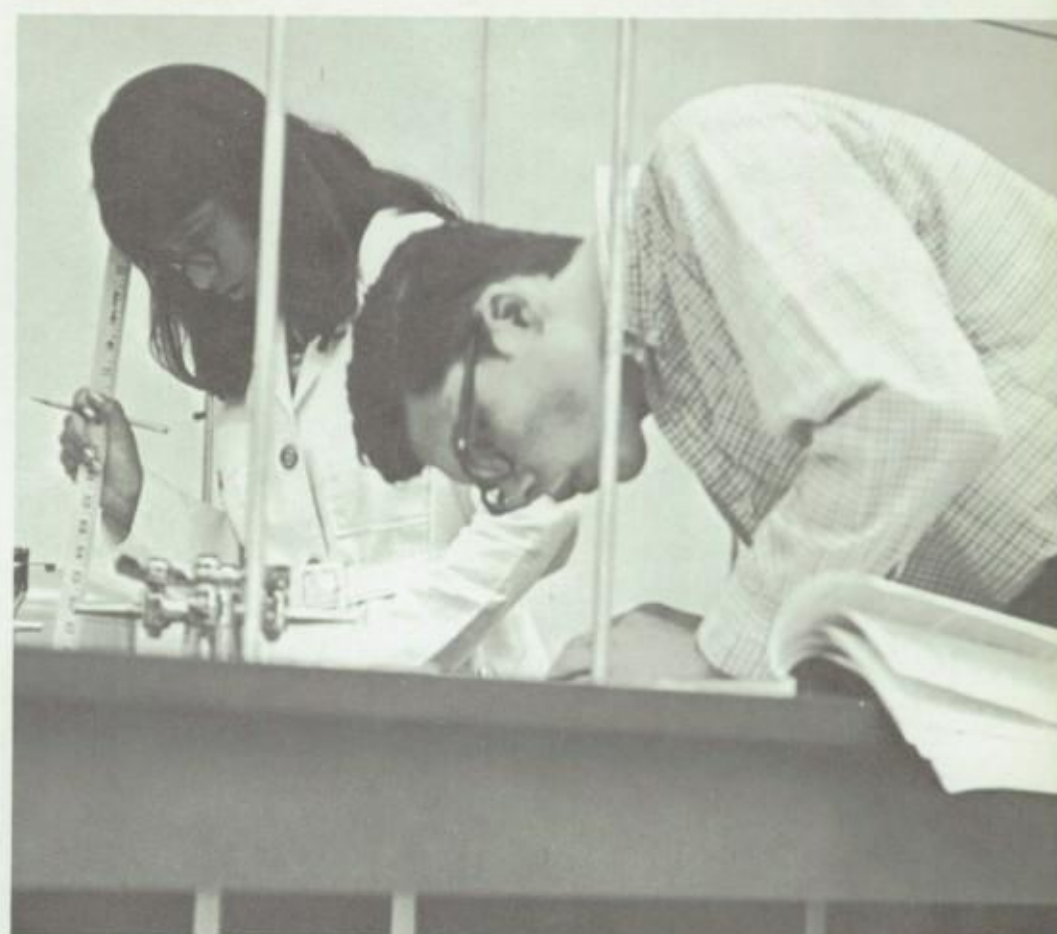

Concentrating on his work, junior Forrest Sims decants a solution in Chemistry 3 & 4.

Wearing a pair of spot-free goggles and his trusty rubber apron, a sophomore chemist David Cooper strives for "the exact measurement."

Biology is an extremely complex course. The puzzled and contorted expressions of Kim Anderson and Sandy Major, sophomores, illustrate this.

Chemistry is mind-bending and time-consuming. Pondering over important experiments are Vicky Flores and Byron Gilbert, seniors.

Student scientists explore worlds — discover selves

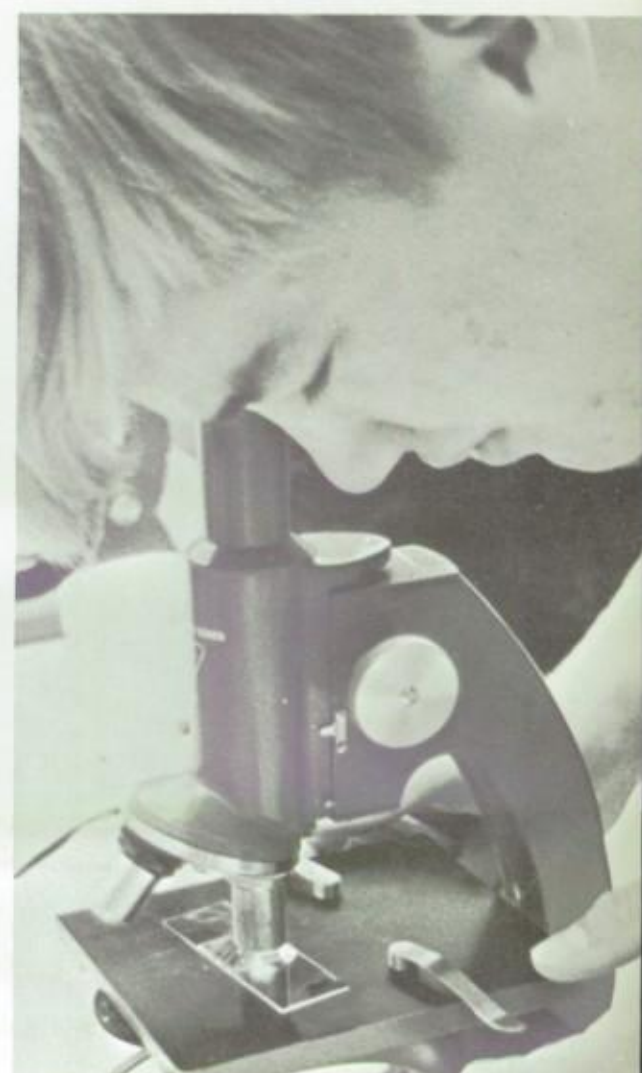

Filled with a great craving for knowledge and a strong desire to learn are the students of the science department. These hungry students gain a vast understanding of the world in which we live along with the life that exists in it.

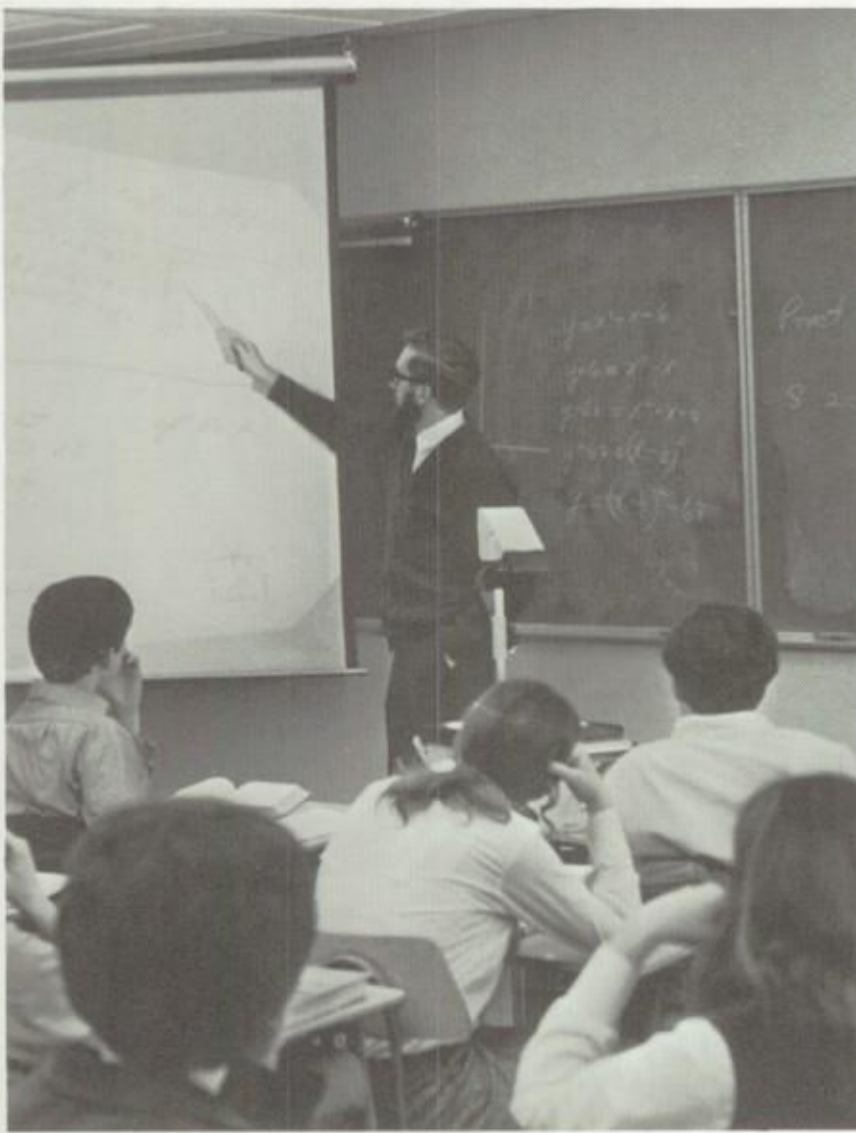

In preparation for an important experiment, Roy Littler, senior, adjusts his equipment.

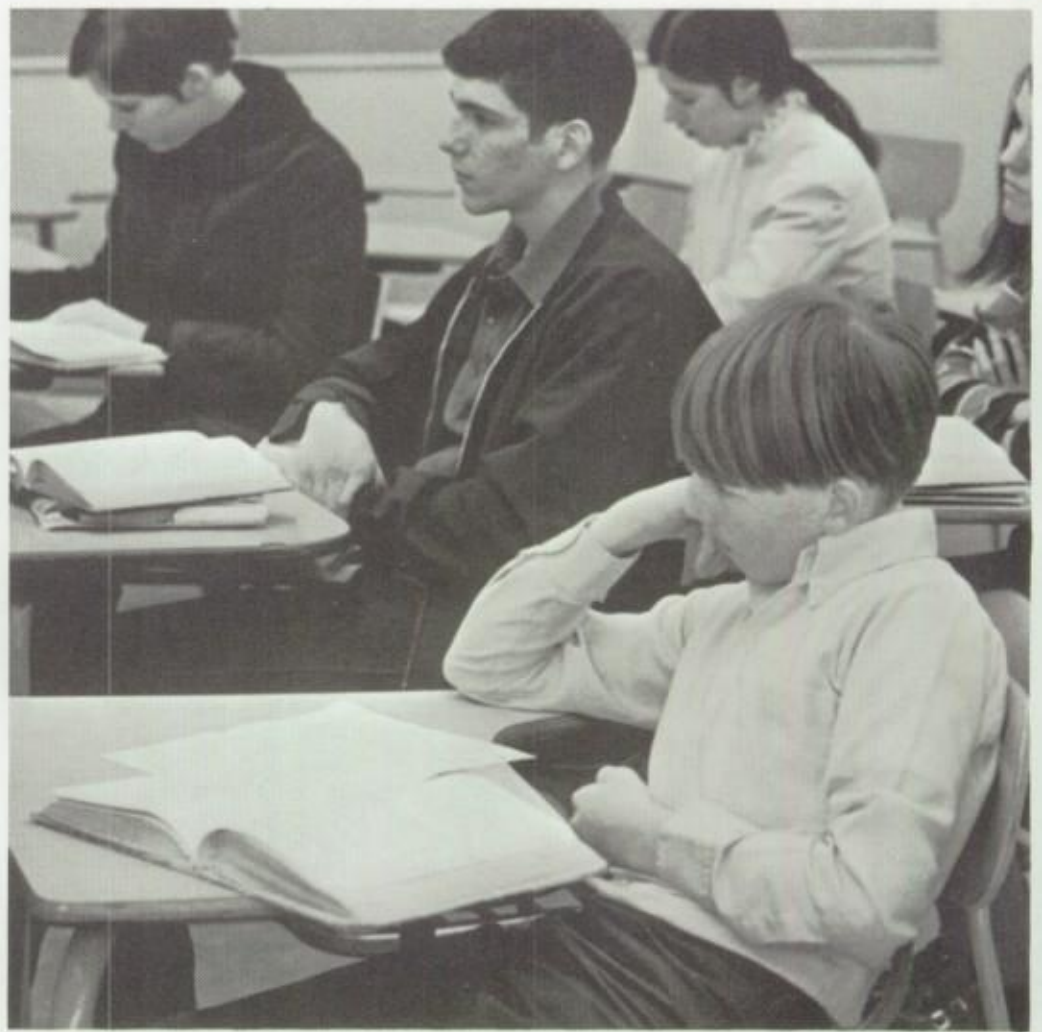

Making sure that his calculations are accurate is Bill Peacock, senior, during physics.

Attempting to discover the secret of life is Mark Kanarick, sophomore.

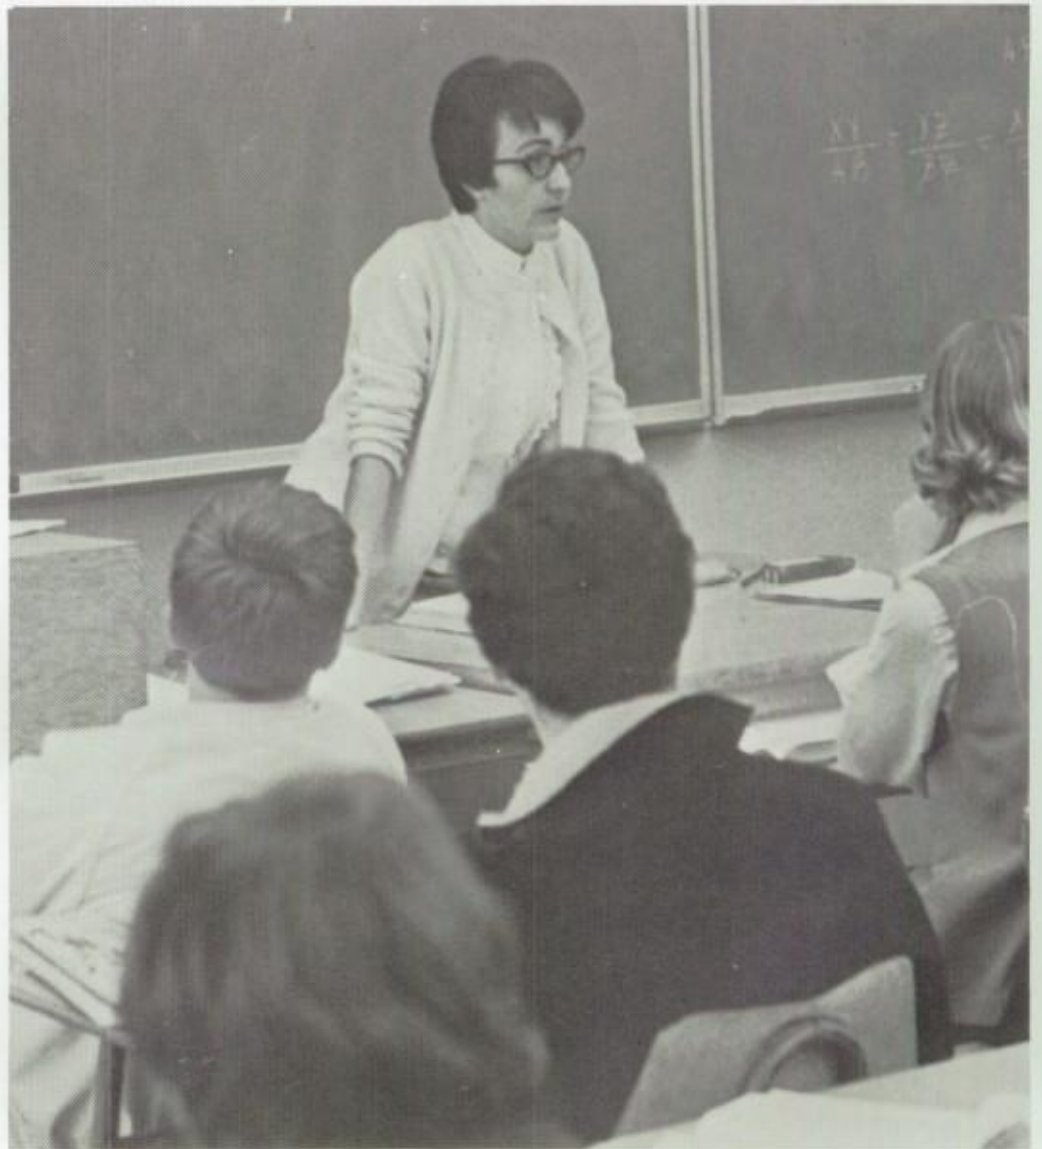

Indicating the use of the side-angle-side property, Mr. Broenkow shows his geometry students the correct way of proving a theorem.

Engrossed in the subject of geometry, sophomores Debbie Engel, Jeff Hale, Steve Gossett, and Pam Riggs listen to problem after problem after . . .

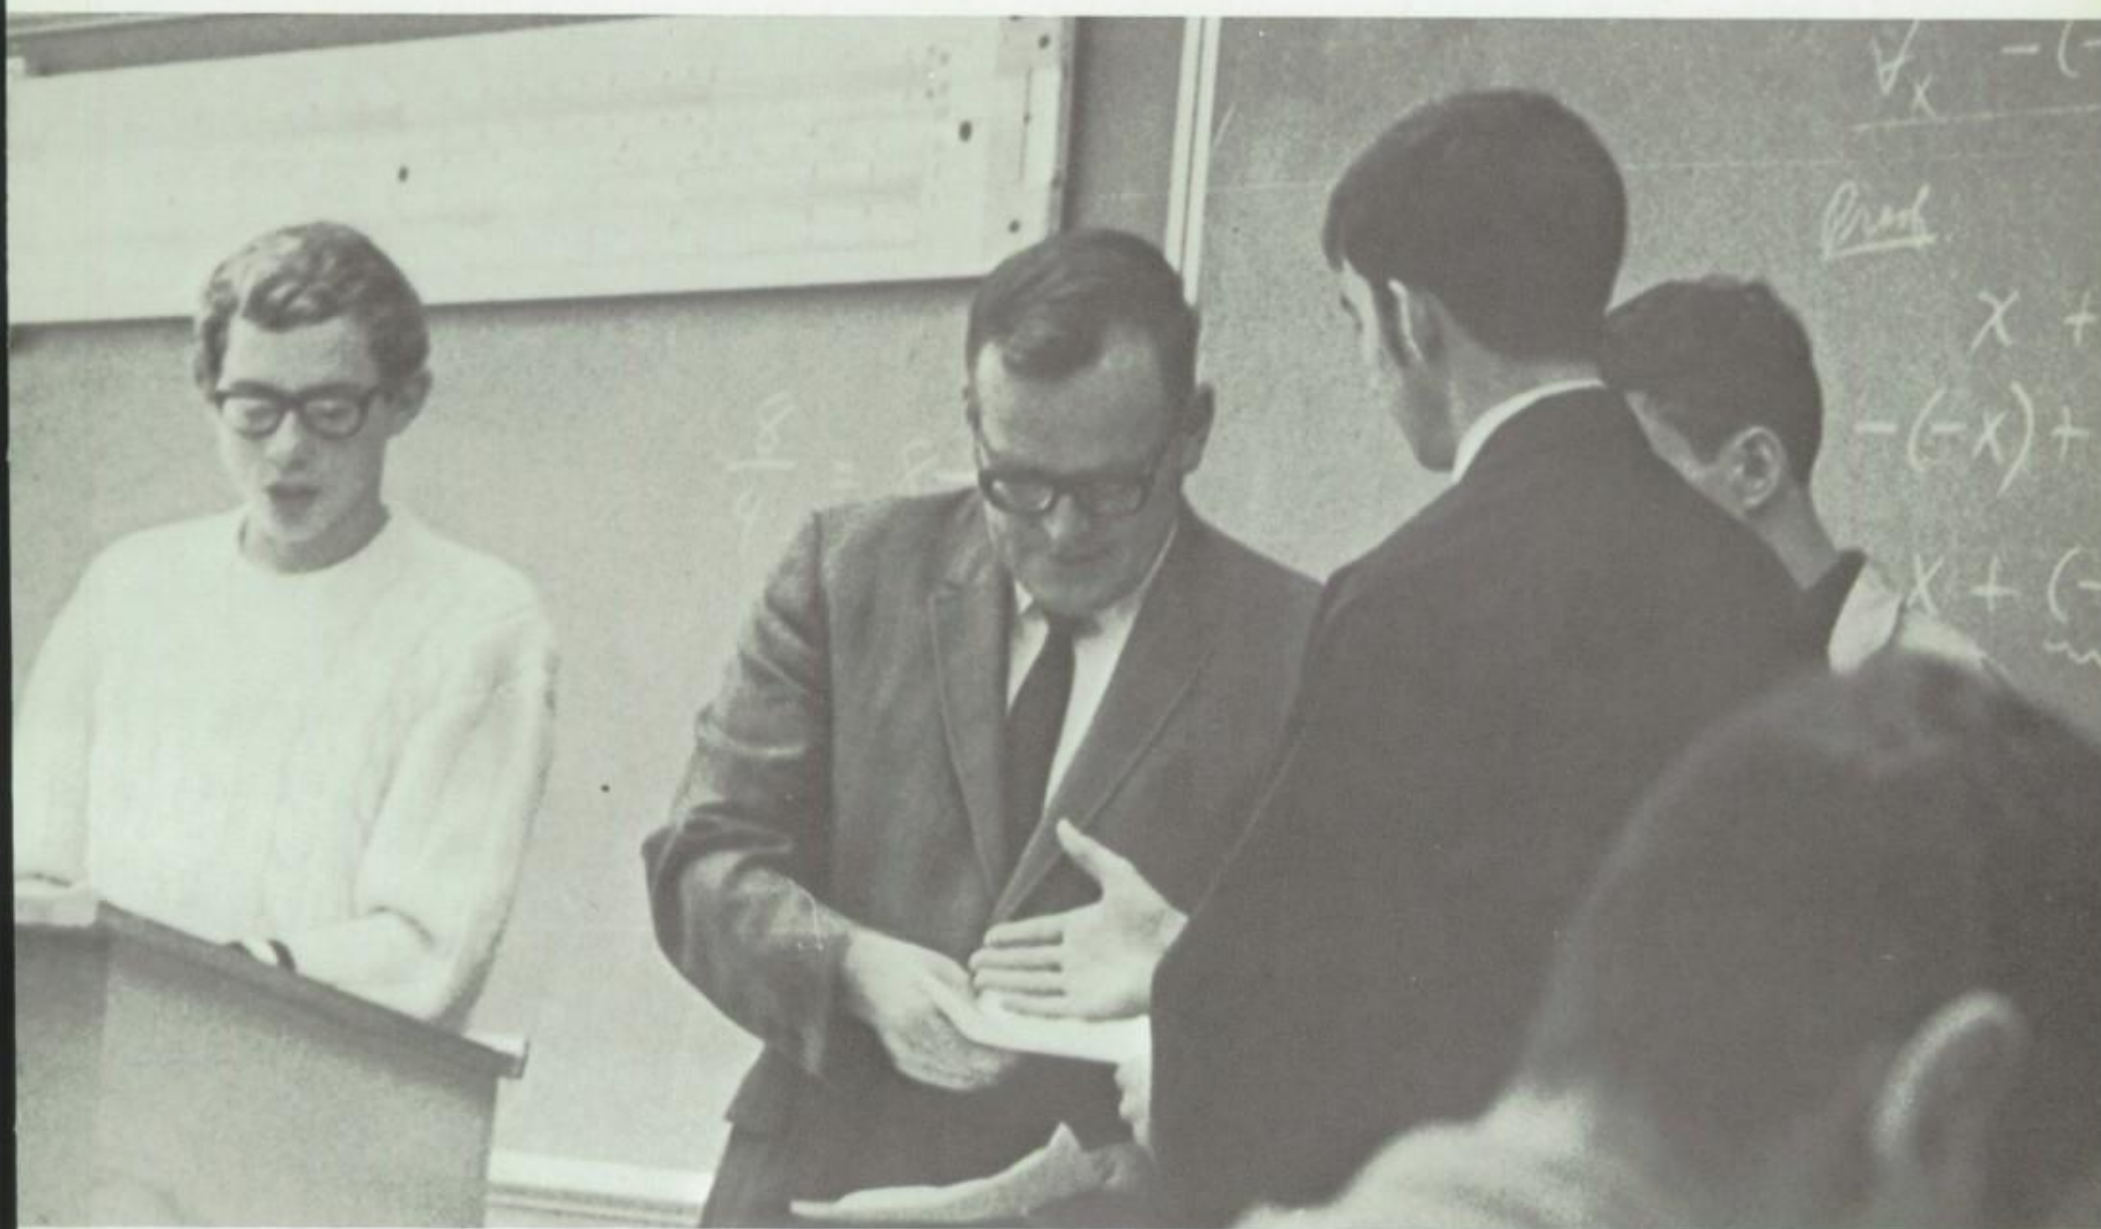

Holding the complete and undivided attention of her intent students is Mrs. Roberts, math instructor, during a stimulating class period.

Sometimes during an hour of math, students must find various types of fun. Kitty Kreiman, sophomore, counts the number of hairs per square inch.

Math analysis: combined concentration, grasping

Understanding completely all the various aspects of math is a very entailed and complex job. Helping his students with their many questions is, at center, Mr. Gale Filer, mathematics instructor.

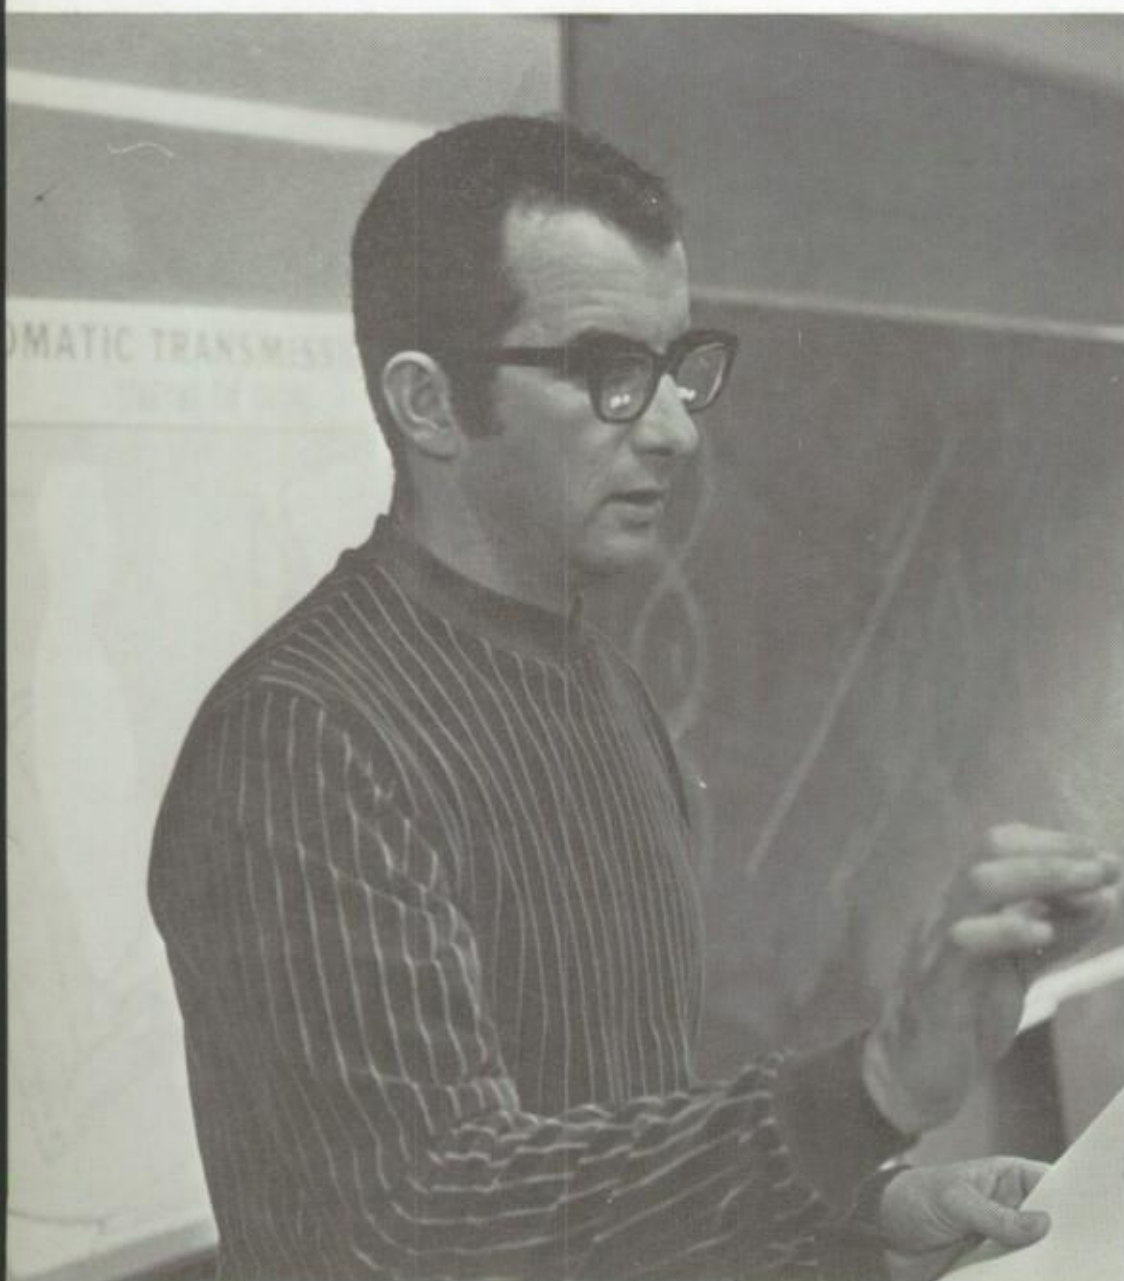

Utmost involvement contains David Quick, senior, as he tries to cipher out difficult problem.

Centralizing all her attention on a very deserving problem, Marsha Voohress, junior, assembles her thoughts.

'Wrecklessly' from study hall, safely into drivers' ed.

Teaching important procedures and precautions, Mr. Ayers, drivers' education instructor, helps Terrace students learn necessary driving skills.

Study hall: it's the only period of the day that it's o.k. to sleep and study, but it's never o.k. to talk ... oh, fun ...

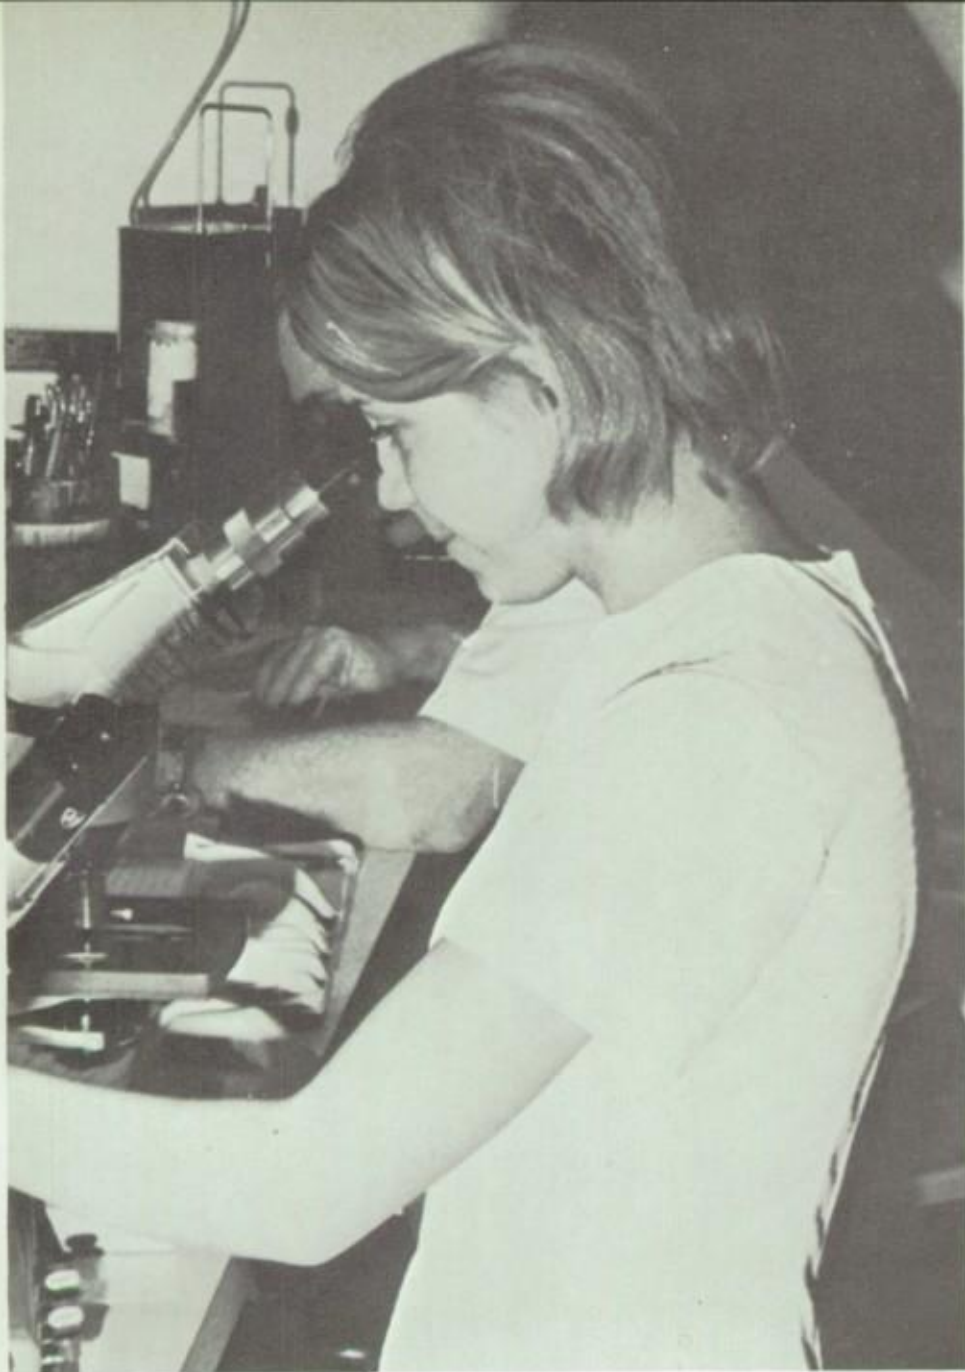

With the hope of more freedom and more choice with study time, the new independent study hall program was introduced second semester.

After paying a raised price of twenty dollars and spending hours in classes, drivers express their feelings with "Leave the driving to us."

By teaching pre-vocational students on-the-job training, the students learn many good work habits and skills.

Learning the basics of driving, these curious students dream of using the car and going without a parent, contemplate about reading the next assigned chapter, and worry about whether they will even pass the driving test.

Studying blood under the microscope and then typing it is Lois Johnson, senior, as she works at Stevens Hospital.

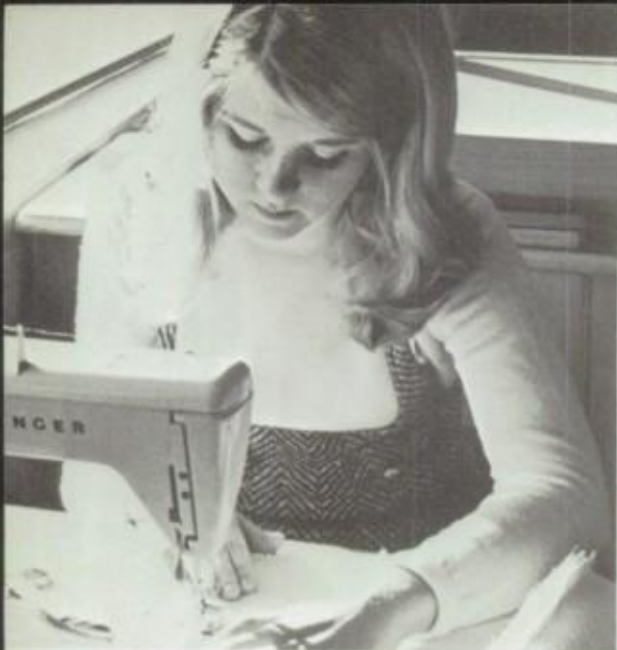

Assisting in the preparation of hospital routine, Maudine Schienk, senior, sterilizes equipment for Stevens Hospital.

Semi-skilled trades build and brighten futures

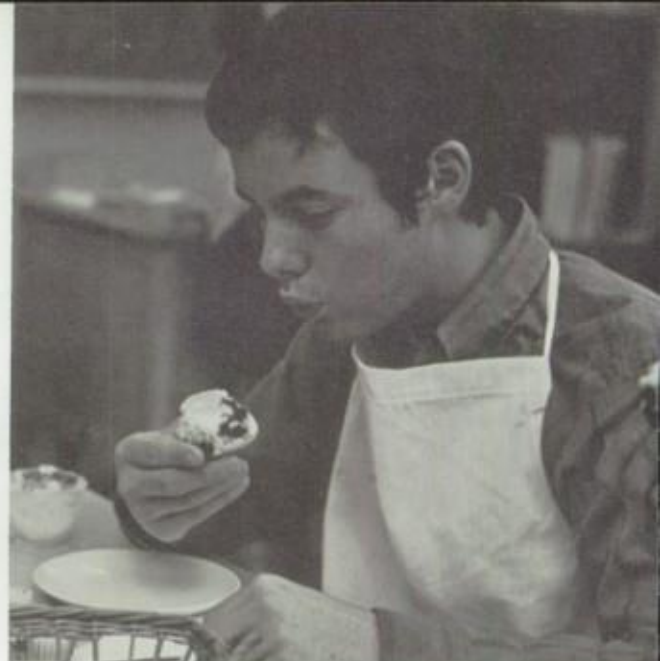

Senior Harold Knox services cars at a local gas station. He enjoys working with cars and is learning to be a mechanic. By working five days a week, Harold receives school credits.

Sewing right along is Patti Moore, junior.

"Cooking is fun, it's the eating it that kills ya," exclaim Steve Meier, senior, and Dennis Hanks, junior.

"Oh, are these ever good blueberry muffins," "ooh's" Jim Dunn, senior.

Home Economics: a time to prepare Physical Education: a time to plan

"Beating these eggs are fun, fun, fun," exclaims Dave Beers, senior.

Cutting away at a Home Economics project, Lynell Kyzar, senior, carefully follows the guidelines on her skirt pattern.

Attention and silence is a must when waiting in line for roll call.

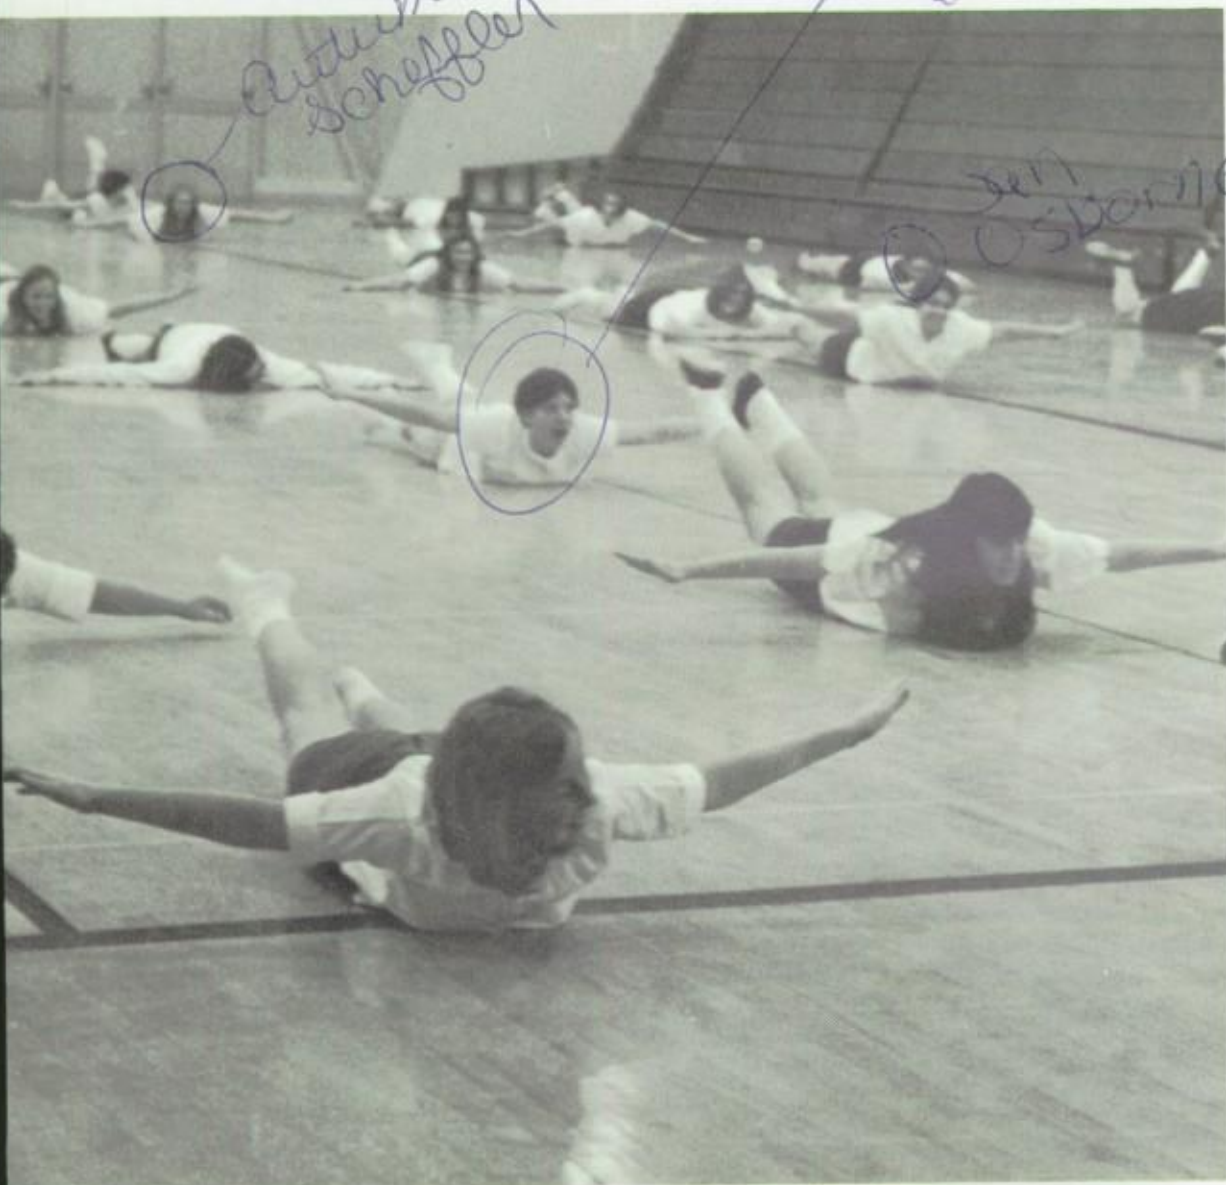

It's hard enough to hold one's self in a squatting position but these push-ups are murder.

for a future home, family for a healthy, happy future

This year home economics offers a variety of helpful courses, such as family living, community living, gourmet cooking, home furnishing, and tailoring, besides the basic home economics classes. The regular physical education classes are filled up again this year, along with the advance P.E. classes. "Come feed your tummy at Mama Snoey's Restaurant." This is one of the eye-catching posters for the boys' home economics money making projects. The feed is for all senior boys wishing to fill their tummies with fudge, lemon-aid, cookies, and candies.

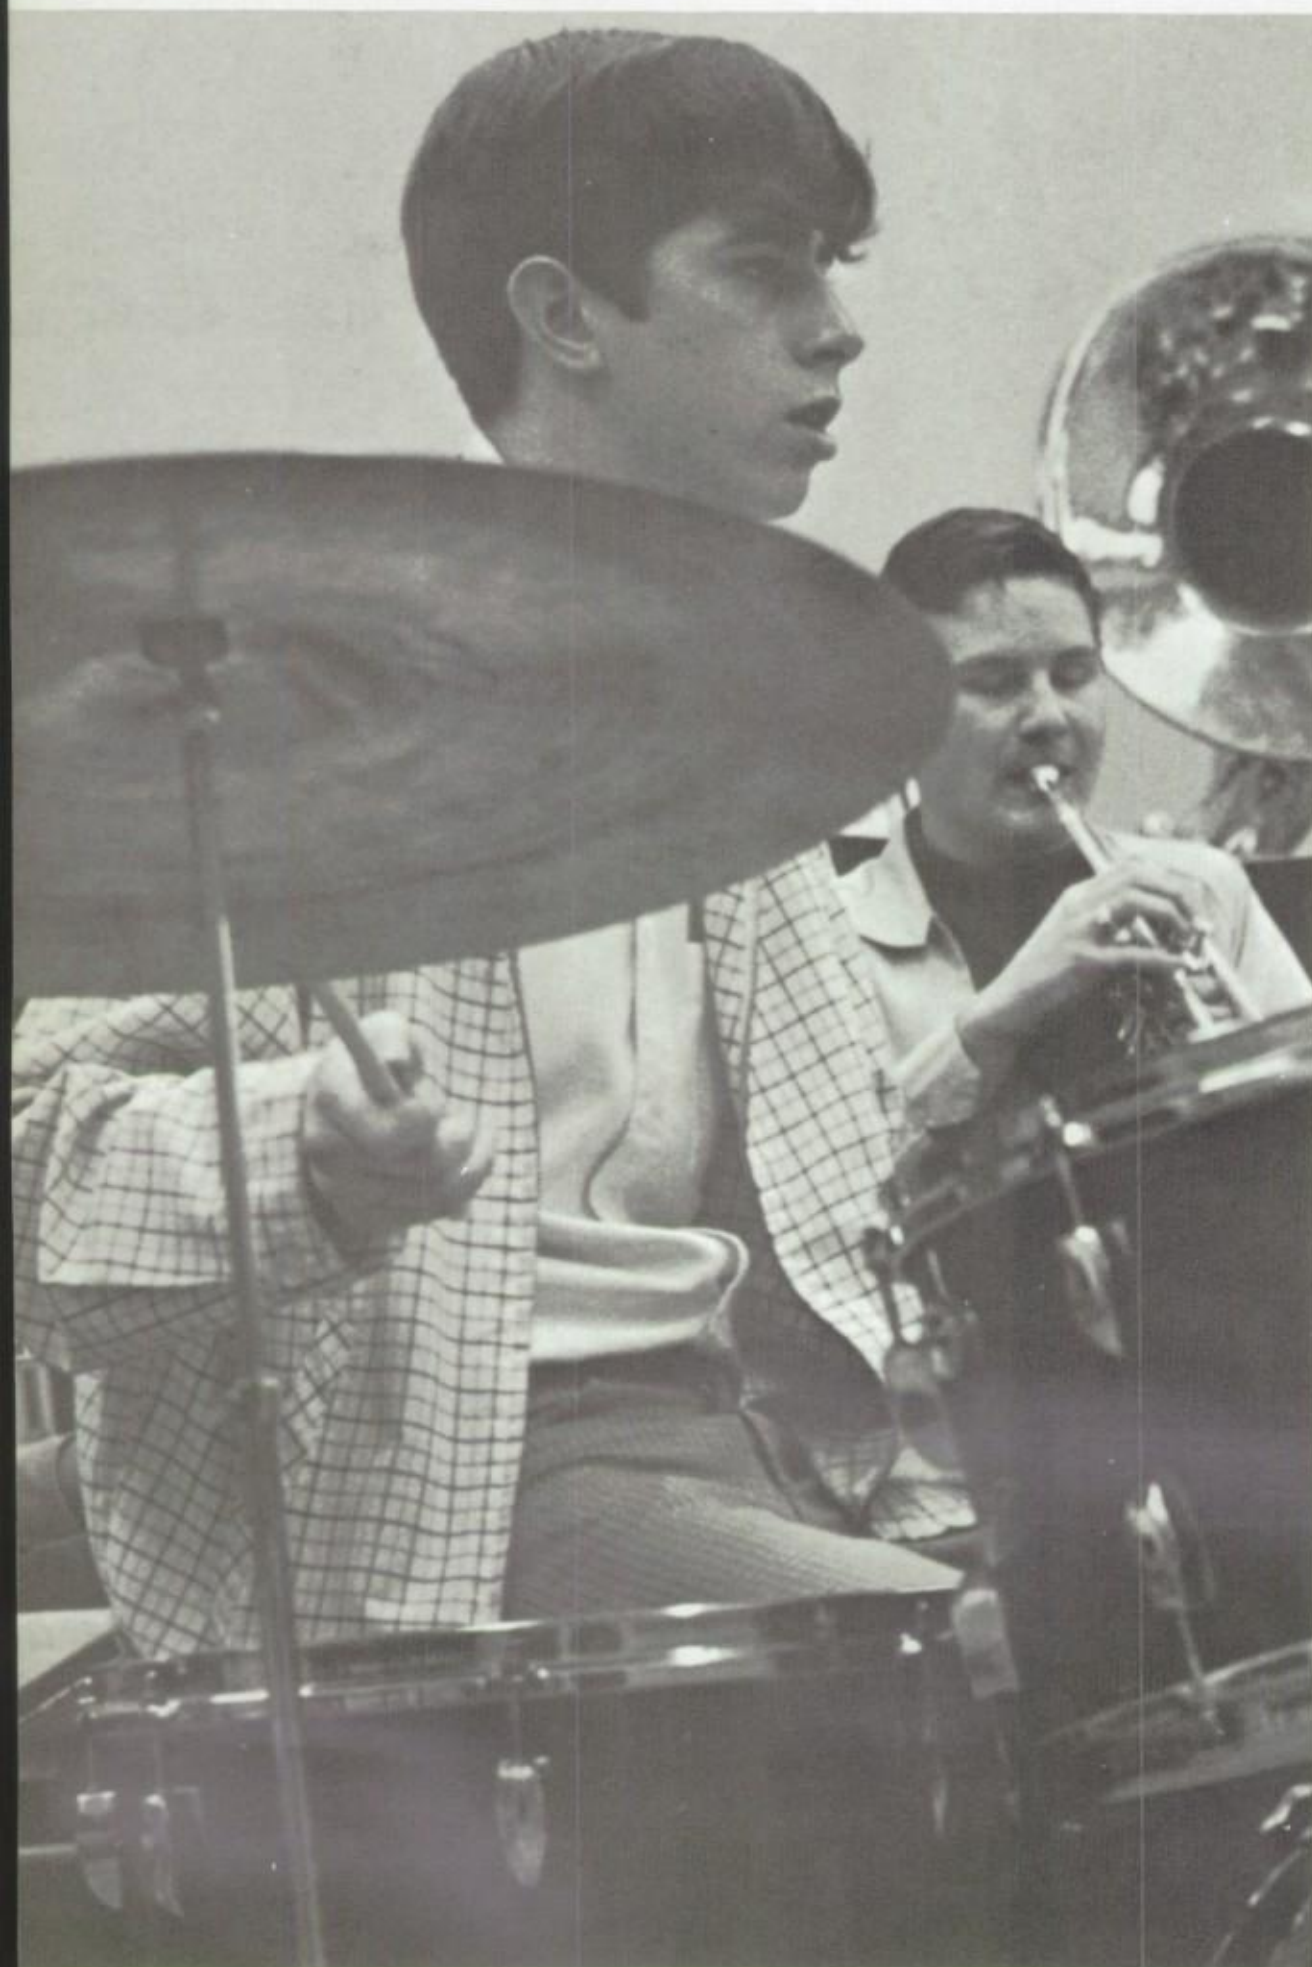

Flapping on the floor is the best way to ease one's tension but also is a good way of getting sore back and leg muscles.

Celebrating Miss King's dog's shower is her third period fun-loving P.E. class.

Five slide trombones and nine noisy drummers lead the way

With the nickname "the swingin'est drummer ever", Stevie McCormick, junior, keeps the rhythm fast and steady at one of the twice-weekly stage band rehearsals.

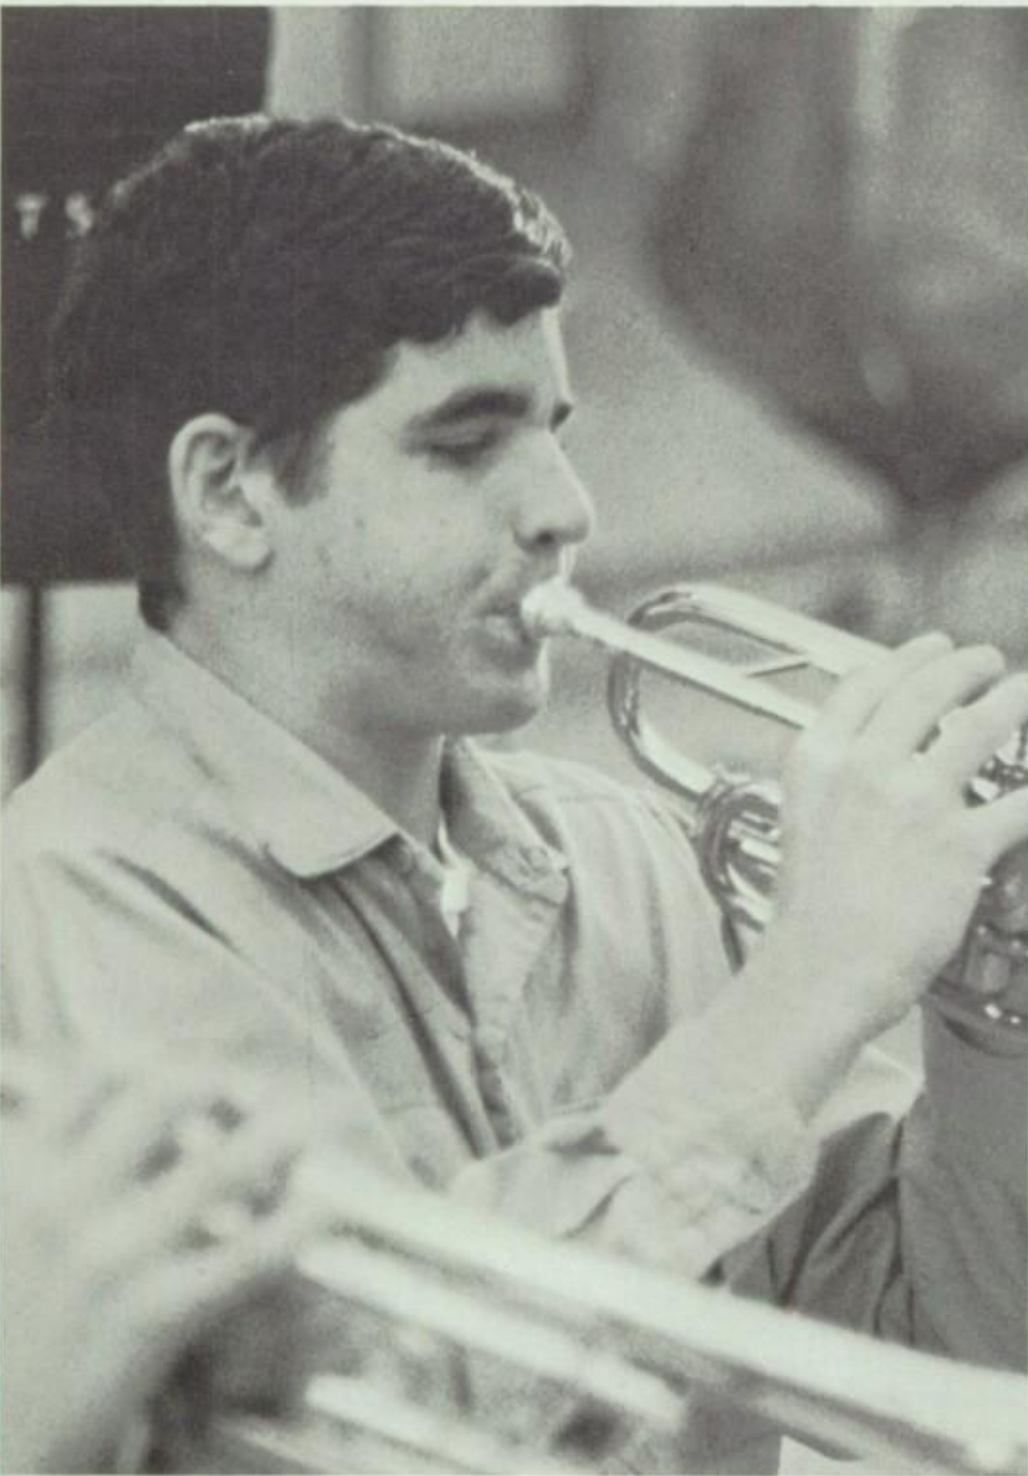

Jim Locke, junior, finds a handy rack for his music binder as he rearranges his tunes.

Being the top-rated band in the district, the MTHS music-makers have many obligations to fulfill. From the concert band of 80 members, there is a stage band of 20 talented musicians, this year boasting two drummers! The concert band also shows itself as a marching band during football season and as a spirited pep band at pep assemblies and basketball games. The band is usually overworked and underappreciated; but, the members keep the enthusiasm going. This year, the many phases of band, all under the direction of Mr. Ray Martyn, has as its officers Larry Gormley, president; Mike Leonard, vice president; Marly Calkins, Cheryl Crim, Karol Dereg and Linda Merriman, secretaries; and Jose Valenzuela, manager.

Trombones lead the way (below) as the red-jacketed marching band practices for one of its many football season shows. The marching band performs a pre-game show or every Hawk home game and, this year, added a performance at a Seattle Rangers' football game to its list of accomplishments.

Under the watchful eye of trombonist Doug Roberts, junior, Jay Cullinan, sophomore drum major, steps off.

Cris Sherman, sophomore, receives readily-available aid from Mr. Ray Martyn at a stage band rehearsal.

Pounding out their notes to achieve perfection, the male voices of Chorus practice for their next performance.

Sitting alone like a quiet little nightingale is Pamper Haas, sophomore, while in Chorus.

Harmony, melody ring out in choral groups

"re-mi-fa-sol-la-ti-do," is the warm-up song for Girls' Glee.

Concentration is evident upon the faces of the girls in Girls' Glee while rehearsing for one of their concerts.

Orchestra: not quite a symphony — but still trying

Contributing all her attention to the music of the violin, Kathy Parks, junior, above, strives for perfection as a curtain of hair partially covers her face.

Giving their musical minds a rest during orchestra, left, Thelma Simmons, sophomore, and Goergianna Mann, junior, sneak an intermission into their music lesson. Trying to go unnoticed, they conceal their conversation behind the big, curved bodies of their cellos.

Brass percussion, string and woodwind sections all work together in Orchestra.

Serenading Tri-Hi-Y members and their parents at the induction ceremonies are the Dynamics, an ever-popular select vocal group.

Concentrating on a difficult piece of music, under the direction of Mr.

Focusing on Mr. Frank DeMiero, left, the Choir entertains students at Evergreen Elementary School. The Dynamics and Carillon Choir have shown much enthusiasm and involvement in their concerts and rehearsals.

Another highlight for the Dynamics was the performance of "Gloria" with the Cascade Symphony. Sponsoring a dinner and concert in March for two vocal groups from Eastern Washington State College was the undertaking of Choir.

Going to Contest and singing at elementary and junior high schools, besides performing at three major concerts, played an important part in the activities of Choir.

Dominating the scene in Girls' Glee and Chorus was much time and hard work spent on learning music in and outside of class, which is not always an easy task. Providing a challenge is only one of the many functions of vocal music.

Frank DeMiero, is the Carillon Choir during one of their many rehearsals.

Lung power launches sound of seventies

Intensely striving for perfection on the piano is Cammie Watts, a sophomore pianist for Dynamics and Choir.

Using as much ability as imagination, Rob Magner, senior, adds finishing touches to his unique sculpture in a crafts class.

Preparing for her premiere, Jody Loomis, senior, presents her countenance to the mirror.

Arts — they keep

The urge to create and invent finds many manifestations. Some are useful, most are fun to do and fun to look at.

Although making something in woodshop, fixing a car in auto shop, or working on a drawing in drafting may not take as much imagination as do projects in arts and crafts classes, there is still a lot of skill necessary.

Industrial arts classes give students an idea as to some of the responsibilities of related jobs after graduation. Even though the program lacks much in the way of job background, the experience that is provided can be a good building block for a possible livelihood.

Unlike the practical usefulness of industrial arts, arts and crafts teach the art of relaxation while they help develop the talent of the individual. For aesthetic value alone, the arts and crafts classes are important, giving all of those who take part a feeling of accomplishment.

Adding a touch of the African native to the "hallowed halls of Terrace," Pat Grazini and Kyle Buslach, seniors, take refuge behind the nearest foilage.

Making up for some lost Fourth of July, Brian Bailey, junior, sends out the sparks as he works on a car in auto shop.

Buzzing right along, Cecil Tyler, junior, spends another hard day at the saw in wood shop.

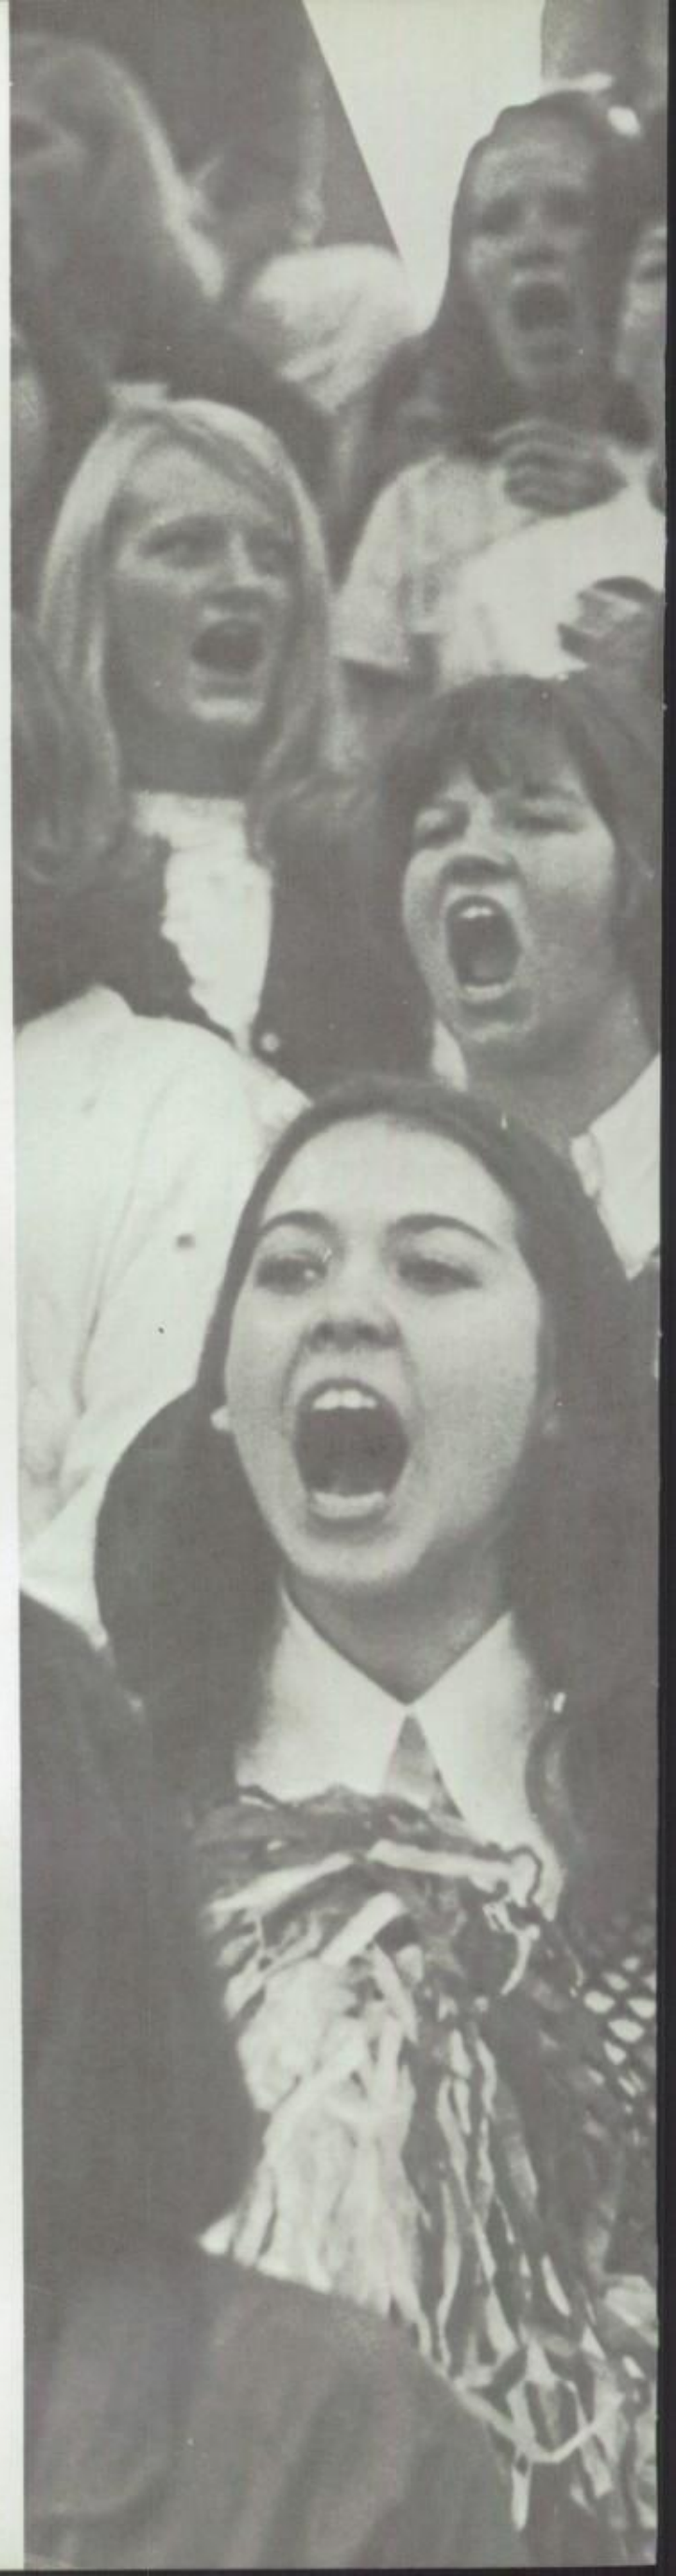

kids on their toes; develop all that latent talent

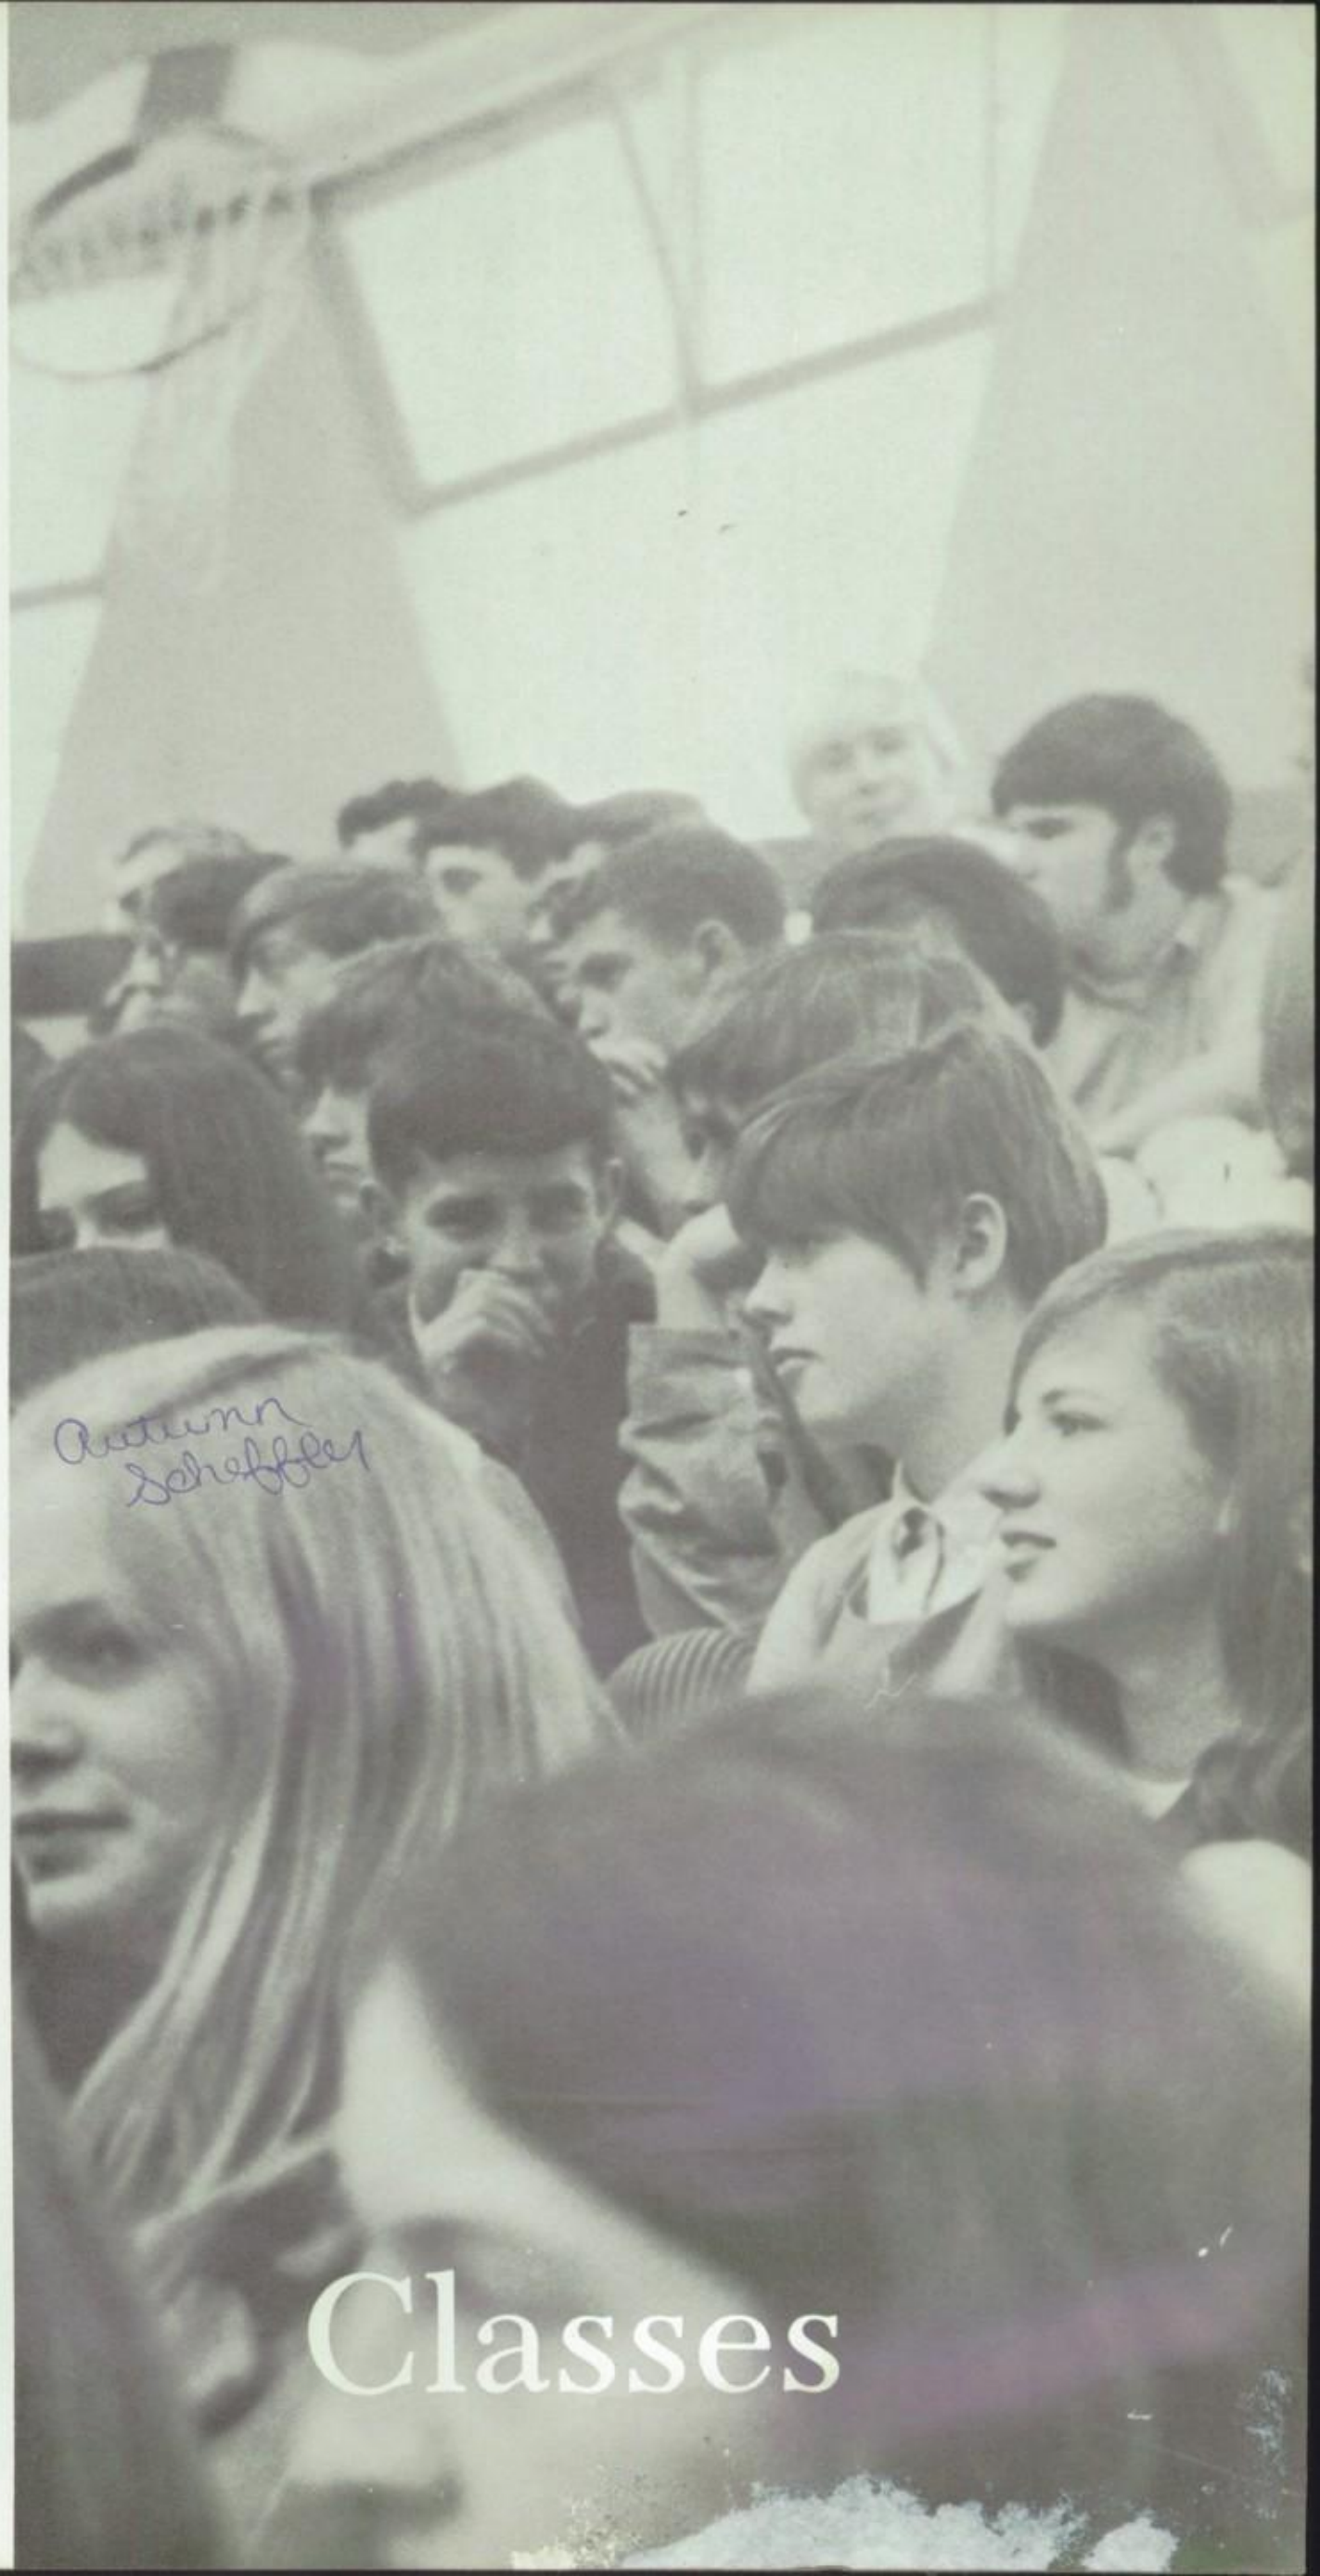

Planing a graceful curve, Randy Waters, junior, brings an artist's touch to wood shop.

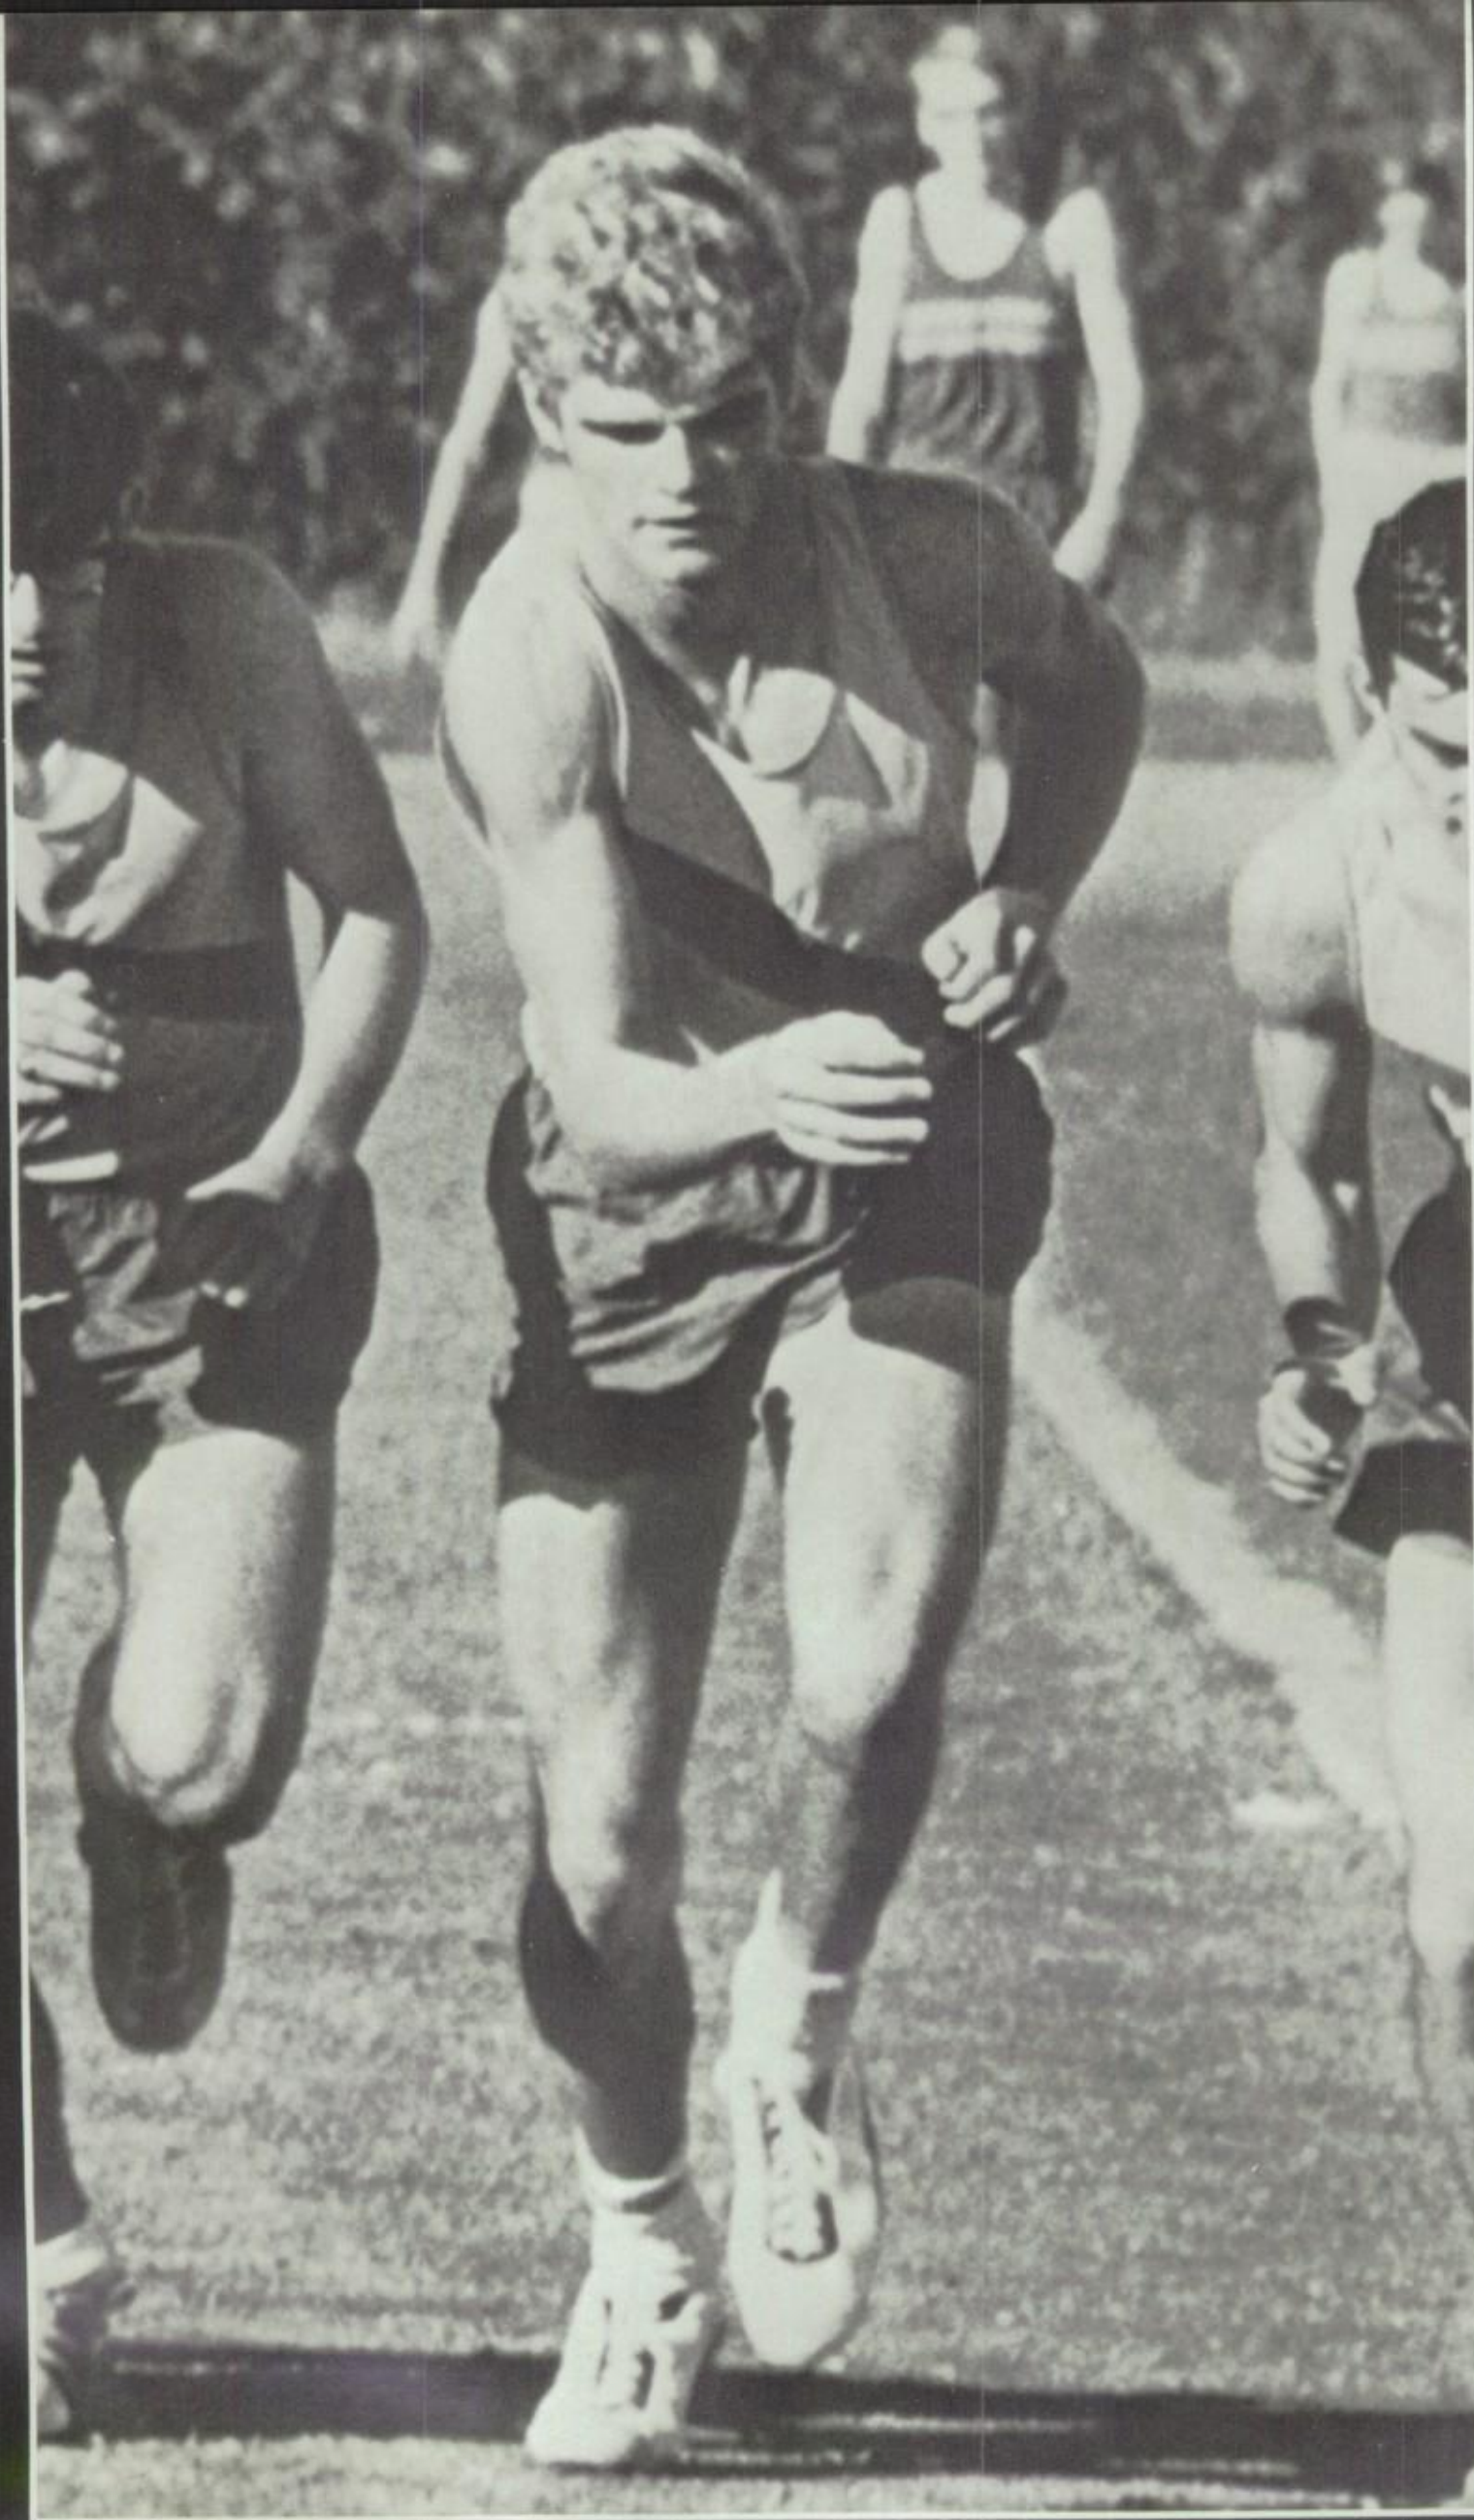

Doing the tedious little extras that make a drawing perfect, Robby Baker, senior, works in drafting.

When the time comes for his life to end,

It is proper custom to mourn his passing.

But, do not let the mourning hide the beauty—

the beauty of receiving his eternal peace.

Remember,

even though he no longer breathes or is aware of the world's existence,

Death does not come,

as long as his memory is kept alive in the hearts and minds of those he leaves behind.

"Gimme that phone!" demand both Connie Wallar and Tony Manzanara, "Most Talkative" seniors, simultaneously. With mouths like theirs, a switchboard does come in handy.

1969 - end of a decade

As the year ends and we all say "Farewell" to our friends, many of whom we will never come in contact with again, it seems natural to reflect on the past 365 days or, better yet, the past 3,650.

This summer, when the halls are finally empty and silent, the doors closed and locked, and the HUB lights darkened, Mountlake Terrace Senior High School will mark the end of its first decade. This has been a decade of change and progression—progression into the next decade, into the Age of Aquarius.

We all gladly welcome the Age of Aquarius and the message of peace and understanding its arrival conveys. This Age will become a reality only through the combined efforts of all.

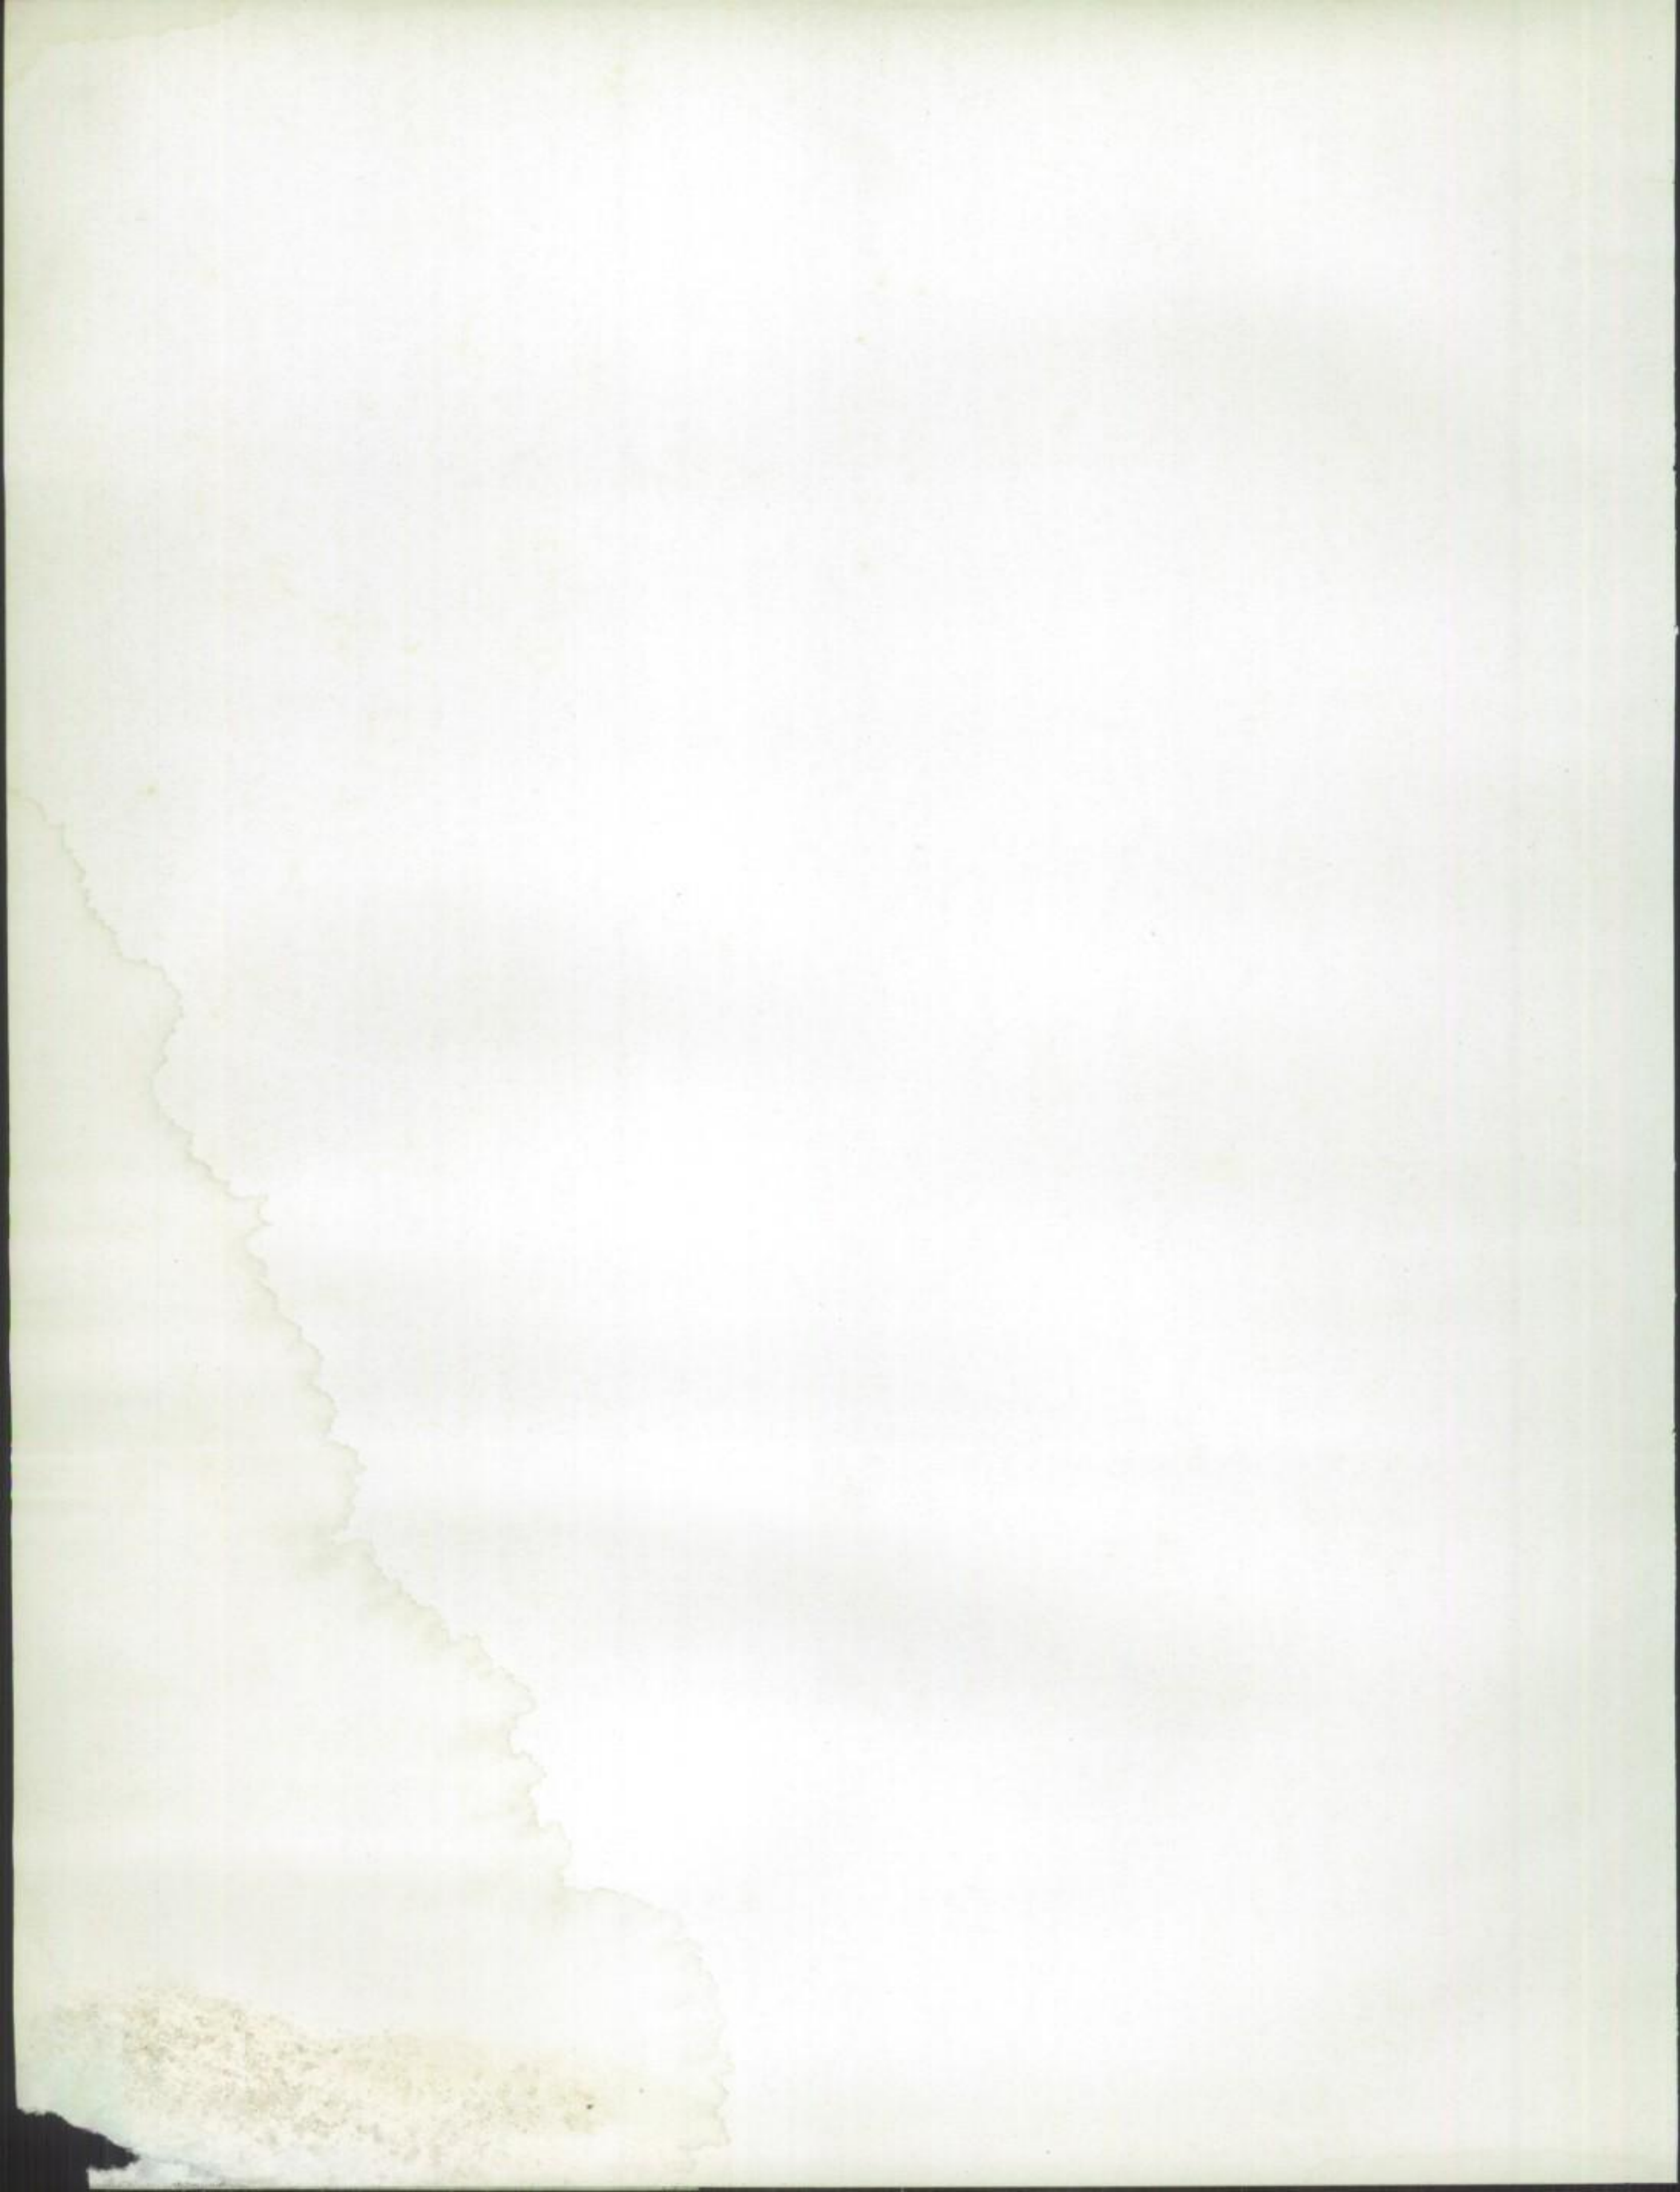

Through introduction, preparation, exploration, participation, cooperation, comprehension, and completion, the impossible becomes possible.

"No doubt the world is working itself out as it should."

Editor-in-Chief
TEMPO '70*

P.S. I wish to express my thanks to the following people for the following things: Mr. Sullivan for being our adviser; Mrs. Sullivan for being our errand-running person, Mr. Palm, our representative from American Yearbook Company; Marchand's Everett Camera for our Senior Portraits, Photo Equipment, Mid-Winter Concert pictures and color processing; Kyle Buslach for the use of his MTHS Hawk design; Rick Hall for his artwork; Richard Foster and Dave Lowe for being Special Assignment Photographers; Mr. Garner for the game passes for our photographers; the coaches for their cooperation with photos and statistics; Pam Rock for running errands and doing odd jobs; special thanks to Bruce Bart, TEMPO '70's head photographer, for all the extra hours he put in towards the production of this book, and all the others who are too many to mention.

Scott,
Don't forget History and the great fun we had when Mr. Beesley was gone. How fun this summer and don't get to many girls into trouble.
Love,
Mary
